Parkinson Speaks Here Wed. Night

Professor C. Northcote Parkinson, noted educator, historian, author, and originator of Parkinson's Law, will explain to University students and faculty the reasons why ". . . the more money you make, the more money you spend."

Guest speaker for the University Lecture Series, Professor Parkinson will speak at 8:15 tomorrow night in Westcott Auditorium on the subject "Professor C. Northcote Parkinson explains Parkinson's Law."

This law states that work expands to met the time and personnel available for its completion, and it is pertinent to people of all walks of life. It first appeared in The London Economist and was later published in book form in 1957.

PROFITS

Parkinson's second theory appeared in another book, The Law and the Profits, and it explains the theory that expenses rise to meet and even to surpass income.

Dr. Parkinson

In his lecture at FSU, the professor will explain how he discovered his laws and discuss some of his other deductions, such as the cocktail party method of personnel selections, and how to manage or mis-manage your personal finances.

Parkinson's humorous analyses of the laws governing business operations in corporations and in smaller units, such as families have made him a favorite of European and American audiences.

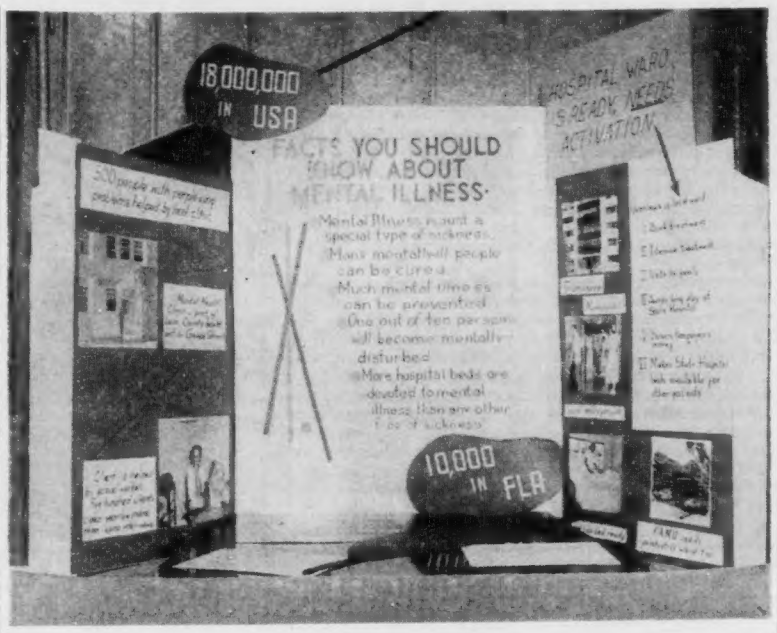
Reaver Talks On Job's God



The late Swiss phychologist and psychiatrist, Carl Gustav Jung, presents a "logical and consistent" view of God, superior to that of Archibald MacLeish in the play J.B., according to Dr. J. Russell Reaver, who will be the English Coffee Hour speaker at Westminster House Friday, at 4 p.m.

"Job's God: The Views of MacLeish and Jung" will be the subject of Dr. Reever's talk. The public is invited to the lecture-social hour and the discussion this week is expected to be of special interest to students in the humanities, where the Book of Job is studied, as well as to students of recent American literature.

"MacLeish, I believe, fails to present a consistent view of God in his play, while Jung's theory, though it may not be acceptable to everyone, at least is logical and consistent," said Reaver. He compares MacLeish's J.B. and Jung's phychological book, Answer to Job.

Dr. Reaver, associate professor of English at FSU, is the author of a book, published several years ago, Emerson As Mythmaker, in which he utilizes some of Jung's theories in interpreting Emerson's poetry. In December he read a paper on "Emerson's Use of Proverbs" at a meeting of the American Folklore Society at the University of Texas.

He is the co-author of articles on such contemporary writers as William Faulkner and Thomas Wolfe; the co-author of The Humanities in Contemporary Life; and the co-author of Fundamentals of Folk Literature which is to be published in the spring by Anthropological Publications in Holland.

FSU Students Make Mental Health Exhibit

An exhibit, built for the Leon County Mental Health Association by Florida State University public relations students is now on display at the Leon Federal Savings and Loan Association.

The exhibit was constructed as a class project in an advanced course in public relations by John Rogers, Ralph Crawley and Jorge Gomez.

The project was directed by Rogers, Crawley did some of the photography and Gomez did the artwork and lettering.

The students, working under Dr. Sidney Kobre, professor of public relations, put more than 50 hours of work into the exhibit.

The exhibit features the work of the Leon County Mental Health Clinic. One part of the exhibit is directed at the need for the activation of the phychiatric ward at Tallahassee Memorial Hospital. The ward is ready for patients, but a staff psychiatrist is needed before it can be opened. Another panel features facts about mental health and the possibility of preventing mental illness.

The display includes a large picture of Dr. David Levine, professor of social welfare at FSU, who is president of the local mental health group.

'Peel' Editor Gives Ideas On Magazines

A campus houmor magazine should provide entertainment. It's purpose is to "satirize the foibles and shortcomings of a large University and the State legislature."

According to Jack Horan, editor of the University of Florida's humor publication the Orange Peel, a magazine of that type should fulfill this role.

Horan was in Tallahassee this weekend for a reserve meeting. While in town, he visited the various publications on the Florida State University campus as well as the publications laboratory.

A journalism major at the University of Florida as well as a staff member of the Florida Alligator, Horan began his work with publications doing cartoons for the Peel.

The Peel is published on the average of twice a semester with special issues devoted to important events like homecoming. With the advent of the trimester plan, Horan mentioned that publication would probably increase to about five regular issues during the year. Horan stated that a humor magazine loses its impact when published too often. He remarked that length is important in a magazine of that type and

Kuttler Suggests SG Back Law Test Aid

Questions were raised at Wednesday's Student Senate session when Men's Vice-President Carl Kuttler asked that Student Government give money for an English Dept. tutor to take the Princeton law exam in order to help prepare her students for it.

Men's Vice President Karl Kuttler introduced a resolution asking Student Body President Bobby Byrd to supply $10 from student activity funds so that the director of the English clinic might take the law examination of Princeton University.

"Sixty percent of Princeton's exam is now English," the vice president told the Senate.

And, if the FSU director could become more familiar with the principles which Princeton stresses, Florida State University students will make better marks on the test, he said.

Kuttler

Sen. Gerry Dobson and Sen. Ginny Boyd disagreed with Kuttler.

"Isn't this somewhat on the shady side?" Dobson asked, adding that no copies of the test are supposed to be distributed.

Only the principles would be stressed in class, not the actual questions, Kuttler said.

Students taking the course should supply the $10, Sen. Boyd said.

Agreeing with her, Sen. Dobson said that it would only cost the students about $.25 each.

Disagreeing with both of them, Kuttler pointed out that the Senate supplied money for publications and for "Know Your Student Government," but it wouldn't supply any money for academic

Greek Workshop Suggests Changes

Preschool Rush, 1 Night Weekends, De-emphasized Files Recommended

By SHARON GAUSE
Assistant News Editor

Recommendations for preschool rush, one-night sorority weekends, and de-emphasization of sorority test files will be among the changes in sorority schedules and plans suggested when Panhellenic Council meets tonight.

These recommendations are a result of the annual Panhellenic Workshop held in Longmire Saturday. Five discussion groups, covering rush, manual revision, Greek activities, scholarship and Greek service have compiled suggestions which will be presented by a representative of each of the five groups, to the Panhellenic Council tonight. The Council, will, in turn, study these suggestions and the possibilities of putting them into effect.

TRIMESTER

Most of the changes recommended by the groups were due to the inauguration of the trimester system in September.

The group on Greek Activities will suggest that intramural sports be limited to four major sports per year. Under this provision, there would be one sport each of the first two trimesters and two in the third. The "doubling up" in the third trimester is due to the fact that the summer session will be split into two sessions.

Most of the decisions made by the group discussing activities were made in view of a strong emphasis on academics, reported Scarlett Pogue.

3 WEEKENDS

The group hopes to see sorority weekends limited to one night. Next year, due to the present schedule of activities, only three weekends will be open in which to include all the fraternity and sorority weekends for the year. This will involve a total of thirty-six Greek organizations and an average of twelve parties per weekend.

Greek Week, normally a part of the second semester will be recommended to be moved into the first term of the third trimester.

No definite decisions were made by the committee concerning decorations for both Homecoming and Circus weekends. However, it was suggested that under the trimester system, it would be necessary to limit the amount of decorating undertaken by each individual organization. Ideas allowing either house or float decorations, but not both, were among those included in the discussion.

The discussion group covering rush, headed by Jan Blackwell wtih co-chairman Sookie Sharrotk, will present to Panhellenic a recommendation that formal rush be held during orientation week.

This group devoted much of its time to a discussion concerning rush advisors. Mrs. Edith Stallings. Dean of Women at the University of Georgia spoke to those present, explaining the system of rush arvisors used by her university.

RUSH ADVISERS

Rush advisers at Florida State University, are sorority members who explain the rules and regulations of formal rush to rushees and also take groups of rushees around to the sorority houses during the formal receptions.

At the University of Georgia, reported Dean Stallings, the rush advisers move into the dormitories during formal rush and take a more personal interest in the individual rushee and her problems and decisions. During this time the adviser has absolutely no contact with her own sorority.

After hearing Dean Stallings report the committee on rush chose to recommend to Panhellenic that further investigation be made into the University of Georgia rush advisor program.

The adoption of open ruch instead of formal rush now practiced at FSU was considered and defeated by a close vote. The discussion group also made suggestions concerning the information to be placed on the IBM cards which will possibly be used during rush next year.

SCHOLARSHIP

The scholarship workshop led Saturday by Wynn Thornton and Anne Calvert will present for consideration recommendations to de-emphasize the use of sorority test files due to the fact that they are both out of date and create bad relations between Greeks and non-Greeks.

They will further suggest that a plan of preschool rush be adopted to save grades under the grade averages taken by the trimester system. The committee hopes to see sorority overall year rather than by the semester as they are presently. If the committees suggestions are accepted, pledgeship, now covering the two semester year, will be restricted to two trimesters.

The group discussing Greek Service will not submit many recommendations to Panhellenic. Instead, said Joan Ojala, co-chairman of the group, the benefits gained by those present were through a sharing of problems and suggestions in organizing service project..

PUBLICITY

Of main importance in accomplishments by the group was the establishment of a type of

Dr. Irvin Talks For Luncheon

Dr. Keith W. Irwin will be the guest speaker at the Faculty Luncheon in the Trophy Room at 12:30 today.

His topic will be the "National Faculty Christian Fellowship: Its Past, Present and Future."

Dr. Irwin will also speak at 7 p.m. in Longmire about "Christian Faith and Academic Disciplines."

Dr. Irwin, who received his Ph.D. at the University of Minnesota, has been an instructor at Garret Biblical Institute, Assistant Professor of religion and philosophy and Chaplain at Hamline University and last year was an Associate Professor of Philosophy at Florida Presbyterian University.

Serving as a part-time minister at Osceola Methodist Church in 1958, Dr. Irwin completed work on his doctorate. He is also an ordained Elder in the Methodist Church.

Dr. Irwin was the co-author of Worship and the Arts in 1953. He has published numerous articles in Mature, Inter-Collegian and Young People. He also serves as editor of the FCF Bulletin and is Associate Editor of the Christian Scholar.

Because of his work, Dr. Irwin has traveled extensively. In 1953 he was a U. S. delegate to the Christian Fellowship Convention in Nasrapur, India, and in 1959 he was a delegate to a convention at St. Annes' College in Oxford, London.

Telltale Beach Helps Date Old Sea Level

A SOIL AUGER'S LOAD OF PEAT TAKEN FROM FIVE FEET UNDERGROUND IS unloaded here by geologists John Bates, left, of Coastal Petroleum Co. and Dr. W. F. Tanner of FSU. The peat, after separation from mineral impurities in the miner's pan (lower left) has been sent off for radio-carbon dating. The carbon 14-dating will tell the age of an old beach, now five feet beneath sea level, which a few thousand years ago formed Florida's Gulf shoreline, and which was formed contemporaneously with the peat deposit of same depth.

A telltale beach preserved for centuries under Gulf waters untouched by wave action is helping two geologists date a period when the ocean around the Florida peninsula was five feet lower than at present.

Lying five feet below mean sea level, the ridge of sand falls off one or two feet landward and six to eight feet seaward a mile off the Taylor County coastline—not far from the site of a saltworks reputed to be the largest supplying the Confederacy.

A 25-mile-long stretch of this coast which is under study by Dr. W. F. Tanner of Florida State University and John Bates of Coastal Petroleum Co. is so low in wave action that it is classified as a zero energy coast, meaning the water is almost unruffled.

FOUR YEARS AGO

Tanner first came upon the coastal strip about four years ago while taking a group of graduate students on a field trip. He soon realized such a coast would furnish an ideal laboratory for study of past ages when the sea level was lower.

Other data indicate, Tanner says, that the period when the beach existed as Florida's shoreline was about 4,000 years ago. Something like 20,000 years ago, he said, the sea level was even much (about 400 feet) lower, and the sea level has been rising in a fluctuating manner since then.

Bates, whose company is interested in finding heavy minerals, joined Tanner in a research effort and the two of them have explored not only this zero energy coastal strip but much of the coast between Cedar Key and Apalachicola. Coastal Petroleum Co. is paying for most of the work.

AERIAL PHOTOS

The pair have worked from aerial photographs which show the old beach in a light shade like a line of breakers far offshore. The scientists next explored by boat to document the existence of the beach, which they found about five feet below mean sea level.

Next, in order to date the beach, they began to take core samples of the peat deposits from nearby spots inland. Some of these, measuring usually several feet deep down to bedrock, were built up at the time the beach was formed and those five feet below sea level should be contemporaneous with the beach sands, Tanner said.

Samples from five feet below sea level have been sent off to a Houston laboratory of Humble Oil Co. for radio carbon dating. Another Humble lab at Denver already has established from pollen grains and spores that the peat was deposited from land vegetation. The carbon 14-dated samples are expected back in late March.

SOIL AUGER

Bates and Tanner have been using a soil auger operated by hand like a giant brace and bit to retrieve the samples. Cores have been taken not only along the Taylor County coast but at various places around the Big Bend of the Florida coast.

A Taylor County saltworks which was in operation along the Warrior River, a few miles south of the Fenholloway, a hundred years ago provided a heavy flow of salt to the Confederacy. It was able to operate for some time unmolested by Federal gunboats which raided other saltworks along the coast. The shoal waters which helped preserve the old beach also made it difficult to get a sizable landing party ashore.

Finally, however, on a frosty day in February, 1864, the saltworks met its doom and about $2 million in property was seized or destroyed. One party of about 100 from the U.S.S. Tahoma made its way through the woods to surprise the saltworks and another of 20 in two boats waded for hundreds of yards to shore in 29 degree weather.

Services To Be Held Tues. For James Richardson

Memorial services will be held today for James Richardson, a former Florida State University student, at 3 p.m. at the Episcopal Chapel of the Resurrection.

Reverend Roger Steinhauer will officiate and University Chaplain John J. Carey will read the lesson.

James Richardson died last week of encephalitis. Funeral Services were held at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Jacksonville yesterday at 2 p. m.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James P. Richardson of Jacksonville, Fla.

Richardson came to FSU from Lee High School of Jacksonville to major in music. He had recently been awarded a graduate assistantship in the School of Music.

According to Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby, Richardson was a personal friend. Dean Oglesby described Richardson as a "quiet, far-above-average student with very high personal ideals."

The tall Gothic windows decorating both the inside and outside of the lounge of the Education building, are a contribution of the Student Art Teacher's Association (SATA).

The windows, made of colored tissue paper, comprise the work of the SATA on Christmas decorations for the campus.

An organziation of Art Education majors, the SATA has as its purpose; to provide the members with a means to practice what they learn in their classes, to become better acquainted with each other and to keep up to date on Art Education news.

Later in this school year, this organization will auction art work done by students and professors on this campus in order to become better known as well as to earn money for future projects.

Physical Fitness Being Studied For Comparison

The physical fitness of 371 Florida boys, aged 6 to 18, will soon be laid on the line against that of their counterparts in Europe and South Africa.

Dr. Marcel Hebbelinck, a visiting research associate at Florida State University who has been gathering data on the boys, all enrolled in the University School, predicts some lag in physical skills will be found in favor of the boys in Europe and South Africa.

The Tallahassee boys, who are considered a good representative American sample, have performed rather better, however, than other youth in the United States who have taken similar tests.

The results of these first physical fitness tests came out a few years ago, showing American youth were "softer" than those in Switzerland, Austria, and Italy (Kraus-Weber test of Minimum Muscular Fitness) and recently in Japan, Great Britain and Denmark (Physical Fitness Tests).

The alarm expressed included strong statements by President Dwight Eisenhower and later by President John F. Kennedy on the need for more physical fitness.

Hebbelinck, who is from Belgium, thinks American "automation, cars and T.V."—all implying a kind of "let's you do it" physical posture—are to blame. He sees the need for more methodology in physical education programs and more "educational" exercises.

Dr. Hebbelinck thinks the emphasis on fitness may be having some effect. At any rate the University School boys turned in good performances on all tests—the broad jump, high jump, 50-yard dash, hand grip, sit-ups, pull-ups, and lung tests of vital capacity and especially good performances on throwing a softball.

INTEREST IN BASEBALL

The last is the one skill in which American youths have been found to exceed Europeans, an indication, he says, of the interest in baseball in this country. During the University School tests some fabulous performances were recorded, one 16-year-old throwing the ball 260 feet.

Hebbelinck's studies dug into a somewhat younger age group than previous American studies, which have concentrated on children 10 to 18. He added two tests also—the hand grip and vital capacity. In addition to recording physical performance with a series of tests given on the athletic field he also has recorded body (anthropometric) measurement and, in the case of elementary school children, has obtained IQ scores for correlation.

The next step is processing some 1,500 correlations on FSU's new IBM 709 computer. After this information is in hand next month Hebbelinck will write a paper on some phases of the study for the Research Quarterly of the American Association of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation and the Magazine Child Development.

Later he'll compare the Tallahassee group with youngsters in Belgium, Norway and in South Africa. He already has obtained data on these.

Dr. Hebbelinck has been making tests of the kind for about four years but at FSU he put to use for the first time several new pieces of equipment in the recently activated Research Laboratory in Tully Gymnasium, directed by Dr. Harry Campney of the Physical Education and Recreation Dept.

In collaboration with Dr. Peter Everett of the department another series of tests will be completed using a sample of 60 college physical education majors. Two women graduate students soon will be put to work on the physical fitness of girls in the University School and of college women physical education majors and non-majors.

LEAVING TOMORROW

Hebbelinck himself is leaving the campus tomorrow after four months here. After visiting some 20 universities in the East and Midwest he will return to Belgium, where his permanent assignment is with the University of Ghent as research fellow of Belgium's National Foundation for Scientific Research.

He received all three of his degrees from Ghent including his doctorate last year, and he has been on the faculty for four years as a research associate in pharmacodynamics. He has studied also at the Universities of Oslo and Helsinki and for the four months before coming to FSU he was an exchange scholar in South Africa. His travel to the United States was paid for with a Fulbright grant.

Hebbelinck is an expert at rowing. He was a member of the rowing team which for three years held the national championship in Belgium. His wife, an elementary school teacher on leave, has helped him with some of the research undertaken at FSU.

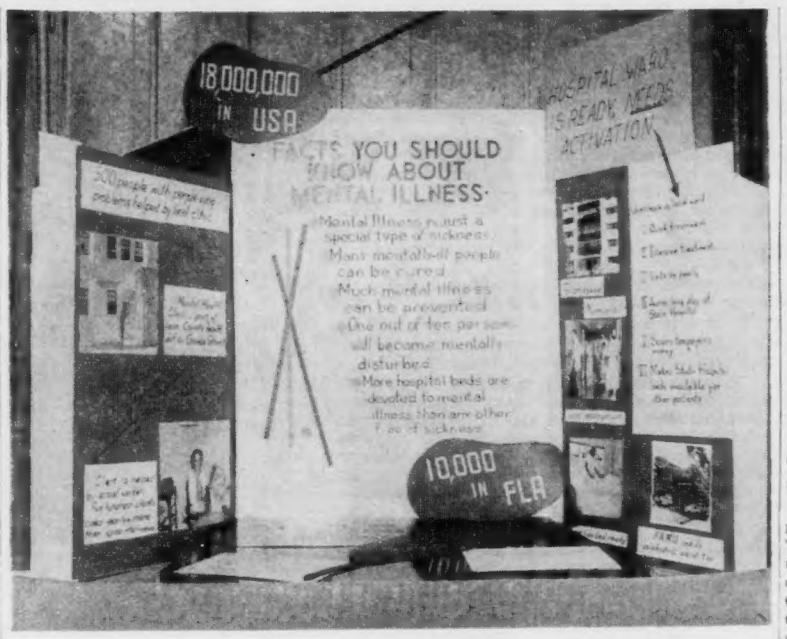
Reaver Talks On Job's God



The late Swiss phychologist and psychiatrist, Carl Gustav Jung, presents a "logical and consistent" view of God, superior to that of Archibald MacLeish in the book J.B., according to Dr. J. Russell Reaver, who will be the English Coffee Hour speaker at Westminster House Friday, at 4 p.m.

"Job's God: The Views of MacLeish and Jung" will be the subject of Dr. Reever's talk. The public is invited to the lecture-coffee hour and the discussion that week is expected to be of special interest to students in the humanities, where the Book of Job is studied, as well as to students of recent American literature.

"MacLeish, I believe, fails to present a consistent view of God in his play, while Jung's theory, though it may not be acceptable to everyone, at least is logical and consistent," said Reaver. He compares MacLeish's J.B. and Jung's phychological book, Answer to Job.

Dr. Reaver, associate professor of English at FSU, is the author of a book, published several years ago, Emerson As Mythmaker, in which he utilizes some of Jung's theories in interpreting Emerson's poetry. In December he read a paper on "Emerson's Use of Proverbs" at a meeting of the American Folklore Society at the University of Texas.

He is the co-author of articles on such contemporary writers as William Faulkner and Thomas Wolfe; the co-author of The Humanities in Contemporary Life; and the co-author of Fundamentals of Folk Literature which is to be published in the spring by Antropological Publications in Holland.

FSU Students Make Mental Health Exhibit

An exhibit, built for the Leon County Mental Health Association by Florida State University public relations students is now on display at the Leon Federal Savings and Loan Association.

The exhibit was constructed as a class project in an advanced course in public relations by John Rogers, Ralph Crawley and Jorge Gomez.

The project was directed by Rogers, Crawley did some of the photography and Gomez did the artwork and lettering.

The students, working under Dr. Sidney Kobre, professor of public relations, put more than 50 hours of work into the exhibit.

The exhibit features the work of the Leon County Mental Health Clinic. One part of the exhibit is directed at the need for the activation of the phychiatric ward at Tallahassee Memorial Hospital. The ward is ready for patients, but a staff psychiatrist is needed before it can be opened. Another panel features facts about mental health and the possibility of preventing mental illness.

The display includes a large picture of Dr. David Levine, professor of social welfare at FSU, who is president of the local mental health group.

'Peel' Editor Gives Ideas On Magazines

A campus houmor magazine should provide entertainment. It's purpose is to "satirize the foibles and shortcomings of a large University and the State legislature."

According to Jack Horan, editor of the University of Florida's humor publication the Orange Peel, a magazine of that type should fulfill this role.

Horan was in Tallahassee this weekend for a reserve meeting. While in town, he visited the various publications on the Florida State University campus as well as the publications laboratory.

A journalism major at the University of Florida as well as a staff member of the Florida Alligator, Horan began his work with publications doing cartoons for the Peel.

The Peel is published on the average of twice a semester with special issues devoted to important events like homecoming. With the advent of the trimester plan, Horan mentioned that publication would probably increase to about five regular issues during the year. Horan stated that a humor magazine loses its impact when published too often. He remarked that length is important in a magazine of that type and

Questions were raised at Wednesday's Student Senate session when Men's Vice-President Carl Kuttler asked that Student Government give money for an English Dept. tutor to take the Princeton law exam in order to help prepare her students for it.

Men's Vice President Karl Kuttler introduced a resolution asking Student Body President Bobby Byrd to supply $10 from student activity funds so that the director of the English clinic might take the law examination of Princeton University.

"Sixty percent of Princeton's exam is now English," the vice president told the Senate.

And, if the FSU director could become more familiar with the principles which Princeton stresses, Florida State University students will make better marks on the test, he said.

Kuttler

Sen. Gerry Dobson and Sen. Ginny Boyd disagreed with Kuttler.

"Isn't this somewhat on the shady side?" Dobson asked, adding that no copies of the test are supposed to be distributed.

Only the principles would be stressed in class, not the actual questions, Kuttler said.

Students taking the course should supply the $10, Sen. Boyd said.

Agreeing with her, Sen. Dobson said that it would only cost the students about $.25 each.

Disagreeing with both of them, Kuttler pointed out that the Senate supplied money for publications and for "Know Your Student Government," but it wouldn't supply any money for academic

Greek Workshop Suggests Changes

Preschool Rush, 1 Night Weekends, De-emphasized Files Recommended

By SHARON GAUSE
Assistant News Editor

Recommendations for preschool rush, one-night sorority weekends, and de-emphasization of sorority test files will be among the changes in sorority schedules and plans suggested when Panhellenic Council meets tonight.

These recommendations are a result of the annual Panhellenic Workshop held in Longmire Saturday. Five discussion groups, covering rush, manual revision, Greek activities, scholarship and Greek service have compiled suggestions which will be presented by a representative of each of the five groups, to the Panhellenic Council tonight. The Council, will, in turn, study these suggestions and the possibilities of putting them into effect.

TRIMESTER

Most of the changes recommended by the groups were due to the inauguration of the trimester system in September.

The group on Greek Activities will suggest that intramural sports be limited to four major sports per year. Under this provision, there would be one sport each of the first two trimesters and two in the third. The "doubling up" in the third trimester is due to the fact that the summer session will be split into two sessions.

Most of the decisions made by the group discussing activities were made in view of a strong emphasis on academics, reported Scarlett Pogue.

3 WEEKENDS

The group hopes to see sorority weekends limited to one night. Next year, due to the present schedule of activities, only three weekends will be open in which to include all the fraternity and sorority weekends for the year. This will involve a total of thirty-six Greek organizations and an average of twelve parties per weekend.

Greek Week, normally a part of the second semester will be recommended to be moved into the first term of the third trimester.

No definite decisions were made by the committee concerning decorations for both Homecoming and Circus weekends. However, it was suggested that under the trimester system, it would be necessary to limit the amount of decorating undertaken by each individual organization. Ideas allowing either house or float decorations, but not both, were among those included in the discussion.

The discussion group covering rush, headed by Jan Blackwell wtih co-chairman Sookie Sharrotk, will present to Panhellenic a recommendation that formal rush be held during orientation week.

This group devoted much of its time to a discussion concerning rush advisors. Mrs. Edith Stallings, Dean of Women at the University of Georgia spoke to those present, explaining the system of rush arvisors used by her university.

RUSH ADVISERS

Rush advisers at Florida State University, are sorority members who explain the rules and regulations of formal rush to rushees and also take groups of rushees around to the sorority houses during the formal receptions.

At the University of Georgia, reported Dean Stallings, the rush advisers move into the dormitories during formal rush and take a more personal interest in the individual rushee and her problems and decisions. During this time the adviser has absolutely no contact with her own sorority.

After hearing Dean Stallings report the committee on rush chose to recommend to Panhellenic that further investigation be made into the University of Georgia rush advisor program.

The adoption of open ruch instead of formal rush now practiced at FSU was considered and defeated by a close vote. The discussion group also made suggestions concerning the information to be placed on the IBM cards which will possibly be used during rush next year.

SCHOLARSHIP

The scholarship workshop led Saturday by Wynn Thornton and Anne Calvert will present for consideration recommendations to de-emphasize the use of sorority test files due to the fact that they are both out of date and create bad relations between Greeks and non-Greeks.

They will further suggest that a plan of preschool rush be adopted to save grades under the grade averages taken by the trimester system. The committee hopes to see sorority overall year rather than by the semester as they are presently. If the committees suggestions are accepted, pledgeship, now covering the two semester year, will be restricted to two trimesters.

The group discussing Greek Service will not submit many recommendations to Panhellenic. Instead, said Joan Ojala, co-chairman of the group, the benefits gained by those present were through a sharing of problems and suggestions in organizing service project.

PUBLICITY

Of main importance in accomplishments by the group was the establishment of a type of

Dr. Irvin Talks For Luncheon

Dr. Keith W. Irwin will be the guest speaker at the Faculty Luncheon in the Trophy Room at 12:30 today.

His topic will be the "National Faculty Christian Fellowship: Its Past, Present and Future."

Dr. Irwin will also speak at 7 p.m. in Longmire about "Christian Faith and Academic Disciplines."

Dr. Irwin, who received his Ph.D. at the University of Minnesota, has been an instructor at Garret Biblical Institute, Assistant Professor of religion and philosophy and Chaplain at Hamline University and last year was an Associate Professor of Philosophy at Florida Presbyterian University.

Serving as a part-time minister at Osceola Methodist Church in 1958, Dr. Irwin completed work on his doctorate. He is also an ordained Elder in the Methodist Church.

Dr. Irwin was the co-author of Worship and the Arts in 1953. He has published numerous articles in Mature, Inter-Collegian and Young People. He also serves as editor of the FCF Bulletin and is Associate Editor of the Christian Scholar.

Because of his work, Dr. Irwin has traveled extensively. In 1953 he was a U. S. delegate to the Christian Fellowship Convention in Nasrapur, India, and in 1959 he was a delegate to a convention at St. Annes' College in Oxford, London.

Telltale Beach Helps Date Old Sea Level

A SOIL AUGER'S LOAD OF PEAT TAKEN FROM FIVE FEET UNDERGROUND IS UNloaded here by geologists John Bates, left, of Coastal Petroleum Co. and Dr. W. F. Tanner of FSU. The peat, after separation from mineral impurities in the miner's pan (lower left) has been sent off for radio-carbon dating. The carbon 14-dating will tell the age of an old beach, now five feet beneath sea level, which a few thousand years ago formed Florida's Gulf shoreline, and which was formed contemporaneously with the peat deposit of same depth.

A telltale beach preserved for centuries under Gulf waters untouched by wave action is helping two geologists date a period when the ocean around the Florida peninsula was five feet lower than at present.

Lying five feet below mean sea level, the ridge of sand falls off one or two feet landward and six to eight feet seaward a mile off the Taylor County coastline—not far from the site of a saltworks reputed to be the largest supplying the Confederacy.

A 25-mile-long stretch of this coast which is under study by Dr. W. F. Tanner of Florida State University and John Bates of Coastal Petroleum Co. is so low in wave action that it is classified as a zero energy coast, meaning the water is almost unruffled.

FOUR YEARS AGO

Tanner first came upon the coastal strip about four years ago while taking a group of graduate students on a field trip. He soon realized such a coast would furnish an ideal laboratory for study of past ages when the sea level was lower.

Other data indicate, Tanner says, that the period when the beach existed as Florida's shoreline was about 4,000 years ago. Something like 20,000 years ago, he said, the sea level was even much (about 400 feet) lower, and the sea level has been rising in a fluctuating manner since then.

Bates, whose company is interested in finding heavy minerals, joined Tanner in a research effort and the two of them have explored not only this zero energy coastal strip but much of the coast between Cedar Key and Apalachicola. Coastal Petroleum Co. is paying for most of the work.

AERIAL PHOTOS

The pair have worked from aerial photographs which show the old beach in a light shade like a line of breakers far offshore. The scientists next explored by boat to document the existence of the beach, which they found about five feet below mean sea level.

Next, in order to date the beach, they began to take core samples of the peat deposits from nearby spots inland. Some of these, measuring usually several feet deep down to bedrock, were built up at the time the beach was formed and those five feet below sea level should be contemporaneous with the beach sands, Tanner said.

Samples from five feet below sea level have been sent off to a Houston laboratory of Humble Oil Co. for radio carbon dating. Another Humble lab at Denver already has established from pollen grains and spores that the peat was deposited from land vegetation. The carbon 14-dated samples are expected back in late March.

SOIL AUGER

Bates and Tanner have been using a soil auger operated by hand like a giant brace and bit to retrieve the samples. Cores have been taken not only along the Taylor County coast but at various places around the Big Bend of the Florida coast.

A Taylor County saltworks which was in operation along the Warrior River, a few miles south of the Fenholloway, a hundred years ago provided a heavy flow of salt to the Confederacy. It was able to operate for some time unmolested by Federal gunboats which raided other saltworks along the coast. The shoal waters which helped preserve the old beach also made it difficult to get a sizable landing party ashore.

Finally, however, on a frosty day in February, 1864, the saltworks met its doom and about $2 million in property was seized or destroyed. One party of about 100 from the U.S.S. Tahoma made its way through the woods to surprise the saltworks and another of 20 in two boats waded for hundreds of yards to shore in 29 degree weather.

H.E. Wotring Dies Dec. 31

Funeral services were held Wednesday morning for Herbert Erwin (Buddy) Wotring II, of Jacksonville, who died Sunday evening, Dec. 31, in a hospital there after an illness of several months.

Services were conducted by Perryman Denton, minister of Riverside Park Church of Christ in the chapel of Hardage and Sons Riverside Funeral Home in Jacksonville. Interment was in Oaklawn Cemetery.

Wotring was a senior at Florida State University, where he was active in campus activities and Student Government. He was a member of Men's Judiciary for two years and had been elected a senior Honor Court justice. He had served as parliamentarian and steward of Kappa Alpha social fraternity, of which he was a member.

Wotring was active in the Alpha Council and the Young Democrats. In 1960 he was named outstanding cadet in advanced Army ROTC.

In Jacksonville he was a member of the American Red Cross life-saving corps and was active in YMCA work, serving as a counselor at Camp Imokalee. He was born in Daytona Beach, had lived in Jacksonville for 18 years, where he was a member of Riverside Park Church of Christ.

He is survived by his mother, Mrs. Orline Mobley; his father, Herbert E. Wotring; a sister, Mrs. Logan Browning, Tampa; three grandparents, Mrs. E. S. Parrish, Delanc and Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Wotring, Terra Alta, W. Va.

Services To Be Held Tues. For James Richardson

Memorial services will be held today for James Richardson, a former Florida State University student, at 3 p.m. at the Episcopal Chapel of the Resurrection.

Reverend Roger Steinhauer will officiate and University Chaplain John J. Carey will read the lesson.

James Richardson died last week of encephalitis. Funeral Services were held at the Church of the Good Shepherd in Jacksonville yesterday at 2 p. m.

He is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. James P. Richardson of Jacksonville, Fla.

Richardson came to FSU from Lee High School of Jacksonville to major in music. He had recently been awarded a graduate assistantship in the School of Music.

Greeks Must Trim Sails

Florida State Greeks have begun to plan adjustment to the approaching Trimester System by scheduling workshops and discussion groups to hash out ideas. It is good that they are making an effort for a smooth transition, but the progress made by the Pan-Hellenic conference is certainly not sufficient to make change easy.

The recommendation for a preschool rush and the paring of intramural sports competition are the only changes of any real signifigance that the women have come up with. They have made no move to cut down on their mid-week social calendar, limit the number of derbies they participate in, or slice the number of hours spent in song practice and other trivial rehearsals. In short they have not trimmed their sails enough.

But the situation in the sororities is not nearly as acute as the fraternity situation, which will be studied next weekend at a similar meeting. Sororities have already learned that study must be emphasized and hold rigidly enforced study sessions. Fraternities do not; therefore, sororities characteristically top the All-Women's average while fraternities characteristically fall below the All-Men's mark.

This means that the men will have to take the lead in cutting. They face many of the same problems that the women have, but their situation is more acute. They can not afford the additional scholastic load as well.

The scholastic ramifications of the new system will be felt by all. Greeks would be wise to allow students to adjust to academic rigors before pledgeship and allow their membership to have time to cope with the increased load throughout the year.

About That Letter

Printed in the Flambeau "Letters" column is a letter from a group for which we have no sympathy, the Ku Klux Klan. We have always felt that the Klan is composed mainly of Southern rabble and that the association of this group with our area of the nation has been greatly detrimental to its growth and progress. We feel there is no place in an industrial, forward moving South for the Klan and its like.

THEN WHY HAVE we printed the letter? Simply because it represents a point of view that a college student is curious about. We feel that in an intellectual community points of view should be aired and judged for themselves. Mr. Carter Johnson, the signee, has presented his points in a calm manner that is free from libel or name-calling. It is opinion, not a hate letter, and therefore deserves print.

Our readers, however, deserves to know the entire contents of the letter —least they be taken in by its presentation. Included was a cheaply reproduced sheet containing three pictures showing Negroes and Caucasians in various stages of mixing. The copy compares the teaching of "racial pride" to honesty, modesty, and hygiene.

IT CLOSES WITH a challenge which is more typical of the Klan than Mr. Johnson's letter. Reproduced exactly as printed, the sheet says:

Will we the God give'n Whith Race stand idley by and allow the unsupreme to dictate our fate, or will we stand together and protect our self from the return to the Jungles,

IN THE PICTURES above you can and DO see Communism at work in its ugly attempt to mongrelize the Races, and turn the U.S.A. back into A Jungle of Immorality, Destruction of the pure White Race, Mongrelize, conquer, and enslave all the peoples.

Are you willing to help protect our GOD given heritage, and America from the Jungles, join with us, stand up and be counted."

We will not attempt to state the purpose of the Klan more clearly than their challenge has. College students appreciate the opportunity to judge what the Klan has to say—and all that it says. Our opinion of the Klan is confirmed.

La Dolce Vita

By LESLIE POWELL

La Dolce Vita, the Italian import film now downtown at the State, is a celluloid mirror. You may or may not identify with a particular character, but you can't very well help recognizing some of the characters that are weaving their spell about you for roughly three hours.

COLLEGE STUDENTS aren't likely to hunt for kicks with the opulence some of the Fellini characters had at their fingertips, but a college community is more or less bound to skirt the edges of "The Sweet Life." Too many of us are here merely to insure that one day we will be able to afford the luxuries that have led to the jaded appetites bared in La Dolce Vita.

Here, for a change, is a film that is more than a thin slice of bologna. This one gives you something in which to sink your mental teeth with every possibility that you will bite off a whale of a lot more than you can chew.

PRIMARILY, AT LEAST on the surface, La Dolce Vita (the sweet life), is a study of the ills of a modern world where too many persons with too much leisure search in discomfort and discontent for personal values. The affairs and jaded appetites of an Italian newsman are the double strands to which the episodic scenes are strung together.

To say that symbolism is rampant in La Dolce Vita is understatement. Similarities and parallels are thicker than the numerous characters in the screenplay. Each episode, each scene, each character has something to say. As at any time symbols come into use, the viewer himself must weigh the subtlties and decide what he'll take away with him. La Dolce Vita is the epitome of the film that can never really be interpreted to the satisfaction of its many viewers. There is just too much of it. If La Dolce Vita suffers a real flaw, it's over-abundance. Any real improvement would have to be careful editing to pare down the length.

QUITE A FEW PATRONS were heard complaining about the lack of "plot," which leaves us wondering what constitutes plot for the local crowd. There was "plot" enough for a baker's dozen films of quality—which, from this viewpoint, is the reason La Dolce Vita has the power and impact it possesses. It has not taken one narrow situation and carried the narrowing on to the narrowest possible conclusion. it is fantastic in its panorama of human dejection, dissipation, and disillusionment. Perhaps it shows that sometimes the lack of strength is the only real strength that permits us to survive. Certainly the film has an ugly beauty.

La Dolce Vita can be taken as an indictment of the entire western world. Care was taken to use an internauonal cast perhaps with a unity of applicability in mind.

PERFORMANCES WERE so uniformly good, one after the other, that inveterate American movie goers would remember the film if for no other reason other than the jumble of excellent characterizations heel to toe throughout a three hour film.

La Dolce Vita will be criticized for being episodic. It is, but it would have suffered greatly had the screenplay attempted to tie the various characters together in any way other than the use of the newsman . . .the only logical person to have been involved by contact with so many elements of a local society.

AS FOR THE BITTER complaints about the English subtitles we can only say that we are sorry for those who couldn't read English; the subtitles were there for the benefit of those of us who couldn't understand Italian.

We Solve Problems With Beer, Coffee

Queen Elizabeth II, the beloved monarch of the British Commonwealth, pronounced words which we, as youth, would be wise to consider thoughtfully.

In her Christmas message to the Commonwealth, her majesty stated solemnly, "It is natural that the young generation should lose patience with their elders for their seeming failure to bring some order and security to the world. But things will not get any better if young people merely express themselves by indifference or by revulsion against what they regard as an out-of-date order of things."

The message was obviously aimed at her subjects and referred particularly to the problems of the Isles. This surely struck home, for the British youth have not been the genteel people that Americans popularly consider citizens of England. Youthful riots, vandalism, and destruction have been as prominent and widespread in the Isles as in the U.S. and the British have experienced the effects of youths tanked with alcohol and Rock 'n Roll running near-wild.

The message meant for the British can well be applied to the youth across the Atlantic, for the reaction of youth to the multitude of problems in our complex world has been virtually identical.

This is an age when much is wrong. Wrongness has always been the case, but the present has brought forth technical accomplishments which have compounded the consequences of the evils and made mass self-destruction possible. Furthermore, the shrinking size of the world has made all problems, even those involving states, counties, or cities, have international consequence. We, the youth, have realized this, and realized this more graphically than our elders in many instances.

And what have we done about the problems. We have chosen to solve them with another can of beer. We have met the complex questions of our age by devising The Twist. We have used the vigor and genius of youth in the battlefields of Ft. Lauderdale and Daytona Beach. We have been quick to blame all troubles on Communists, President Kennedy, the State Department, the State Legislature, the University Administration, or Student Government. And we have chosen to blame in loud, adamant, ill-considered terms. We have screamed, and blamed, and protested, and danced, and drunk. The problems have remained with us.

* * * * *

A scant few of our generation, however, have come to grips with the problems of our times. The young men and women of the Peace Corps daily face these questions. The Florida State students who dealt with shrewd politicians in investigating the bond issue tackled a thorny issue. Students who work in outside jobs and student assistantships meet the problem of paying for a college education with something more than discussion. These students have little time for coffee or beer, discussion or escape.

These students have one characteristic that bonds them together and separates them from great droves of their contemporaries—and that is action. The problem-facers devote their energies to meeting questions instead of only discussing or avoiding them.

There is a lesson we can all learn from them. Discussion and relaxation is fine but they do not produce end results. Action must follow discussion and precede relaxation. Queen Elizabeth II failed to say what would "make things better," but those who have followed a course of more work and less talk supply the answer.

All of us could profit by emulation in the weeks to come.

Syllabus

An Interesting Comparion

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

This is Russian Week at Stetson University. I should hasten to add that there has been no outbreak of Bolshevism on that safely- Baptist campus. Rather, the university is seeking to inform its students and staff about Communism and the USSR To do this they have invited five men who are said to be nationally known scholars in this field. They are Drs. Earl Swisher and Serge Zenkovsky of the University of Colorado. Dr. Ralph Fisher of the University of Illinois, Dr. Cyril Black of Princeton, and Dr. Michael Petrovich of the University of Wisconsin. They will speak on a variety of topics ranging from "Soiet Society Today" to "The Future of Soviet-Chinese Relations." Aided by a small grant from the Danforth Foundation, the project is under the direction of Dr. Evans Johnson, a political science professor at Stetson.

HOW INTERESTING it is to compare what Stetson is doing in this field to the efforts of the Florida State University to educate its students regarding communism. Stetson has its "Russian Institute Week;" we have our "Project Awake." They have five nationally known authorities; we have an assistant housing director and former coach directing our program. They have lectures; we have the films "Communist Encirclement" and Operation Abobition." They presumably have informed speakers: we have Leon County Representative Dick Mitchell. They have facts; we have right-wing propaganda. They receive education; we receive indoctrination.

Now Stetson is a fine institution but it is not yet rated as exactly the leading liberal arts college in the nation. It is disheartening, therefore, when Florida State is so obviously outdone in such a vital area. It need not be so. We have on our own faculty men whose background qualifies them in the field of Soviet affairs as well as any man who is speaking to the institute at Stetson. Dr. George A. Lensen recently returned from a year in the Soviet Union. Dr. Victor Mamatey has won several prizes for his book on central European history Dr. J. R. Skretting is preparing the course which Florida high school students will receive on the subject of "Communism versus Americanism." No doubt there are others similarly qualified to discuss both Communism and the Soviet Union. Furthermore all have at various times shown a generous willingness to speak. Often it is a refreshing change from the daily assault upon impregnable ignorance of freshman history students. With such distinguished scholars available, why is "Project Awake' importing propagandistic films which have been shown to be in error? Or does "Project Awake" wish to educate rather than indoctrinate? Time will tell.

One Wonders what future treats are in store for the FSU student body. Perhaps Dr. Fred Schwarz, an Australian who is somehow an expert on "Americanism," will be next. Maybe Herbert Philbrick, who led three lives, will give us "the inside story." Perhaps General Edwin Walker will appear, with an honor guard of 3,000 ROTC cadets on hand to escort the hero from the segregated bus station to the segregated campus, where he can explain democracy to us. Perhaps Daddy Warbucks will materialize and step out of the pages of the Tallahassee Democrat to deliver his pearls of wisdom. Who Knows?

One Thing I do know: FSU students are being cheated. The "Project Awake" farce is but one aspect of a larger problem. During the coming semester I expect to delve into other aspects.

The Benefits Of Sidewise Thinking

By BONNIE FREEDMAN

Ah, Christmas vacation—a time to do many things. It is a time to make new plans: .

"GREETINGS, parents dears. Did you make a reservation for me to get back to school?"

"Sorry, dear, we couldn't. Guess you'll have to take a bus back."

THIS IS A TIME to look up old friends: "Is Mike home from school yet?" "Is he home yet? He got home three days ago, and doesn't have to be back for another three weeks. He goes to the University of Florida, you know." And meet new ones: "Do you go to Florida State? Then you MUST know Circe Smith."

This is a time for homecooked meals:

"Well, our food system at school is unique. It's called Morrison's, and is preparing us for life in times of crisis."

AND A CHANCE to relax:

"Isn't that nice, dear? The high school wants you to help out with the Christmas pageant. I told them you'd be happy to, of course."

Vacation gave the chance to sleep late:

"Hey, sis—wake up! Bet you haven't seen a sunset like this in years!" and go to bed early:

"I'LL GET TO bed as soon as this late-late movie is over, Dad. We don't watch much television up there."

Vacation was a time to lose one's patience with a little brother, twice, to spend two hundred and thirty-seven hours in the library trying to write three term papers and catch up in math, and forget all about packing that sweater that was to get us through the rest of Tallzhassee's Indian summer, but I don't care—I'm still glad it came!

Is Emphasis Today On Research?

TO THE EDITOR:

As a member of your State Board of Education, I am vitally interested in the development and maintenance of quality education in our institutions of higher learning. In order to achieve quality education in our universities, one of the factors that we must consider is the proper relationship of instruction to research and service. One comment that I have heard time and time again is that the emphasis today is on research (and too often on quantity rather than quality) and service at the expense of instruction. A recent edition of the Wall Street Journal carried the following comments by Carroll V. Newsome, President of New York University:

"As a matter of fact, a large number of scholars in a truly modern university should be involved in elaborate programs of research. But the situation that has developed in recent decades, at least in some institutions of higher learning, has not been conducive to the development of a sound educational program.

"Teaching has become secondary in some university departments, for a substantial number of professors, especially the younger ones, have little interest in teaching as well as limited understanding of its programs. They have been educated only to pursue highly specialized investigations in restricted fields of knowledge. The most trivial studies are, in fact, designated as research.

"Some young professors then publish innumerable articles on their findings—to complicate further the problems of our libraries —for they believe (and they may be right in the case of some institutions) that, in determining an individual faculty member's salary and academic rank, administrators count 'the number of lines of print' that he produces.

"The title 'Research Man' has become a badge of respect on university campuses, and, irrespective of his ability to do meritorious research, the person seeking such a designation frequently expects special and unreasonable dispensations. Teaching assignments for him may become especially onerous, and he may complain bitterly if he is assigned a 'normal teaching load.'

"This situation is a modern phenomenon. Of course, special provision should be made for competent teachers who are also research men of genuine distinction, and there are some in every great university. But the fact remains that the really great scholars and research men of history, those who have made major contributions to human knowledge, usually had great companies of students—young scholars who enjoyed the opportunity of debating with 'the master.'"

Please be assured that I support wholeheartedly the need for research activities in our universities as an essential function of any good institution of higher learning. We cannot progress unless we delve into the unknown. At the same time, however, unless the heritage of the past plus the discoveries of today are communicated effectively to students through the instructional process, research may be for naught.

Perhaps you would be willing to bring this subject to the attention of your faculty and students and ask them to evaluate your institution in the light of President Newsom's comments. It would be most helpful to me if I could have the benefit of their reactions. The only way that I can carry out my responsibilities properly and effectively as a member of your State Board of Education is to know and to understand what is taking place in education in Florida today. With kindest regards, I remain

Letter From The KK Klan

TO THE EDITOR:

As a long time opponent of everything Mr. Sanchez seems to stand for, and since I do not have a column in your paper I am taking this opportunity to speak up for the principles and beliefs of those I represent.

To begin with, the people of this region are not nearly so hypocritical as he would have us believe. Their conservative newspaper ("undoubtedly the best daily published in Tallahassee," to quote a quip) adequately reflects their viewpoints on all matters of a political nature. Certainly the majority in town approve of it, so the natural question brought to mind is: Is Sanchez, who so ardently defends "democracy," trying to reform the people against their will? Sounds like Mao Tse-tung, Castro, Tito, Roosevelt and other "reformers."

The people of the South want to curb the power of the federal government, they do not want to be controlled by the Supreme Court, they want to provide their own educational institutions and public facilities. Likewise, they should be guaranteed their right to control these facilities. What is wrong with wating to pay your own way? If anyone needs federal aid it is probably Metropolitan New York where the schools are on double shifts and juvenile delinquency is so rampant.

At the present time, we in the South are opposed to racial integration. I can almost hear those cries of "bigotry" and "prejudice." This is however simply not the case. Currently the living level of the Negro in America is considerably below that of the greater mass of the Caucasoid elements in this country. This is of course, not entirely his fault and we as much as anyone, desire to see this situation improved, for our own good as well as the Negroes'.

It would probably be superfluous to Mr. Sanchez if we tried to invoke tradition and age old custom as further reason for maintaining segregation in our schools. Nevertheless, they are factors.

For this chance to express ourselves, we are grateful indeed. As to whether or not you will print it, that is your option. We did not intend to "reform" Mr. Sanchez with one letter, but we would appreciate it if he would stop trying to equate conservatism with reaction and patriotism with "fascism." Thank you.

They've Seen Miriam V. Is That Our Way?

TO THE EDITOR:

"Westcott Fountain Is Beautiful . . Sometimes" in the last issue (ED. NOTE: he refers to the Tuesday, Dec. 12 edition) of the Flambeau certainly caught my attention.

In this article you had an insert stating that five or ten dollars should be added to the entrance fee for every male student.

Don't you think that would be a bit unfair?

Those male students (or animals as you implied) who 'participate in the pool parties are by far the minority of the whole. Sure, you will always run across careless, inconsiderate, immature people. It is expected in an organization as large as Florida State University. But I believe, Mr. Editor, and you must agree, that punishing the majority for the misdeed of a few is not only unfair but un-American. Is that our way of life?

If it must be stopped, and I believe it should, why not fine those caught in the act? If they are fined, I think they will take Dean Loucks' suggestion. Isn't this more fair?

IVAN D. MARTINEZ

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Dean Loucks' suggestion for those who may have missed the article or forgotten it: pinned couples who would ordinarily be tossed in the pool might be hosed down on Landis Green).

Miriam V.

TO THE EDITOR:

We could not help but be impressed by the article by Robert Sanchez, The World of Miriam V., in the Dec. 15 issue of the Flambeau.

He emphasized well the resulting futility of human existence when the tragedy of mental illness strikes and a person is deprived of the intensive treatment given the physically ill.

Modern psychiatry is continuing to make great strides in providing effective means for diagnosis, treatment and readjustment. However, to the vast majority of patients at Chattahoochee, these are not available to any great degree for lack of personnel and facilities. As Mr. Sanchez pointed out, the staff of the hospital works diligently. The staff is so small, however, that patients in chronic treatment areas cannot receive much more than custodial care . . .

Many of these patients need personal contacts and must be motivated to participate in such activities (ed. note: group and individual therapy). We . . . see many persons such as Miriam V. whose talents are now of no benefit to mankind . . .

So much has been done to advance the whole field of mental health, but still it seems as if only the surface has been scratched. Public apathy is criminal. More sympathy is not dynamic enough to bring mental illness from a stigmatized, shamed event to one of acceptance, active treatment, and above all—prevention. We must demand and work for progress!

A GROUP OF SENIOR NURSING STUDENTS

FSU Favors Good Grades

For the past three years Florida State University has been admitting high school seniors with high academic records before they take the Senior Placement Test. This test is required of all persons seeking admission to the University.

According to Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby, University officials feel that an "A" and "B" high school record is the best method for judging superior students. "From past experience we have found that this is a reasonably safe method for judging the better students," he said.

Another reason for admitting students on such a basis is that this plan is attractive to the better students and thus, the number of superior students at the University is increased.

The advantage of the plan is in favor of the incoming freshmen. Housing assignments are not granted by the Housing Ofice until acceptance has been granted. An early acceptance will mean greater chances of receiving a room on campus

The Board of Control has approved this plan. However, accepted seniors must still take the Placement tests.

Asolo Theatre Begins Third Season In June

By JOHN JERKE
Flambeau Feature Writer

Taking its place as the only summer Restoration Comedy theatre in the United States, the Asolo theatre in Sarasota will begin its third season of restoration comedy as coming June.

Located in the Ringling Arts museum, this restored 18th century Italian theater has housed such favorities as Beggar's Opera and The Rivals during its first summer in 1960, and The Country Wife and She Stoops to Conquer this past season.

THEATRE SATIRE

Restoration comedy originated primarily in England, France and Italy during the seventeenth century and has been popular ever since. It is usually considered the best example of satirical work in the theatre, since the authors were hard at work describing the frivolity of life at their time with artificial, shallow, and risque characters. The very nature of these characters is risible and no superficial jokes are necessary to provoke the audience.

Abbie Mitchell, an undergraduate in English at Florida State University and presently in the theatre costume shop, has been in the past two Asolo festivals. Her first summer was spent in acting while the second found her assistant to the costumer. She explained that this season's program is scheduled as in the past with two to three days of tryouts and two or three weeks of rehearsals at FSU's Conradi Theatre and then to the Asolo from early July to mid-August.

Choices for the season's shows are based on tapes submitted as audition material during the first few days in Tallahassee and on tryouts during this period. In the midst of the selections and ensuing rehearsals, the company still manages to produce a show given in the Conradi Theatre.

CREDIT AND SCHOLARSHIPS

Students who participate in the Asolo Festival may, upon payment of summer school tuition to FSU, receive three, six, or nine semester hours credit. Some receive scholarships which cover their living expenses in Sarasota during the season.

After the few preliminary weeks in Tallahassee, the troupe of 30 to 35, including staff members, arrive in Lido Beach. Staying in apartments owned by Dr. and Mrs. E. Freeman, ex-professors at Columbia University, they begin their mingled life of theatre and housekeeping. Their transportation to Lido Beach is provided by University station wagons, while some members take their own cars as the luggage, props, costumes and scenery preceed them in a van.

Dr. Arthur H. Dorlag, associate professor of speech at FSU, is the director of the Asolo Festival, with Charles Reimer, assistant professor of speech, as the technical director. Sets and sliding scenery are prepared in the spring by Reimer and his staff, while costumes necessarily must wait until the casts are chosen.

RESPECTIVE SCHOOLS

Among those who were present the two previous years were Dr. Eberle Thomas, who received his doctorate from FSU and is now at the Montevallo Speech Dept., and Bob Strane, who did undergraduate work at FSU and is presently in the Yale Graduate School of Drama. Dr. Thomas and Strane contributed to the company in addition to their own talent by bringing actors from their respective schools.

Another member of this summer theatre has been Jai Chandiram, a University of Florida student from New Delhi, India. Faculty members from Rollins College and the Sarasota area have also contributed their time and talent. Carolyn Reeves and Mary Crawford, two FSU students, appeared as singers this past summer.

During the summer, the company presents shows on Wednesday afternoon and night, Friday and Saturday night and Saturday afternoon. The last two or three weeks of the season are devoted to repeat performances from their summer repertoire.

COMPLIMENTARY TICKETS

The cast is "treated marvelously" by the Ringling officials, said Miss Mitchell. Members receive complimentary tickets for the museum and each new member is provided with a "personalized" tour through the gallery and museum. Visitors who wend their way through the museum find their way to the Asolo Theatre while rehearsals are in progress and decide to spend the day.

The company meets its operating and living expenses from scheduled performances in Sarasota supplemented by funds from the FSU Speech Dept.

Peel'...

that one long issue is more effective than several short ones.

The staff of the Orange Peel represents varied interests and majors, Horan said. Few of the staff members are in the School of Journalism. However, at the University, basic news writing courses are available for non-journalism majors, especially for those who work on campus publications.

"The Orange Peel is largely uncensored," Horan stated. Its basic policy rests in "editorial discretion invested in the editor." Most of the issues are planned around a general theme. Contents of the magazine range from satirical editorials to the featured coed as well as the usual jokes and cartoons.

Usually the circulation averages 6,500 copies, but Horan plans to boost circulation to 8000 through new promotion techniques. Advance publicity will be another valuable aspect said Horan.

JACK HORAN, EDITOR OF The University of Florida's ORANGE PEEL and member of FLORIDA ALLIGATOR staff, pauses on a tour of the productions laboratory in Longmire Bldg. Horan was in Tallahassee for a reserve meeting.

RING IN THE NEW

Are you still writing "1961" on your papers and letters? I'll bet you are, you scamps! But I am not one to be harsh with those who forget we are in a new year, for I myself have long been guilty of the same lapse. In fact, in my senior year at college, I wrote 1873 on my papers until nearly November of 1874! (It turned out, incidentally, not to be such a serious error because, as we all know, 1874 was later repealed by President Chester A. Arthur in a fit of pique over the Black Tom Explosion. And, as we all know, Mr. Arthur later came to regret his hasty action. Who does not recall that famous meeting between Mr. Arthur and Louis Napoleon when Mr. Arthur said, "Lou, I wish I hadn't of repealed 1874." Whereupon the French emperor made his immortal rejoinder, "Tipi que nous et tyler tu." Well sir, they had many a good laugh about that, as you can imagine.)

But I digress. How can we remember to write 1962 on our papers and letters? Well sir, the best way is to find something memorable about 1962, something unique to fix it firmly in your mind. Happily, this is very simple because, as we all know, 1962 is the first year in history that is divisible by 2, by 4, and by 7. Take a pencil and try it: 1962 divided by 2 is 981; 1962 divided by 4 is 490-1/2; 1962 divided by 7 is 280-2/7. This mathematical curiosity will not occur again until the year 2079, but we will all be so busy then celebrating the Chester A. Arthur bi-centenary that we will scarcely have time to be writing papers and letters and like that.

Another clever little trick to fix the year 1962 in your mind is to remember that 1962 spelled backwards is 2691. "Year" spelled backwards is "raey." "Marlboro" spelled backwards is "oroblram." Marlboro smoked backwards is no fun at all. Kindly do not light the filter. What you do is put the filter end in your lips, then light the tobacco end, then draw, and then find out what pleasure, what joy, what rapture serene it is to smoke the filter cigarette with the unfiltered taste. In 1962, as in once and future years, you'll get a lot to like in a Marlboro—available in soft pack and flip-top box in all 50 states and Duluth.

But I digress. We were speaking of the memorable aspects of 1962 and high among them, of course, is the fact that in 1962 the entire House of Representatives stands for election. There will, no doubt, be many lively and interesting contests, but none, I'll wager, quite so lively and interesting as the one in my own district where the leading candidate is none other than Chester A. Arthur!

Mr. Arthur, incidentally, is not the first ex-president to come out of retirement and run for the House of Representatives. John Quincy Adams was the first. Mr. Adams also holds another distinction: he was the first son of a president ever to serve as president. It is true that Martin Van Buren's son, Walter "Blinky" Van Buren, was at one time offered the nomination for the presidency, but he, alas, had already accepted a bid to become Mad Ludwig of Bavaria. James K. Polk's son, on the other hand, became Salmon P. Chase. Millard Fillmore's son went into air conditioning. This later was known as the Missouri Compromise.

In Missouri, or anywhere else, there is no compromise with quality in Marlboro or the new unfiltered king-size Philip Morris Commander. The Commander does something new in cigarette making—gently vacuum cleans the tobacco for flavor and mildness. Get aboard! You'll be welcome.

WHEN HE'S READY FOR COLLEGE

Will he be in capable hands?

Let's hope so. Let's hope this bright-eyed youngster (and millions like him) will be taught by men and women who have the brains and the will to do a first-rate job. Let's hope he'll be taught by people who put their hearts as well as their minds into their work. Let's hope, above all, that he'll be trained to make the most of his God-given talents.

What are his chances?

Not too good, the way things are shaping up. For depressingly low salaries are driving gifted teachers into other fields. The same bleak financial outlook is discouraging significant numbers of talented young people from choosing college teaching as a career. At the same time, many classrooms are already beginning to be overcrowded. To add to the dilemma, college applications are expected to double within ten years.

This is a grave situation.

If this trend continues, the time will most certainly come when our colleges will no longer be able to produce thinking, well-informed graduates. And this will be a dark day for America indeed. For our very survival now as a nation depends on the use we make of our latent brainpower.

WHO WILL TEACH HIM?

We must act before it is too late. Won't you help? Support the college of your choice—your own alma mater, the college near you, or the college sponsored by your church. Get to know it. Find out about the job it is doing, about its plans, its problems and its needs. Give it strong moral support. Give it financial support, too, so that it can expand its facilities and pay good teachers a fair, competitive wage. And, perhaps most important of all, encourage intelligent young people to consider college teaching as a career. Do as many of these things as soon as you can. The rewards will be greater than you think.

It's important for you to know more about what the impending college crisis means to you. Write for a free booklet to: HIGHER EDUCATION, Box 36, Times Square Station, New York 36, N.Y.

FSU Gymnastic Squad Tops Georgia, Ga. Tech

The Florida State Gymkana team won their first dual meet with the Georgia Bulldogs last weekend, then traveled to Atlanta to score a victory over Georgia Tech 65½-56½.

On the first and last trips as team coach, Joe Gusic and his team made a good showing, placing three men in each category. Those players who made the trip were Mitch Weinstock, Jim Hampton, Ray Schaefer and Bob Christians. The results were as follows: Rope Climb; Weinstock 3rd., Hampton 5th. Free Exercise; Schaefer 1st., Weinstock 3rd., Hampton 5th. Side Horse, Schaefer St., Weinstock 1st., Hampton 5th. Trampoline; Christians 1st. Horizontal Bar; Christians 1st., Schaefer 2nd., Weinstock 3rd. Parallel Bars; Schaefer 5st. Hampton 2nd., Weinstock, 3rd. Still Rings; Schaefer 3rd., Weinstock 5th. Tumbling; Christian 2nd., Schaefer 3rd. Coach Joe Gusic will be relieved of his post second semester by Dr. Hartley Price, the director of Gymkana, who has been studying under a Fullbright Scholarship in Bogota, Columbia.

According to Coach Gusic this year nas been a year of rebuilding the team. He believes that the team "will be a powerhouse next year." "A lot depends on the attendance we have at our home meets as to whether we will continue the gymnastics program."

A meet scheduled for today with the Denmark gymnastic team was cancelled due to the illness of the Danish team. The meet was to be televised on CBS-TV at Cypress Gardens and was to appear on Sports Spectacular.

The Georgia team was organized last season and this was the first meet between the two teams. Georgia Tech is scheduled as the next home meet, on February 17 at 2 p.m. The Seminoles have nine meets remaining on the schedule, three of them to be held in Tallahassee.

PAUL THOMPSON Florida State's candidate for All-American won the 200 meter free style division at Ft. Lauderdale's annual College Swimming Coaches Aquatic Forum and Swimming Competition.

Tribe Meets Georgia First

Opening its 1962 dual meet season, the Florida State University swimmers take on the University of Georgia Bulldogs in the FSU pool tomorow night.

This will be the second outing of the young season for the tribe. The Seminole mermen won the Southern AAU Championships at New Orleans, La., last month.

With Bim Stults, now in his fourteenth year as FSU's head tank coach, piloting the Seminoles, the tribe will be out to better last year's 9-1 dual meet record. In Stultz' 14 years, the Tribe has compiled a phenomenal dual meet record of 99 wins, 18 losses and two ties.

"We have to accept the fact that the Georgia's team will be one of its best ever. They're a tough, seasoned team. We, the other hand, will be relying on a number of inexperienced boys."

The mainstay of Florida State's sophomore-laden lineup looks to be senior, All-American candidate Paul Thompson. Thompson recently set a new meet record in the 200-meter freestyle at Ft. Lauderdale's annual College Swiming Coaches Aquatic Forum and Swimming Competition.

Seminoles Meet Rollins; Seek Lead In Scoring %

By BILL CHEEK
Flambeau Sports Editor

A balanced record of five wins and five losses was worn by Florida State University as they took on Clemson College last nigt in Clemson, S. C.

This was the second meeting of the two teams this season. In an earlier game the Tigers beat the seminoles in a double overtime 82-77.

Clemson is 4-3 for regular play with a seasonal record of four wins—five losses. Clemson opened with VMI winning 87-84, then lost 52-54 to North Carolina. Playing Virginia in an overtime, Clemson won 70-68. Duke downed the Tigers 66-89. In the first encounter with Florida State the "Country Gentlemen" came out on the top and after a double over time 82-77. Ending the pre-Christmas season with the Citadel they fell to the Tigers 68-62. Clemson played in the Poinsettia Classic in Greenville, South Carolina. During the vacation season and lost to Arkansas 60-62 and to Furman 63-89. Opening its new year Clemson lost to Wake Forest 54-81.

Bill Cheek

The Tigers hold a 4-2 advantage in the short series with the Seminoles winning. Both contestants last year 74-57 and 65-64.

Head Coach Press Maravich stated "We have players who come through on offense and we also have height which has helped quite a bit. It's nice to be able to take a 6-7 boy out and put a 6-8 in his place."

The Florida State Seminoles ended their 1961 season on Dec. 30 with Auburn University in Tallahassee.

Hitting 85.7 per cent of its free throws, Auburn downed the Seminoles 62-57.

This victory avenged the Tigers loss on their own court earlier this season by FSU 56-52.

Both Auburn and Florida State use variations of the "shuffle" type offense.

Auburn improved its record to 5-3 overall with the victory.

This was the first loss in four encounters with Southeastern Conference teams this year. It brought FSU's record to 4-4 for the season.

Layton John's, a junior center, totaled 21 points on nine of 12 shots for Auburn. John's shot 100 per cent on free throws hitting three for three.

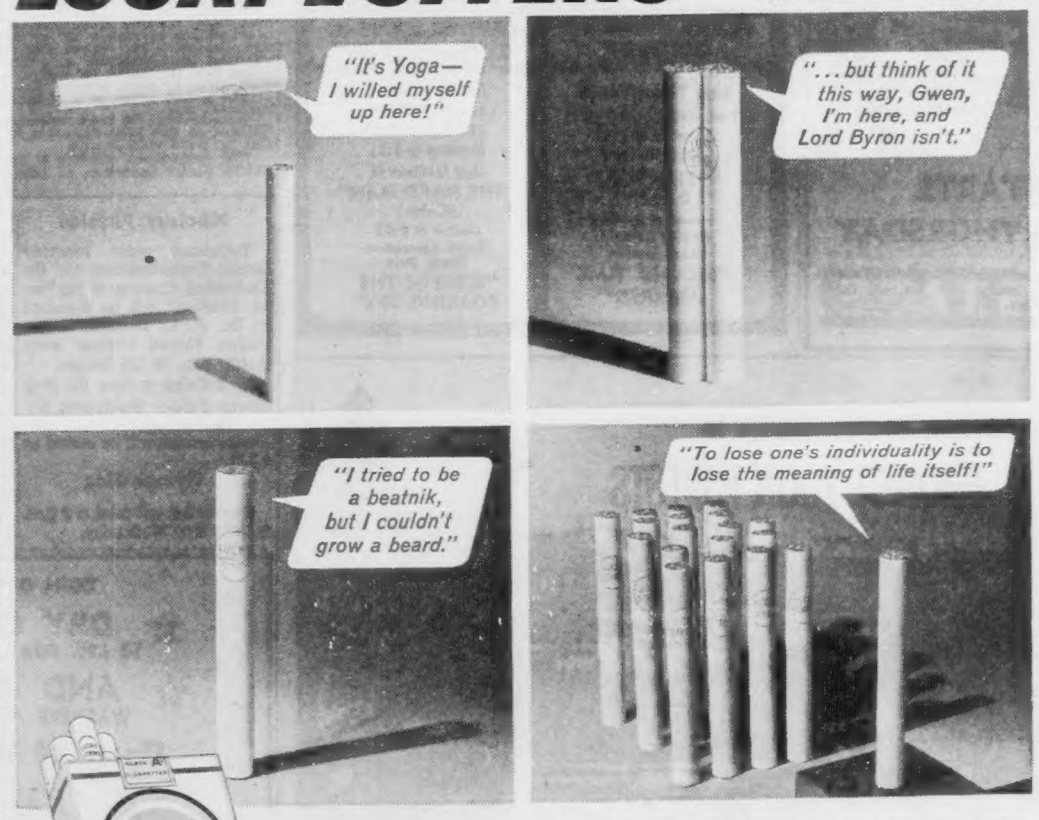
Auburn put two other players in the double figures column, with Bill Tinker scoring 18 points and a Sophomore Guard, Larry Chapman firing in 15.

Dave Fedor was the game leader with 25 points on 64.7 per cent. Dale Ricketts was second high for the Seminoles with 11 points.

FSU led 37-32 at halftime.

The Florida State Seminoles climbed into the number one spot in the nation statistically when they hit close to 60 per cent of its field goal tries, defeating the Oklahoma City University 99-74 last Thursday night.

FSU hit 41 of 69 tries for a 59.4 percentage for the evening. The seasonal average had previously been 50.7 per cent, second only to Ohio State who had a 51.6 per cent average. This game put FSU number one in the nation with 51.9 per cent for a seasonal average.



FSU led only by two points of the halftime, but quickly put the icing on the cake in the second half and wound up a 99-74 victor.

Fedor hit 12 out of 20 shots for a 60 per cent game average, scoring 28 points. Ray Swain sank eight out of 11 shots for a 72.7 average, netting him 20 points. Charlie Long scored 20 points and Rufus Ashworth scored 19 points.

Florida State lost to the Furman University Basketball team 67-64 in Greenville, S. C. Saturday night.

FSU will play Rollins College Thursday night.

Opera Tryouts Are To Be Tonite

Tryouts for The Consul, the next production of the University Theatre and the Opera Guild, will be tonight and tomorrow night at 7 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall.

The opera will be presented March 14 through 17 in Conradi Theatre. There will be one or two rehearsals before examination time, with all other rehearsals to be held second semester.

Seven men are needed, including two non-singing roles, and seven women for the Gian-Carol Menotti opera. Magda Sorel, the leading character, must be sung by a soprano, while the role of the mother calls for a contralto. John Sorel, the male lead, is to be sung by a baritone.

Richard Collins, director of the Opera Guild, will direct the music and Richard Fallon, associate director of the University Theatre, will stage the production.

Special Exhibit

"Florida In Verse" is the subject of an exhibit now on display in the Florida State University Strozier Library Special Collections Room.

Miss Nancy Bird, head of special collections, said the exhibit contains books of verse with poems about Florida or a Florida subject, most of them published within the past 30 years.

Some of the titles of individual poems are "Florida," "Twilight On Florida Bay," "Winter Not Welcome," "Before The Tourists Came," "Sand In My Shoes" and "Just Bartow."

Popular subjects of verse-writers, Miss Bird said, have been the St. Johns River and water hyacinths.

The exhibit will be open to the public from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily Monday through Friday, and from 9 to noon Saturday.

Rocket Society

Lt. Col. Prentice B. Peabody of the unit which does all the Air Force testing of missiles at Cape Canaveral will speak to Florida State University's chapter of the American Rocket Society tomorrow night.

Peabody, deputy of the ballistic missile office of the 6555th aerospace test wing, will talk on "Missile and Space Testing" in Room 120 of the School of Business at 7:30 p.m. The public is invited, according to Marlow Henne, president of the organization.

The guest speaker earlier had been scheduled to talk to the group, which now numbers 30 persons, but was unable at the last minute to come to Tallahassee.

Campus Sing

Tomorrow is the deadline for entries for Campus Sing, to be held Feb. 17 and 18.

Three copies of the songs each group will sing, the entry blank and the $10 entry fee must also be submitted at this time.

Late entries will be accepted until Jan. 17. An additional fee is charged for late entries.

Additional information may be obtained from Mrs. Frances Pemberton, main office, School of Music.

Prospective Teachers

Prospective teachers have only until Friday to submit completed applications to take the National Teacher Examinations on Feb. 10, Dr. G. Emerson Tully, director of the Test Service at Florida State University, said today.

Application forms, along with bulletins of information with representative test questions, may be obtained from Dr. Tully at 203 Education Bldg. The completed applications must then be sent to Educational Testing Service, Princeton, N. J.

At the one-day testing session Feb. 10, candidates may take the Common Examinations which include tests in professional information, general culture, English expression and nonverbal reasoning. In addition candidates may take one or two of the Optional Examinations which are designed to demonstrate mastery of subject matter in teaching fields.

Registration

Registration for second semester will be Jan. 29 through 31 in Tully Gymnasium.

Seniors will register first and then the rest of the student body in alphabetical order.

"Invariance under Improper Lorentz Transformations and the Kinematical Structure of the Vertex Function" will be discussed by Dr. P. C. DeCelles at the Nuclear Physics Seminar today at 4:30 p.m. in 124 Science.

Dr. DeCelles is from the High Energy Physics Brookhaven National Laboratory.

Refreshments will be served at 4 p.m.

purposes, if the resolution failed.

The resolution passed.

The Senate also passed three bills to clarify the statutes, and then moved to cancel next Wednesday's Senate meeting because of exams.

Roger Sherman presented the Senate a seal to hang on the wall. The seal was painted on varnished wood. The previous seal, which Sherman also constructed, "fell apart under the steam heat."

Both Ferlita's Serve As Class Senators

Will the real Senator Ferlita please rise? Two petite young ladies rise to their full height of almost five feet. That's right. There are two Senator Ferlitas . . . Carole Ferlita, freshman class senator and her sister Jeanie Ferlita, junior class senator.

Carole and Jeanie have been doing things together for a long time. They are the only daughters of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Ferlita of Tampa. Since they are only two years apart, they have been very close. Their activities are similar, they look alike, they frequently double date, and their friends claim that they even talk alike.

POLITICAL PATHS

In high school at Hillsborough in Tampa, they were both in Kwainettes and National Honor Society, and both were cheerleaders. Their political paths first crossed in high school. When Jeanie was a senior, and Carole a sophomore, they were active on the Student Council together.

Jeanie came to Florida State University in 1959. She immediately became well known in politics by being elected a senator of her freshman class. Back at home, Carole was making a name for herself, too. She was honored by the American Legion Auxiliary as the outstanding senior girl of her graduation class.

GIRL'S STATE

When Carole decided to run for freshman class senator this year, Jeanie helped her organize her campaign. But as Jeanie put it, "Carole had already run for an office on her own. When she was elected Senator at Girl's State she became interested in politics on her own, instead of having to listen to me talk politics all the time at home."

So far this year, Jeanie and Carole have taken the same stand on big issues in the Senate such as Who's Who, but once they did vote differently on the rules of procedure.

Both girls enjoy politics and plan to continue in Student Government. Carole has already expressed a desire to run for senator again next year. Jeanie hopes to run for Women's Vice-President in the next election in order to continue in Senate.

VARIED ACTIVITIES

Not only are Jeanie and Carole real life sisters, they are also sisters of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority. Besides being in a sorority, Senate, and Young Democrats together, Carole and Jeanie have many and varied activities.

Jeanie spends most of her time this year as a Junior Counselor in Reynolds Hall. She is also in Speakers Bureau, and Garnet Key. She plans to teach with a major in English, and a minor in history.

MATH AND MUSIC

Carole has joined Freshman Flunkies, Choral Union and was chosen a beauty candidate from her dorm, Gilchrist. She is interested in music, and hopes to combine a minor in music with a major in math.

Jeanie admitted that, "Carole doesn't have to be looked after and reminded to do things anymore than all freshmen."

"Good Grief!" Carole replies.

Then they both giggled and smiled. "Our friends say we laugh a lot and smile all the time, and we both always say, 'Good Grief!' "

Good grief! Sisters!

Research Is Begun Here On Disease

Research aimed at the development of a statistical model with which to predict the amount of disease cases that could be expected to occur in a given year and the rate of spread of contagion is now underway at Florida State University.

Dr. S. K. Katti of the Statistics Dept. is conducting the research under a grant from the School of Aviation Medicine of the United States Air Force. A new contract provides $10,884 to support his research.

There are possible implications for entomology, bacteriology and insurance in the research, which is concerned with the study of contagion in relation to the chance occurrence of diseases and infestation. Included in the statistical study will be small scale occurrences of disease outbreaks, spread of tooth decay, polio rate expectations, and the spread of the common cold.

Dr. Katti, a native of India, came to FSU as assistant professor of statistics in February 1960 after completing his doctorate in statistics at the Iowa State University. He has delivered papers on his research at a number of statistical meetings and is the author of ten articles in international journals on the subject of his research.

Graduate students working under the grant are Lawrence E. Sly Jr. and Andre Petrasovitch.

Is Your Child College Material?

That depends. By today's standards, he probably is. By standards ten years from now, perhaps not. How can that be? Is his I. Q. likely to change? No. But conditions are.

Many college classrooms are crowded today. By 1967, applications are expected to double. Low salaries are driving too many qualified teachers into other fields.

By the time your child reaches eighteen, there may not be any room for him in any college.

This is a frightening situation. Now is the time to put a stop to it. Help the college or university of your choice now. The rewards will be greater than you think.

Satirical Approach Highlights Lecture

By LANA MURRAY
Flambeau Staff Writer

"The time spent on any item of a committee agenda is inversely proportional to the amount of money in-volved."

This astute scientific observation was explained Wednesday night by Professor C. Northcote Parkinson, speaker at the University Lecture Series.

Parkinson won attention with his bitingly satirical works describing the operations of business administration, Parkinson's Law and The Law and the Profits. He is best known as a humorist but also is a distinguished economist and historian.

ADMINISTRATORS

Business administrators, Parkinson said, are people who spend their mornings pushing papers across their desks and their afternoons "committeeing."

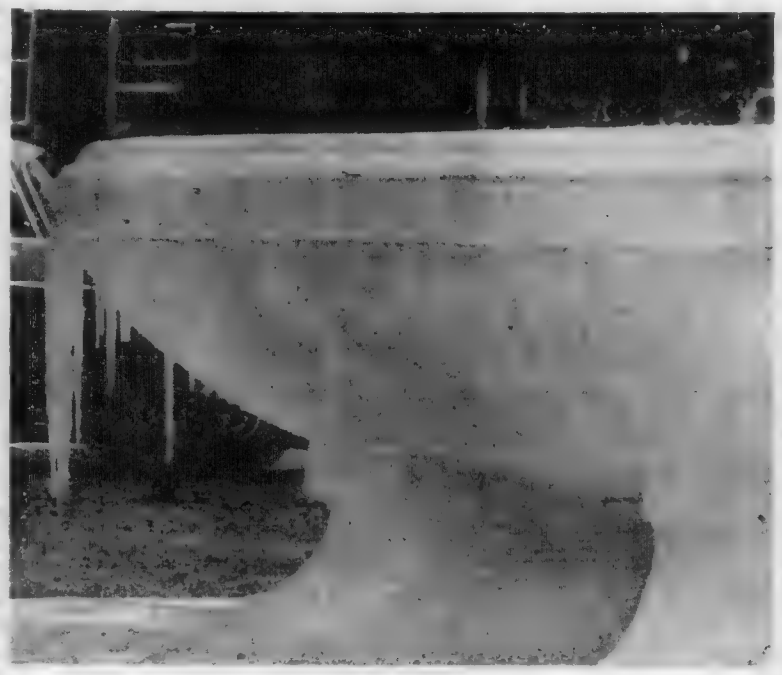
He modestly laid claim to the founding of a new branch of the social sciences, "committology," the study of the life cycle of a committee." He explained that a committee "flourishes, blossoms, decays and dies—but in dying spreads the seeds from which other committees grow."

He added that through natural selection, the committee soon reaches the "coefficient of inefficiency," due to the addition of everyone who criticizes the committee's work.

Parkinson said that he had done personal study in the field of "chairmanity" which he defined as "the method employed by the chairman to get his own way." He classified chairmen as 1) inanimate, who prevent all discussion by rushing through the agenda; 2) browbeatnik, who suppress discussion by shouting "Do you question my integrity?" and 3) confusionist, who allow the committee members to talk among themselves about anything but write the minutes before the meeting.

Parkinson related his discovery during World War II of the tongue-in-cheek "Parkinson's Law," which holds that business operations expand to meet the time and personnel available for its completion. "I don't claim that this discovery entirely justifies the war, however," he hastened to add.

COCKTAIL METHOD



He discussed his theory of the cocktail method of personnel selection. He has ascertained, he said, that all the important people at a party arrive at the "optimum time," 45 minutes after the start of the party. Natural circulation tends to move clockwise around the room. Centrifugal force throws unimportant people to the corners of the room and the "feeble-minded" collect in a central eddy.

By dividing the room into a graph, by 90 minutes after the start of the party, everyone who is anyone would be found in square E-7, and, of course, the person in the very center of the square should be made personnel advisor. Immediately after this person has been selected, Parkinson added, the somebodies

A FROZEN FOUNTAIN DRIPS ICICLES

Warmer weather is forecast for the Tallahassee area by the Weather Bureau if the cold wave breaks up as it is expected to late today.

A low of 22 degrees was forecast for early this morning by the Tallahassee Weather Bureau, however, temperatures were expected to rise to about 40 degrees by this afternoon. The Bureau does not anticipate any danger from frost tonight.

Yesterday's low of 23 degrees was recorded at 6:30 a. m. Icicles were formed on Westcott fountain as a result of the below freezing weather.

Registrar Expects Grades By Jan. 29

Student grade reports are expected to be in the mail as of Jan. 29, the first day of second semester registration, reports Dr. Murray Kenna, Florida State University Registrar.

This "speed-up" in the compilation of grades is due to the innovation of new machinery for that purpose as well as some borrowed machinery. In addition to this, a new system is being used by the faculty in preparing their respective grades for the registrar.

Due to registration and grade reports, it will be impossible for the registrar's office to produce transcripts before Feb. 9, at which time they will be forwarded to the particular schools concerned said Dr. Kenna.

The registrar's office will be closed during the three days of registration for all purposes except admissions. Provisions will be made for transcript requests. Otherwise, said Dr. Kenna only a skeleton crew to take care of the telephone will be in the office.

"We're taking almost our entire staff to the men's gym for registration" he reported. His staff of 37 as well as 15 people from the Bursar's office, 2 operators, 3 people at the traffic desk, 4 people covering I.D's, 6 reproducing cards in the IBM office and 8 on the IBM staff bring the number of workers to a total of 80.

In addition to this number 100 to 110 faculty members will be doing actual class registration bringing the overall number of people involved in this operation to 200 or over.

The official registration schedule is as follows: Jan. 29, 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.; Jan. 30, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Jan. 31, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Registration for evening and Saturday classes only has been scheduled for Jan. 30 beginning at 6:30 p.m. at the men's gym and for Feb. 3, from 9 a.m. to 12 noon on Westcott stage.

Registration itself will be carried on in much the same procedure as it was in the fall. Graduating seniors and honors section students will have priority in the order of registering.

APPOINTMENTS ALPHABETICALLY

All other students have been assigned appointment times according to alphabetical order. This semester, the office has assigned appointment times in order, running from A-Z. Next semester the system will be reversed. The following semester those students to go first in registration will come from the middle of the alphabet. This system has been adopted in order that everybody will be near the first of registration at least every four semesters.

"It will be next to impossible for students to change their appointment time," Dr. Kenna emphasized. The staff will be registering almost 10,000 students in three days, he explained.

As the system now stands 128 students will be admitted into the registration line every 15 minutes. No one will be permitted to register without an I.D. card, with the exception of new students and those returning after an absence of a semester or more.

The I.D. card will be checked at the door and during registration. This is necessary in order that it might be validated for second semester.

Dr. Anderson Is To Speak At Graduation

Florida State University commencement will be held in Tully Gymnasium at 3 p.m., Jan. 27, with Dr. Robert C. Anderson executive vice-president of Auburn University and former director of the Southern Regional Education Board, as the speaker.

Nearly 400 students are scheduled to receive degrees which will be conferred by President Gordon W. Blackwell. President and Mrs. Blackwell will have a reception at their home for graduates, their friends and families, from 11 a.m. to noon on Saturday, following a rehearsal at 10 a.m., the day of commencement.

ALABAMA NATIVE

Dr. Anderson, 40, is a native of Birmingham. He received his B.S. degree from Auburn in 1942, his M.A. from the University of North Carolina in 1947 and his Ph.D. from New York University in 1950.

From 1948 to 1950 he was an instructor and assistant to the dean of the School of Education at New York University. From 1950 to 1953 he was professor and director of the Graduate School of Memphis State University and from 1953 to 1961 he was with the Southern Regional Education Board four years as director.

EDUCATIONAL TELEVISION

He served in 1952 as director of the Southern Regional Project on Educational Television, in 1957 as director of the Southern Regional Conference of the Presidents Committee on Education Beyond the High School and since 1958 has been a member of the National Council of the National Planning Association.

In 1958-59 he was a member of the Surgeon General's Consultant Group on Medical Education and since 1960 has been a member of the W. K. Kellogg Foundation Educational Advisory Committee.

IFC Favors Fewer Activities, Close Fraternity Unification

A cutback in activity and a closer unification of fraternities were recurring themes of the annual Inter-Fraternity Council retreat held last weekend.

The group, composed of fraternity presidents and representatives, discussed slices in the Intramural program, Homecoming participation, Greek Week and the multitude of activities which award trophies.

"We are trying to emphasize scholarship," said IFC vice-president Doug Shank. "Too many of the things we do are done for the sake of competition. Competition is good but we have gone too far. We feel that too much time is consumed in working for points or a trophy. We will not have this time under the Trimester plan."

All suggested cutbacks will be studied more thoroughly at the beginning of the Spring semester.

INTRAMURALS

A committee to study the Intramural program with Keith Pitchford, Intramural's director, has been set up to begin functioning in February. The council suggested that all intramural competition be held on Saturday afternoon next semester.

Mid-week socials will be cut out beginning next semester. Substituting for them will be dessert parties. "Desserts accomplish the same purposes," said Shank, "And they take a good deal less time."

Fraternity Homecoming participation will be decreased, with house decorations being completely junked. "House decorations are too time consuming," commented Shank. "We don't have time to build one." Shank also said that IFC wanted the dimensions of Homecoming floats reduced.

GREEK WEEK CONDENSATION

Condensation of Greek Week was discussed and planned. Under the Trimester system, activity will be condensed into Thursday, Friday, and Saturday instead of being strung out over an entire week. Tentative plans call for a Beauty Contest, an IFC banquet, individual officer meetings, and a Greek Dance.

In other discussions, IFC moved to close up breaches between fraternites and to work as a unified body.

"We want to work for a unification of Greeks," said Shank. "Excessive competition is defeating its aims."

Creating of a Inter-Fraternity Pledge Council will be one of the first unifying moves. The council will consist of pledge representatives of each group which will meet periodically to plan projects to benefit schools, churches, and the community, according to Shank. "The pledges today will be brothers tomorrow," added Shank.

Inter-fraternity groups for each officer in the fraternities to discuss common problems will also be set up. "This will enable each social chairmen to talk with other social chairmen, each treasurer to talk with other treasurers, etc." stated Shank.

CHANGE IN RUSH SYSTEM

Alteration of the rush system was planned. Beginning in the fall, fraternities will adopt part of the Panhellenic system and have rushees divided into groups to visit each house. An IFC representative will guide each group. "In the past, we have let the rushees loose to visit on their own. Grouping will speed up rushing measurably." Rushees, however, will be allowed to visit houses on their own the last day of the four-day open house period.

In other action, IFC proposed setting up a Speaker's Bureau type system to visit high school career days and planned an Inter-Fraternity publication.

Folk-Singing Highwaymen Appear At FSU Feb. 16

The Highwaymen, five folk-singing college students who broke the million dollar mark with their record, "Michael," will entertain at Florida State University Feb. 16.

This folk singing quintet is actually composed of senior honor students from Connecticut's Wesleyan University. Appearing through the Artist's Series, they will give two performances at Westcott Auditorium, the first being at 7 p.m. and the second at 9 p.m.

Tickets for the shows will go on sale at the Westcott ticket office Feb. 5.

The students, now receiving offers to perform for as much as $2,500 a night, spent their freshman, sophomore, and junior years entertaining unofficially in their fraternity house basement.

Singing in English, Hebrew, and Spanish, the group is a kind of Kingston Quintet, singing a wide range of folk songs American and foreign. All five play guitars and beyond that they diversify into a variety of instruments that includes five-string banjo, recorder, autoharp, maracas, a ten-string South American charango, and a Nigerian talking drum.

VARIETY OF TALENT

Members of the group have a large variety of talents outside the singing field. Bob Burnett, 21, is Wesleyan's pole-vault champion and vice president of the student government. The son of a Boston investment broker, he is majoring in government and wants to be a lawyer.

Steve Trott, also 21, the president of his local fraternity, speaks fluent French and Spanish. A Mexican garbageman taught him how to play the guitar.

Chan Daniels president of Wesleyan's International Relations Club has lived in Argentina most of his life where his father sells Jeeps.

Stephen Butts, the youngest member of the quintet, has been chief engineer on the campus radio station and announcer of home football games.

The group's musical arranger, David Fisher, who completes the five, is the only Highwayman seriously interested in music. He hopes to receive a Ph.D. in musicology.

Sedore, Symphony Play Original Composition Tonight

COMPOSER DISCUSSES ORIGINAL "SYMPHONY" (1961) TO BE PRESENTED TONIGHT

THE UNIVERSITY SYMPHONY, CONDUCTED BY ROBERT Sedore, will present a concert tonight at Florida State University with Carol Padgett as soloist for the first movement of Beethoven's Concerto No. 4. Here Miss Padgett is shown at the piano with Harold Schiffman of the music faculty whose original "Symphony" (1961) will be featured on the program.

The University Symphony, conducted by Robert Sedore, will present a concert tonight at Florida State University with an original composition by Harold Schiffman of the music faculty featured on the program.

The concert, second of the season for the 75 musicians, will be at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. There is no charge for admission and the public is invited.

BY CHABRIER

The program will open with the "Joyeuse Marche" by Emmanuel Chabrier, followed by "Symphony" (1961) by Schiffman. The symphony in four contrasting movements employs the idioms of modern contemporary music.

Schiffman, a doctoral candidate is a student of John Boda and also studied composition with Roger Sessions and with the late Ernst von Dohnanyi. He holds the bachelor's degree from the University of North Carolina and the master's from the University of California. Works by the FSU faculty member have been performed at forums of the Southeastern Composers League, Florida Composers League, the Composers Forum in San Francisco, the Tallahassee Symphony, the Tallahassee Youth Symphony, the Atlanta Symphony String Quartet and the Hegyi Trio.

The "Symphony" is a dissertation for the Doctor of Music degree.

SOLOIST

Carol Padgett, graduate student, will appear as soloist with the Symphony for the performance of the first movement of the Concerto in G major, No. 4, by Beethoven. Winner of the state contest of the National Federation of Music Clubs, Miss Padgett has made numerous solo and chamber music appearances throughout the state. She is a student of Edward Kilenyi of the music faculty. She has appeared as soloist with the Tallahassee Symphony and the Florida Symphony which played at the opening of the 1961 legislature.

She was awarded a scholarship to Stetson, where she studied for two years. She now holds an assistantship, teaching private piano, in the FSU School of Music.

Miss Kawa used Chiri paper, a primitive Japanese paper, as well as the transparent tissue paper with a binding material applied to the canvas to produce the vivid color effect on the canvas. She first began using the technique several years ago but only recently became interested in the completely subjective use of the media.

In teaching the concept of color and transparency, Miss Kawa has carried over the use of colored tissue paper in the classes she teaches, in basic design, water color and composition.

Housing Fees

Monday is the deadline for housing fees for the second semester, reports Miss Edith McCollum, Florida State University Housing Director. Students should bring or mail their Housing-Invoice with the remittance to the Housing Office. There is a $5 fee for late payment.

Any student planning to pay housing fees from student or NDEA loan funds and whose loans have been approved, should go to the Financial Aid Office to sign the Note for release of these funds early in January, Miss McCollum added.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the student body as a whole or the administration of Florida State University. Editorials represent only the opinions of staff members and the initials of the writer following the editorial.

We Need A Dead Week

Final examinations are six days away and the Florida State University student body seems only mildly aware that the culmination of a semester of work is in the immediate offing. The time of reckoning is upon us and we are busy, as ever, with our little meetings and parties, which occupy the great preponderance of our time throughout the semester.

Perhaps, we do not fully appreciate the significance of examinations which might solely determine our passing or failing. Possibly, we do not fully appreciate the importance of the final examination grade and its effect on our academic average. We should be mature enough to pare down our extra activities as exams approach. But we aren't.

Therefore, it is time for someone in power to be mature for us. Four years ago, the administration declared a Dead Week, the week before finals. During this period, no meetings could be held; no parties could be scheduled; all extra activities came to a complete halt. The administration put the clamps on us and made us wake up to reality.

This is not the best solution. The more ideal would be for Student Senate to take a role of leadership and declare that student activities come to a halt. The student solons—in fact, all of student government—have been giving lip service to plans for Student Government to take an active, meaningful role in encouraging academic pursuits. But they have as yet done nothing more than mouth grandiloquent statements of good intent.

The importance of stopping student activities short prior to finals takes on added importance in light of the Trimester system. The shortening of the semester will make outside preparation for finals even more significant.

Dead Day is a fine practice, but it is not enough. We suggest that Student Government take the lead and declare a Dead Week beginning next semester. If this suggestion makes no impression, the administration should step in and halt the activities. We shouldn't need the "Big Brother" treatment, but it seems that we do.

BCS

Trimester Action Needed

THE ADOPTION OF the trimester plan for this university has caused varied reactions and actions from the many different organizations on campus. The IFC, Panhellenic, and student publications organizations have seen the need to hold workshops for the purpose of determining what changes they must make in their programs under this system. Many other organizations are discussing whether or not to go on a year round basis, and if so, to what extent. Organizations are working on new budgets, and the student government budget committees are establishing a system to deal with these budgets.

HOWEVER, THE ONE committee that should be setting the pace for all of the other organizations on campus —the Student Senate Trimester Committee— is making no progress whatsoever. In fact, this committee has not even had a meeting in which anything productive has transpired. Although the committee has had a meeting every week since it was appointed, each one of these meetings has deviated far, in conversation, from their purposes.

THIS COMMITTEE is responsible for the re-writing of the Student Body Constitution and the Statutes; so that the student government, and those organizations working under and through it, will be able to make the transition, from the present semester system to the new trimester system, as smoothly as possible. This committee's job is as important, if not more important than any committee's on campus in determining the effectiveness of this transition.

THE NECESSITY FOR this period of change-over to be as smooth as possible can not be underestimated. If this university is to maintain its high standards in every field, this transition is going to have to be made effectively.

THEREFORE, we urge the trimester committee of the Student Senate to follow the example of the IFC, Panhellenic, and Student Publications organizations; and to start immediately to take meaningful action. This responsibility cannot continually be a victim of procrastination, if our transition into the new trimester system is to be successful.

JFS

More Writing Interest

DATING FROM this soon to end semester, anyone who says there is no student interest in creative writing and in the campus publications which serve as outlets for such writing can have a hearty share of their jeers returned to them.

BOTH THE LEGEND and SMOKE SIGNALS have been rather thoroughly snowed under with material. True, there is a distinct variation in quality, but some of the short stories, poems and essays that are or will be returned are going back to their originators simply because the writer yet lacks the ability to present his ideas in a readable form. Many good ideas crop up only to be sent back to the writer.

SMOKE SIGNALS basking in the warmth of a renewing interest among the student body, need not scramble for material if students respond as willingly to the call for contributions in the future as they have this year. Contributions coupled with staff written assignments can assure Smoke Signals a healthy selection of materials for future issues.

THE LEGEND selections committee is currently struggling to read in a calm and ordered fashion some 200 plus poems and over thirty short stories and essays. That response would seem to indicate interest in your publications.

WITH NO ADMINSTRATIVE department interested in student writing, except for a handful of English professors such as Drs. Cox, Flory, Yost and Mr. Mike Shaara, FSU has done quite well. The publications here depend on you as students; on your interest and participation.

IF YOU REALLY BELIEVE that your student publications are inferior to those from other schools, many larger and more imminent nationally, come up sometime and compare your Flambeau with some of the others available.

Editor's Note: The land deal that would have created a fraternity row fell through. It was not public land- it belonged to a private citizen who chose to sell to a church.

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

Ranking high among the ten worst decisions of 1961 was FSU's plan to buy ten acres of land west of the University School for a "fraternity row."

IT SEEMS IRONIC to this observer that while the slum clearance plans of Florida cities are thwarted by a constitutional prohibition on public purchase of property for resale and redevelopment causing them to forfeit thousands of dollars in federal matching funds, the university can buy land to erect an intellectual slum.

Presumably the difference is that the Greeks will lease, rather than purchase, the facilities. Technicalities aside, however, if there is anything which ought to be unconstitutional, it is the easing of public property to organizations which are not open to all members of the public.

NOW IT IS NOT news that fraternities discriminate against members of various groups. It is doubtful that Jesus Christ could pledge Sigma Chi, if he were tempermentally so inclined, for not only was he a Jew, but a carpenter's son to boot. Most Hellenic groups also exclude nonwhites, in practice if not by statute. Although that is of little concern to FSU at the moment, here is every reason to believe that things may soon be quite different.

As I say, however, discrimination is not news. What is news is the fact that decent universities, from Dartmouth to Colorado State, are doing something about it. Far from encouraging these parasites on the body of education, they have told the Greeks to "reform or get out."

THESE CONSIDERATIONS, of course, will carry little weight in a state whose government seeks to foster rather than prevent discrimination. There are, however, enough sound practical reasons to cause grave doubts as to the wisdom of the university's action. The trimester system will leave much less leisure time for the trivial activities of fraternity life.

Furthermore, there is a trend whereby FSU's student body may eventually be composed largely of upperclass transfers from junior colleges. With a smaller and smaller proportion of native freshmen, it will become increasingly difficult to locate students who are sufficiently shallow to meet the qualifications of Greek organizations. From now on, it is much more likely that fraternities will decline more than they will expand. It seems unrealistic at this time, therefore, to permit them to spill over onto land which may well be needed for expansion of the University School, for non-discriminatory housing, or for other purposes.

IF THE UNIVERSITY decides to proceed with its present plans in spite of all it should at least warn the innocent citizens in the area in question. As any current neighbor of the Greeks can readily explain, a fraternity dwelling is likely to sound on weekends like a Tennessee roadhouse, with rock 'n' roll music surpassing in sheer decibel-power the most elaborately contrived civil defense warning systems. But children must play.

Featherbeds And Hot Ultimatums

By BONNIE FREEDMAN

"The weather bulletin this morning . . . " it started. ". . . expected high, twenty-five . . . " they said. "Snow flurries predicted for the afternoon." Just like that. Oh yes, they cautioned us to bring our plants and pipes indoors, or at least cover them.

IT ISN'T REALLY cold. Of course everyone looks like a moving featherbed, and once in a while we see an icicle on a sorority girl's nose, but really, we don't call this cold in Quebec.

Nine out of ten among the well-informed are agreed that it is cold. The tenth in this survey is usually too cold to say anything. The Chamber of Commerce of the State of Florida in conjunction with Farris Bryant's Bring - the - people - to - Florida program has issued an ultimatum: either Tallahassee warms up, or it has to secede quietly from the state.

"HEY, WHO TURNED off the furnace?" they shout.

"Hey, so we get to miss class if it snows?" they shout.

"Hey, Claire, I like your mural!" they shout. They are too cold to remember what column this is.

COKE MACHINES go unused, in favor of hot chocolate and coffee. The streets are bare, as people huddle together in buildings for warmth. "Go to class?" a Sensitive Dissector warbles. "I wouldn't send a dog out on a night like this." "I am going South for the winter," sings a Red-nosed Proofreader.

There is no Israeli dance for snow — Israel is a land of milk and honey, and seventy degrees.

Just remember, freezing to death is a state of mind.

Letters

Information Requested

TO THE EDITOR:

In the January 9 issue of the Flambeau there appeared a letter from Mr. Carter Johnson representing the "principles and beliefs" of the South.

The letter includes the following: "Currently the living level of the Negro in America is considerably below that of the greater mass of the Caucasoid element in this country. This is of course, not entirely his fault and we as much as anyone, desire to see this situation improved, for our own good as well as the Negroe's."

Just for the sake of information and with no malicious intent, how does Mr. Carter propose to improve the situation of the Negro in the South and still maintain a segregated standard which separates colored from white in the economic sphere as well as in education?

Coma Meets Super Rat

By LESLIE POWELL

It's a nerd! It's a pain! No . . . no, it's Super Rat (with the crooked "S").

CLAD ONLY IN RED longjohns securely buttoned against the elements, Super Rat whizzed in from the far, star-lit reach reaches of the Pique House. He had heard screams of distress in the Mongolis Hall area. Racing over, leaving a vapor trail of Old Spice turning red in the sunset, he began his daring, super-duper dive to the rescue.

Flexing his moustache one last time, he dove down, down, down . . . unable to stop, he dug a crater on Landis Green, to the intense amusement of the residents therein residing.

CLIMBING CLAW OVER claw to the lip of the crater, Supe extracted himself, spat out a mouthfull of grass, bent his whiskers back in shape, and sauntered as nonchalantly as possible to the door of Mongolia Hall.

Knocking at the door, he was brapped over the skull by an irate bouncer who screams: "Out rodent, out, out, out. I can't abide spiders." She thereupon tosses him back to the middle of Landis Green.

"OH," MOANED THE Mighty One, "Oh, if Theo were only here, nobody would toss me around like this. Interfering with my humane efforts to be humane."

So saying, Supe returned to Mongolia Hall and the unabated screaming. The bouncer was still on duty, machete in hand reprimanding all and sundry. Taking a mighty chaw of Catnip from his reserve plug, Supe felt new energies surge to the tip of his cape. He folded the bouncer into a paper airplane and sailed her down the street where she collided with the oak in front of the library.

HEARING THE CRASH, the area was soon full of converged Flambeau reporters.

Said the Society Editor: "Somebody will regret this. Nobody told me that tree parties were "in" this season. Only the Alpha Chi's would pull off a coupe like that."

SAID THE NEWS Editor: Is it worth a picture? Is it newsworthy? Get PRO on the crash phone."

Said the managing editor: "It'll fill space. Space is news this year. Everybody is filling space. Look at the Russians. Look at the Canaveral crowd. Look, here comes another satellite overhead right now."

SAID THE SPORTS editor: "Is she signed to a football contract? Is that a basketball on that yonder limb? No . . . guess it's just her head."

Said the passersby: "She must be ona them soda shoppers."

SAID THE CAMPUS police: "She's overparked and she'll get a ticket."

Said the Chemistry Department: "Huh, nothing wrong with that broad 'cept she's been eating vodka popsicles."

AND BACK AT MONGOLIA Hall, Supe was zipping along the halls looking for the source of the mysterious wailing. Allready he had blundered into a house council meeting, but the wailing there was of a different tone. It was rent by the gnashing of teeth. ". . . yes I shook my rug down the starwell . . . sob . . . ", ". . . I won't pay a buck a bottle for every coke bottle found in my room . . . sob . . ."

Then, suddenly Supe realized the sounds were coming from the room which bore the name Coma von Mathis. The head Secretary of the Student Party Secretariat! This would never do! Political dynamite! Bombast! The Orange Peel would have a ball depicting the big scene at FSU.

"WHY ARE YOU bowling," Supe demanded, crashing down the unlocked door. "This is a lovely hall dedicated to the happy carefree life of all coeds so sequestered here."

"Sob," the Secretary Coma von Mathis sobbed. "Sob." She stopped to bat her big blue eyes like a couple of blue china plates at Supe. Bat. Bat. Her eyes blinked. Bat. Bat. Coma had been reading Flaubert's Madame Bovary. Every proper heroine had big blue blue eyes like china plates that went bat, bat, because that was proper, romantic and highly symbolic for some reason.

"YOU . . . SOB . . . SEE the bars on these windows? Sob . . . bat, bat . . . sob."

"But that's why it's called Mongolia Hall, sweets," Supe said. "Once you're banished here, there's no hope." And he flexed a corpuscle for her, flex, hoping to cheer her up. The corpuscle bounced off one of its brothern and the chain reaction set in until Supe lit up like a big pinball machine. Ching, ching, ping he went. "Come, girl, and we'll walk to the water cooler and drink the flouride of life."

OUT INTO THE hall they went, only to walk into Stewie von Coma, who set up a great howl of "mouse in the hall, mouse in the hall, loose rodent, ban psych majors from Mongolia." So saying she began to swing a hastily ripped off door frame at Supe.

"Oh," she kept chanting, "I hate dadaists."

THE BATTLE WAS joined. House council, smelling new blood, trouped out en masse. Seeing that the mouse was really a mouse, they trouped back in again and barricaded the door behind them. "Eek, eek," they screamed. "We must not scream in language above the average reader level," they admonished each other. "Eek, eek." "Well," the chairman yodeled, "since some of these papers are distributed downtown, maybe we'd better stop screaming eek, lest nobody know how to pronounce it; just go scream, scream." Thereupon the building grew full of women going about the great mouse hunt and chanting "scream, scream, scream." They wore unutterably bored expressions.

Supe snuck out, taking Coma von Mathis with him. And when the Flambeau reporters reached Mongolia to report on the uproar, they could find nothing but a crowd of coeds chanting scream, scream, and now and then one that bat her eyes . . . bat, bat. "Ha," said the Society Editor, "that's dorm couth for you. Said the News Editor: "I don't care what happened; can you spell it for me?"

Said the managing editor: 'Get out, you clods, I live here."

"SAY," THE SPORTS editor said, "why don't we call the editor over at the Pique house."

And at that moment a tiny figure, with Coma von Mathis under one arm, circled above the Pique House, dove, dug a crater in the earth, crawled inside with the bedraggled Coma under his arm, staggered to the phone and said "Hello? The Flambeau editor? Yes, speaking."

Let's Get Serious

'Fascist' Charges Levelled At Conservatives Are False

By GERRY DOBSON

The epithets are flying thick and fast from the liberal camp; one is constantly hearing endearments such as "neanderthal", "ultra-reactionary", "paranoid", "lunatic fringe", "super-patriot", "bigot", and "fascist", all directed against the conservative movement in this country. IT IS QUITE IRONIC that this name-calling, which seems to be the result of a desparate liberal attempt to counteract the rising tide of conservatism, and to cover up the staleness of the liberal program, is the closest thing to what the liberals lovingly refer to as "McCarthyism" in this country today. By their definitions, this latter-day phenomenon consists of wild name calling, (see above), unsubstantiated and false charges, (The John Birch Society has called Eisenhower a communist), and guilt by association, (a spokesman for Americans for Democratic Action recently lumped the American Nazi Party, the Minute-Men of America and other absurd organizations with honest and eminently respectible conservative groups such as Dr. Fred Schwarz' Christian Anti-communist Crusade, and the college conservative group Young Americans for Freedom). Or are only the liberals entitled to use these "methods"?

One gets the sneaking suspicion that the left is most hypocritical in attacking in others the very thing they do themselves. Or, maybe as the Tallahassee Democrat has pointed out, they merely have thin skins, and can dish it out, but cannot take it.

BE THIS AS IT MAY, there is one charge, maliciously false, that I for one am sick of hearing, and that is that the right is dangerous because it will lead us into "fascism". This charge has been levelled against just about every conservative group of consequence. Sen. Stephen Young of Ohio, who dotes on insulting those who have the adacity to disagree with his pompous pentifications, does the "fascist" bit to a fare-thee-well in this week's Saturday Evening Post.

First of all, fascism is no threat, at the present time, in this country, mainly because this ideology was so discredited during World War II. Fascism is the form of government in only a small handful of countries, all of which are relatively inconsequential. Communism, which according to the liberals, is not as great a threat to this nation than is the "fascist revival", controls one-third of the earth's population, and has three hundred thousand espionage agents at work in the free world.

BE THIS AS IT MAY, the overemphasis of the dangers of fascism and the blindness on the part of many liberals to the dangers of communism is not the root of their hypocrasy. For if there is (and I don't think there is) a fascist threat in the United States, is being aided, abetted and encouraged not by the conservatives, but by the liberals themselves. I'm sure it is unintentional; it is just that many liberal goals would also facilitate the establishment of a fascist society in this country as well.

First of all, consider the conditions necessary for the establishment of a fascist state. No fascist state can come into being without a strong central government as a predecessor, for only when this condition is met can enough power be concentrated in one place to facilitate a takeover. In the United States, not only do we have a system of checks and balances within the federal government, but we also have a division of powers between the federal government and the states. Thus, under our system, the power of government is so diffused that it would be almost impossible for one person, or a minority group to set up a fascist (or any other kind of) dictatorship.

A SECOND REQUIREMENT for the establishment of a fascist state is the dependence of the people upon the government, and their consequent unwillingness to question its decisions. This was the case in Germany, where respect for authority was ingrained in the people, and in Japan, where the authority, at least in theory, was vested in the emperor, who was considered divine, and whose word was therefore not to be questioned. In the United States, the liberals, not the conservatives are trying to make the people dependent upon the government instead of upon themselves by increasing federal handouts, and the resulting controls over their lives. And it is the spokesmen for the liberal establishment, JFK, LBJ et al, are spreading the idea that our government is not to be severely critized, or "the people's faith in it will be undermined".

FINALLY, LET US consider economic philosophy. The Nazi and liberal ideas on economics, despite any impressions the liberals may have created to the contrary, are strikingly similar. In Germany, National Socialism involved not government ownership of businesses, but, rather, arbitrary regulation of them so that the government had effective control of them without direct ownership.

The liberals are, no doubt sincere in their hatred of fascism, but their arguments lose much of their luster when in so many instances they are exposing the very measures which can increase a fascist threat which is now of no significance. It would be ironic indeed if, after succeeding with their program for America, they found that they had created the very climate in which the ideology they detest so much could fluorish.

Debaters Travel To Miami For Invitational Tournament

Two members of the Florida State University Debate Squad will attend the Miami Invitational Debate Tournament, in Miami, Jan. 25 through 27.

The tournament is one of the best tournaments in this area of the country and draws universities and colleges from the Southern, Eastern, and New England states, according to Debate Coach R. A. Hahn.

The two debaters that will represent FSU at the tournament will be Richard Root and John Schaffner.

The tournament is run on a "swing-shift" style. This means that the debaters will alternate, from round to round, debating on the affirmative and negative side of the topic.

The topic of debate is the national debate topic for the year. Resolved: that labor unions should be under the jurisdiction of anti-trust legislation.

The tournament will be composed of seven regular rounds of debate, semi-finals, and finals.

The last time that FSU entered this tournament was in 1957.

Magical Miss Hair Can Be Two Places At Once

Carol Hair, Florida State University coed and this year's Orange Bowl Queen, was in two places — 500 miles apart — last Saturday.

In Miami, 25,000 Pro Bowl fans plus untold numbers watching the game on a nationwide television hookup, saw a queen during the halftime festivities identified as "Her Majesty, Carol Hair, Queen of the Orange Bowl."

In Tallahassee, Miss Hair was confined to her bed by her doctor's orders when she watched the spectacle on television amid the laughter of her sorority sisters.

The mysterious case of the identities was solved when it was revealed that a substitute queen was chosen from the Orange Bowl court when illness made it impossible for Miss Hair to participate.

The Florida State Seminoles will be out to avenge their 9-14 series record with the University of Miami tomorrow night in Tully Gymnasium.

Miami opened with Jacksonville University [illegible] a 93-80 victory [illegible] Miami, then lost to Morehead State 107-81. Louisville defeated Miami 77-59, but the "Hurricanes" bounded back to defeat Miami State 69-67 Miami [illegible] another victory for the season by downing Florida Southern 96-67.

Florida fell victim to the "Hurricanes" 66-61 Miami played her sister school in Ohio Miami University) and won 83-73, but in the next contest was defeated by Temple University 85-67. Against Rhode Island the "Hurricanes" won again 80-70, but lost to Oklahoma City 119-113 in overtime. In a contest Wednesday night with Jacksonville University Miami won 90-[illegible]. The "Hurricanes" played Florida last night but the results of the game were not available before press time.

The University of Miami owns a 7-4 win record so far this season. Head Coach [illegible] Hale has stated that his Miami team has strong potential, but still is able to play consistently.

[illegible] McCoy, a 7 foot junior center, leads the Miami scoring with a 19.7 average for the season. McCoy has averaged better than 15 points per game. Julie Cohen has a 15.4 scoring average per game and Ken Allen has an average of 12.8 points scored. The probable lineup for Miami will be [illegible] McCoy center, Julie Cohen, guard; Ken [illegible] guard; Lou Alix, forward; and Lee [illegible] forward.

The FSU Seminoles will play the "Crimson Tide" of Alabama on Jan. 31 in Tuscaloosa, Alabama. The tribe will retain their 2-0 series record with the tide.

The probable starters for Alabama in this contest will be Hinton Butler, 6-2 junior; Darrell Estes, 5-9 senior; James Booth, 6-3 sophomore; Bobby Faine, 6-8 junior; and Howard [illegible] a 6-5 junior.

Alabama has played teams such as Vanderbilt, Auburn, LSU, SMU, Mississippi, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi State and Davidson College.

The Tribe will play Oklahoma City for their second encounter of the season Feb. 3 in Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

The "Chiefs" are short and fast, relying heavily on fast breaks and speed to offset a lack of height.

The probable starting lineup will be Larry Jones, a 5-11 senior, Gary Hill, a 6-4 junior; Manuel Heusman, a 6-3 junior; Bud Koper, a 6-5½ sophomore; and Gary White, a 6-6 junior.

Jones was the team leader and averaged 14 points per game last year. Number two man was Hill, with a scoring average of 12 points.

In their first encounter with the "Chieftains" the Seminoles downed the Oklahoma team 99-74. This game sent FSU into the number one spot in the nation in percentage shooting. The tribe hit an outstanding 59.4 percent of its shots.

OCU has played such teams as TCU, Baylor, SMU, Miami, and Wyoming.

Dave Fedor was Florida State's bright spot Monday night when the tribe suffered a 75-69 defeat at the hands of Clemson University in their second encounter with the South Carolina team. The first game an 82-77 Clemson victory, in a double overtime, was played in Tully gym.

Fedor scored 22 points on eight out of 18 attempts from the floor and six for six from the foul line. He also netted 7 rebounds for the evening.

Second high for the Seminoles was Dale Reeves with 19 points. Ray Swain was third high with 10 points.

The top scorer for the "Country Gentlemen" was Jim Brennan with 26 points to his credit. Manning Privette and Nick Milasnovich each had 16 points.

FSU was able to hit only 48.1 percent of its shots from the floor. While Clemson lead with 49.2 percent.

Florida State has an overall record of 5 wins and six losses. The Seminoles opened with with Ohio State losing 57-72. Traveling to Wisconsin the Tribe was edged 64-63. Returning home the quintet won over Rice 75-56.

Playing arch rival the University of Florida the Seminoles came out on the upper end 85-71. Auburn met defeat on their own court 56-52. In their first contest with Clemson FSU lost 82-77. Traveling to Tennessee the Seminoles won 69-62. On a return bout with Auburn the Tribe lost 57-62.

Evening up their series record with Oklahoma City the Tallahasseeans were a 99-74 victor. Furman defeated the cagers 64-67 Clemson upended the tribe in their second encounter 69-75.

The Seminoles played Rollins College last night but the results are not available due to the game's being played after press time.

Frosh Take On Gulf Coast

By JOHN WOOD
Flambeau Sports Writer

[illegible] a spotless 6-0 record, [illegible] at the expense of such [illegible] conscious schools as University of Florida and [illegible] Junior College, the [illegible] of the Florida Freshman Basketball team on luckless Gulf Coast Junior college this Friday the 12th in Gymnasium at 7:45 p.m. [illegible] by Fred [illegible] [illegible] years have this one is the young braves have also met up with 3 other Junior Colleges and the Pensacola Navy Base Goshawks coming out top man on the totem pole in all of the frays. Big Chief Powers has nothing but cautious praise for the team and its effort. "This team has good depth. There are no outstanding men, but several have good possibilities." Compared to the teams he has produced in [illegible] "all the way around stronger. They are better shooters, percentage wise, and have more speed."

The team is usually as big as their Junior College opponents, but they were outsized by the University of Florida Freshman Basketball team, called the "Best Freshman team in the nation" by Florida Coach Norman Sloan.

The Seminoles met and conquered the Gators by 7 points on December 7 at Gainesville, with the Gators out-rebounding and taking 15 more shots than the Baby Seminoles.

Like their older brothers on the Varsity, the young bucks use the "shuffle pattern" in their games, with a good degree of efficiency. They are taught to make every shot count, and are currently hitting between 48 and 49 per cent of their shots from the floor. They often utilize the Full Court Press in the tight games. For those readers who do not know what is meant by the "shuffle," Coach Powers defined it as "a continuous pattern of play. Every time something happens, it is keyed.

Everyone knows what is going to happen. What does happen depends on what the man defensing the play does. A never ending pattern, it utilizes passing the ball rather than dribbling, for a ball can be passed to another spot more quickly than it can be dribbled over." He compared it to a football team that only huddles about every tenth play, putting one play into progress as soon as another is over. "The shuffle calls for personnel capable of playing all five spots on the court."

The team members are: Ray Beach; Ken Black; Tony Blauvelt, Bob Gemming, a lanky 6' 7" center; Pete Gonzalez; Val Hinton; Cal Huge, a 6'4" forward who leads the team in the rebounding department; Floyd Lorenz; Tom Lund, a 6'4" guard; Jerry Shirley, a forward standing 6'5" tall, and Ross Winter, a 6'3" guard. The latter two, beside being the team's leading scorers, came from the same high school in Mobile, Alabama.

The big team weaknesses, as seen by Coach Powers, are the lack of the fast break after rebounding the ball and the lack of outstanding defensive play by the inside men.

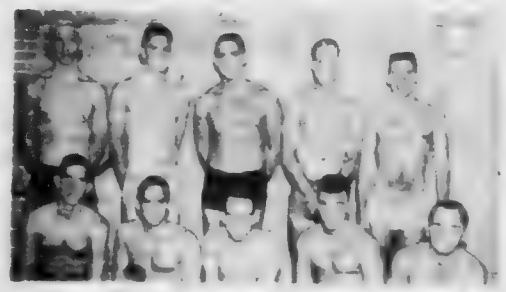
The Florida State Seminole Swimming Team won its centenial meet Wednesday night in Montgomery pool 67-28.

Head Coach Bim Stults was presented with a plaque by Paul Thompson and Tommy Mew on behalf of the team. Stults, now in his fourteenth year as varsity swimming coach has compiled a record of 100 wins, 18 losses and two ties. Coach Stults expressed his feelings about the plaque by saying, "It is a result of hundreds of miles of swimming by hundreds of boys.

"It is a spirit that has been passed on from team to team during my 13 years serving as varsity coach. I was very appreciative of the boys' feelings. I am really privileged to work with such fine people."



Thompson won the 22 yard butterfly and set a meet record. The old record stood at 2:19.3. Thompson's new record sliced 10 seconds off this time to give him the meet record of 2:09.3. Risto Pyykko set this record last year.

Mew won the 200 yard individual medley with 2:19.7 and was one of four on the 400 yard freestyle relay which turned in a time of 3:42.9.

In the 400 yard medley relay another new meet record was set at 4:1.3. Composing this relay team was Pete Davis, Bill Lawrence, Pete Combes and Alan Rolles. Last year Carl Buttler, Risto Pyykko, Bob Abstein and Jim Fisher set the record at 4:7.8.

The Georgia freshmen were defeated by the Florida State freshmen 74-20. Coach Stults stated. "We are very pleased with their (freshmen's team) progress." The Freshman team will be swimming against Georgia Military Academy Jan. 27. According to Coach Stults, "GMA is the strongest prep school in the United States. They always have a good team; in fact, they were national prep school champions about two years ago.

The Varsity will be swimming against Georgia Tech also Jan. 27. Coach Stults remarked, "We were pleased with their performance, but we will have to improve greatly to achieve as well as we would like."

Coed Bowlers Place In Meet

By SHIRLEY HARDISON
Flambeau Sports Writer

Becky Brown and Rose Ann Dean placed high bowling scores in the National Intercollegiate Postal American Ten Pin Tournament which Florida State participated in December 1-20, to lead their team in placing fourth in the national rating.

More than 25 teams are entered in the B division, which is a three game series. Division A is the two game series; no team may enter two divisions.

Miss Brown placed second in the high individual single game with a score of 210. Miss Dean was seventh in the high individual three-game series with a score of 511, an average of over 170. The games will extend through April of 1962, dividing the periods into four time lengths. The second period will begin February 1 and will end Feb. 28.

KA'S LEAD FRAT. LEAGUES

Kappa Alpha, copping titles in five out of six sports in the fraternity intramural leagues thus far, is favored to win the coveted sports award which is given to the top team each year in fraternity action during the sports seasons. Kappa Sigma won the tennis title, both singles and doubles competition, to place fifth behind the strong Kappa Alpha teams.

The Physical Education Majors are leading in the dorm-independent league, scoring title wins in four sports to date. The Villagers have won two events, the horseshoe and tennis doubles competition, while the Geology club was triumphant in the tennis singles rivalry and the Baptist Union succeeded in gaining the doubles table tennis title.

RAG TAG STARTS

The fraternities and the dorm-independent leagues have begun action in flag football. In the Garnet League of the fraternity action, Sigma Chi and Alpha Tau Omega are the only undefeated teams with Phi Delta Theta, Theta Chi, Kappa Sigma and Pi Kappa Phi having an even 1-1 record. In the Gold League Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Sigma Phi Epsilon have won both games while Lambda Chi Alpha and Dalta Tau Delta have a record of 1-1. Results from dorm-independent flag football was available at press time.

Linkers Look To Tournaments

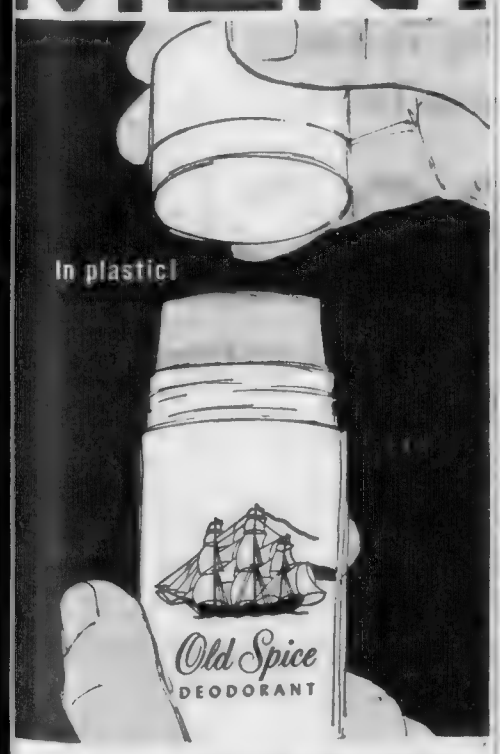
Not to be satisfied with single games with other colleges, teh Florida State Golf team, under the guidance of Bill Odeneal, is shooting for the moon. This season, the team will participate in three Inter-Collegiate tournaments.

The first chance for the team to show it's skill will be in the Florida Inter-Collegiate Tournament betwen Florida colleges, t be held in Ocala on March 15, 16, 17 From this meet they take a big hop to Houston, Texas for the Houston All-American Inter-Collegiate Invitational Tournament, scheduled for March 28-31. Later on in the season, May 2-5, they conclude their efforts in the Southern Inter-Collegiate get together, to be held at Athens, Georgia under teh auspices of the Southeastern Conference.

Tabbed by Coach Odeneal as the top boys on the varsity are: Bryan Bergeron, Chuck Keating, Manny Nordone and Dave Onstead. The top freshman golfer is John Kindred, a Canadian champion who has shot in the low 60's.

The team practices every day for about 4 hours at the Capitol City Country Club, their home course. Of the team, Coach Odeneal says "They are a great bunch of boys and have a lot of confidence."

Racquettes Hold Tryout



The Racquettes plan to hold their second tryouts of the year early next semester. According to Miss Ann Lankford, sponsor of the group, any girl interested in trying out for the club should either take the intermediate course in tennis from 3:30-4:30 or leave this time open on their schedule of classes. The team practice is conducted at this time and many of the girls are earning a half credit in physical education during their practice hours.

Planets May Give Clues To Evolution

Space investigation of the so-called "lifeless planets" of the universe may yield valuable information on the biochemical evolution of life, Dr. Sidney Fox, director of Florida State University's new Institute of Space Biosciences, told an American Association for the Advancement of Science meeting in Denver, Colo., during the Christmas holidays.

Dr. Fox is one of some 6,000 scientists who cut short their Christmas holidays to attend the annual AAA meeting.

In presenting a paper at a symposium on Space Biochemistry Biology, he said:

"One may anticipate that the study of extraterrestrial organic chemisms on lifeless planets in the universe may provide special information, which would be particularly valuable to compare with chemical systems found in organisms.

"If the principle of 'unity of biochemistry,' as so often enunciated, applies extraterrestrially as it does terrestrially, we should eventually be able to identify a chemical groundplan on other life-bearing planets similar to, or different from our own."

A survey of planets which could eventually be stated to have no life should prove especially informative, according to Dr. Fox.

"With data from a sufficient number of planets," he said "one should be able to ask and to answer such questions as: Is a particular chemical system capable of yielding life? Did any self-generating chemisms fail to do so? Have any such chemical systems not evolved far enough, or have any such yielded life which could not be maintained?"

"In both the biological and pre-biological phases, we would hope to be able to fix increasingly the actual and allowable borders of biochemical evolution," he said.

New 'Bullet' Forged By Van de Graaff Scientists

Florida State University scientists have forged a new "bullet" for their tandem Van de Graaff accelerator and have expressed hope it will blast open a wider section of the atomic nucleus they are studying.

The sharpnosed new projectile is Helium 3, a rare isotope even lighter than the commonly known lighter-than-air helium gas, Helium 4, the latter gas has been used in the 12 million volt accelerator for about a year.

The newly used gas has two protons which may be detached from the one neutron and injected by means of a high voltage jolt into a target nucleus.

UNCHARTED TERRITORY

Dr. G. M. Temmer, professor of physics and physicist in charge of the tandem Van de Graaff program at FSU, said the introduction of two protons into a nucleus frequently leads to uncharted territory in mapping the nuclear structure.

Both Helium 4 and Helium 3 have been used as projectiles in other accelerators but their use at FSU is the first in a tandem machine which has the virtue of carrying precision studies of the nucleus into a fruitful energy range between four and 20 million volts. FSU had the second tandem in this country and there are now about a dozen over the world.

"The new projectile is very reactive and is able to initiate many interesting and unexplored nuclear reactions," said Temmer.

"For instance Dr. H. S. Plendl and Dr. J. W. Nelson and their graduate students of the Physics Department are interested in producing new radioactive isotopes by introducing two protons at the same time while letting the neutron fly by.

"In some other cases, when a neutron and a proton are taken from the He-3 particle, the remaining proton will retain tremendous energies, up to 40 millions volts when bombarding with 20 million volt particles."

ORDINARY HELIUM

The discovery that Helium 4—ordinary helium gas — could be used in the tandem was made just a year ago, scarcely six months after the new million dollar machine was placed in full operation.

This discovery of several months ago — from an idea advanced by a graduate student—enabled the physicists to concentrate on a study of the alpha particle. The alpha or nucleus of the helium atom is one which can be utilized to great advantage as a projectile because it does not spin like other particles and it can be accelerated to energies of 18 or 20 million volts on the 12 million volt accelerator.

The new isotope, Helium 3, has only recently become inexpensive enough to use. Only a few years ago this rare gas cost $15 per cubic centimeter but recent developments by the Atomic Energy Commission have brought the cost down to only 15 cents an hour. FSU Head Accelerator Engineer Terry Cole found that FSU's accelerator could operate with this gas at less than $1 an hour.

DISCOVERY

The discovery that Helium 3 could be successfully used in the tandem was made Jan. 5, at 11 p.m. Temmer and a group of associates set the controls for the trial run, turned the necessary dials and then huddled about the closed circuit television set in the control room.

FSU Scientist

Sheline Discovers Nuclei

The discovery of a new family of football-shaped nuclei — these are the center parts of atoms — has been announced by Florida State University scientist Raymond K. Sheline.

The first football-shaped nuclei were discovered some years ago by Dr. Aage Bohr of Copenhagen, Denmark and for three years Dr. Sheline, who is professor of chemistry and physics at FSU, worked with Bohr and his father, Nobel-prizewinner Nils Bohr, in the Institute for Theoretical Physics at Copenhagen.

Dr. Sheline's family of football-shaped nuclei differs from the older variety in that it does not occur in nature but is produced only by nuclear accelerators. The three nuclei are unstable and decay in one, six and a half and five minutes, respectively.

POSTULATED EXISTENCE

The FSU scientist postulated the existence of the new nuclei and with co-researchers Torbjorn Sikkeland, of Norway, a nuclear chemist, and Richard N. Chanda, a graduate student at the University of California, ran a series of four experiments at the Lawrence Radiation Laboratory of the University. Their discovery was reported today in Physical Review Letters.

Most nuclei are spherical in shape but certain regions of nuclei are football shaped. The first discovery of the elipsoid nuclei was by Bohr and an American associate, Ben Mottelson.

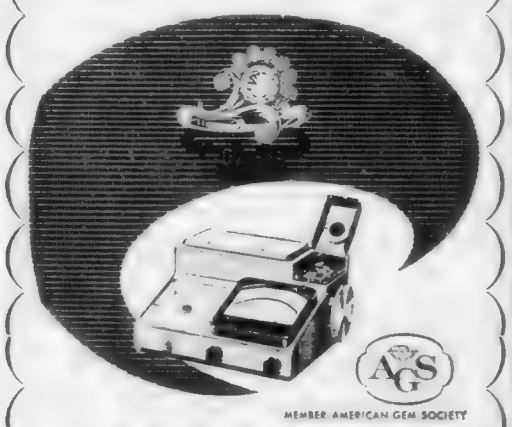
The new nuclei are made by bombarding antimony with carbon nuclei. In the process, lanthanum nuclei are formed. The decay into Barium nuclei, and study of the radiations emitted in the decay process revealed the fact that the barium nuclei are football shaped.

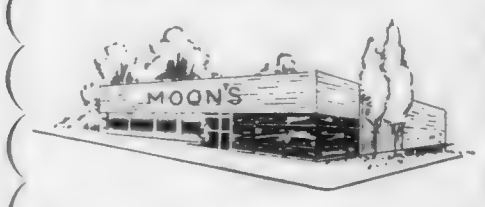
MAY FIND OTHERS

The discovery is likely to lead to finding many additional football-shaped nuclei. Only a few accelerator at the Radiation Laboratory and one at Yale University are capable of making the new nuclei.

Dr. Sheline, who has been on the FSU faculty since 1951, is well known for a number of research finds, including discovery of radioactive isotopes such as magnesium - 28, an important radioactive tracer.

Peace Corps Uses Graduate





Another Florida State University graduate, Ray T. McEachern, is now on active duty with the Peace Corps. He has been assigned to San Jose Camarines, Norte, in the Philippines.

McEachern has received four months of special training including two months of training in the Philippines learning about Philippine culture and society.

Part Of Call Street To Close Weekdays

Tanner Proclaims Action Necessary For Safety Of Campus Pedestrians

A two block section of Call St. between Dewey St. and Collegiate Way will be closed beginning tomorrow between 8 a. m. and 5 p. m. on weekdays.

This has brought about several changes in the [illegible] traffic around the campus, William A. Tanner, FSU Security Officer, announced.

The closing of Call St. has become necessary for the safety of students and University personnel who make up most of the heavy pedestrian traffic crossing Call St.

BARRICADES

Barricades will be placed immediately west of Dewey St. and just east of Collegiate Way at 8 a. m. each weekday morning. The barricades will be removed just before 5 p. m.

Call St. will be open to vehicular traffic at all other times.

The plan has been approved by the Tallahassee City Commission and the University Traffic Committee. Traffic studies show that the pedestrial crosswalk at Call and Collegiate Way carries the heaviest pedestrian traffic crossing Call St., Tanner said.

"We realize that certain inconveniences to motorists are created," he added. "However, this plan is designed to offer the greatest possible convenience to the entire University family while serving the interest of pedestrian safety and speed," he continued.

RECOMMENDS THAT:

For the smoothest possible campus flow of traffic under the plan, Tanner recommends that:

1. West - bound motorists approaching Dewey St. should turn right (north) on Dewey St. and continue west on either Palmetto Way or West Tennessee.

2. East - bound motorists approaching Collegiate Way should turn right (south) on Collegiate Way which has been changed to a one-way street for traffic moving south instead of north. Motorists can then drive to the Women's Gymnasium, the Library, women's residence halls or any location west of Dogwood Way.

After entering the campus via Call St. and Collegiate Way, persons driving in the Westcott area will leave the campus at the South Gate and re-enter the campus at the Westcott Gate. Persons driving in the Westcott area from Call St. and Woodward Ave. will be able to drive through the Parking Lot east of the Post Office to Palmetto Way and continue to the Westcott area by a normal route.

3. East - bound through traffic approaching the intersection of Call St. and Woodward Ave. will be directed by an overhead sign to either turn left (north) on Woodward Ave. and continue travel on Tennessee St., or to turn right (south) on Woodward Ave. and continue east - bound travel on Jefferson St. or Pensacola St. By following these directions, motorists traveling beyond the campus will not become involved in campus traffic.

The buses serving the campus will observe the following routes:

Buses will depart from Stop No. 1 (on Ivy Way at the rear of Westcott) and travel via Ivy Way and University Way to Stop No. 2 near the entrance to Broward Hall; leave campus at the South Gate and travel west on Jefferson St., then north on Woodward Ave. to Stop No. 3 near the intersection of Woodward Ave. and Call St.); travel west on Call St. to Stop No. 4 at Smith Hall, terminus of the west - bound route.

The east - bound bus route will begin at Smith Hall and travel east on Call St. to Stop No. 5 at the Student Center; leave the campus at the west side of the [illegible] lot [illegible] Ave. [illegible] Tennessee to Dewey St. to Stop No. 6 (near the intersection of Dewey and Call); and then proceed via Call St. and Ivy Way to Stop No. 1 at the rear of Westcott.

NO OTHER STOPS

"All bus stops have been located [illegible] to passengers and at the same time [illegible] will [illegible] has been."

Tanner also reported that the regulation on two-hour limited [illegible] has been enforced from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m., has been amended by the Traffic Committee.

Twenty Campus Fallout Shelters Now Stocked With Food, Water

The 20 campus fallout [illegible]kers for students, faculty and staff have been [illegible]ked with food, water other supplies, Florida [illegible]ety and Civil Defense [illegible]ordinator William H. [illegible] announced.

United States and State Civil Defense officials have said that they do not believe Tallahassee would be a target area in the event of a nuclear attack, Watson said. "However, military installations and industrial centers would probably be target areas," he added. "Should this be the case the Tallahassee area would receive fallout, and this could cause illness or death to unprotected persons," he explained.

PLANS MADE

"For these reasons," Watson said, "we would like each person on campus to be aware of plans that have bees taken for his personal safety."

The FSU shelters, stocked with food, water, medical and sanitary supplies and radiation detectors, will accomodate about 10,000 persons. Watson stressed the importance of all persons knowing the location of their assigned shelters.

All day students should report to any of the following shelter buildings: Tully Gymnasium, Kellum Hall, Smith Hall, the Library, Landis Hall, the Faculty Club, the Music Bldg. or the Math - Meteorology Bldg.

Students who live in dormitories, chapter houses, scholarship houses, Alumni Village, Mabry Heights, University Trailer Park and the University Hospital should follow instructions on posters located in their living areas.

Faculty and staff members, all assigned to particular shelters, should follow Civil Defense instructions posted at the entrance of the building where they have offices or work.

IN EMERGENCY

In an emergency, each student is requested by the Civil Defense officials to take the following equipment, when possible, to the shelter: any special medicine, a toothbrush, a transistor radio, a towel, a blanket, one change of clothing, reading material and playing cards.

Specialized training programs for shelter officials have been under way since September, said Watson. Assigned to each shelter are two wardens, two trained nurses, one monitor, one policeman and two maintenance men.

Shelters

Buildings and shelter areas; Kellum Hall 4, Smith Hall 4, Nuclear Building 2, Landis Hall 4, Library 1, Men's Gym 1, Longmire 3, Dining Hall (Faculty Club) 1.

Overflow: Florida Hall 1, Dorman Hall 1, Graduate Basement 1.

Additional monitors are now being trained and will be assigned to the shelters, Watson added.

Emergency headquarters will be ot the Nuclear Research Bldg. Officials will be able to contact each shelter by telephone, two-way radio or by a two-channel walky-talky. Transistor radios will also be at the Nuclear Research Bldg.

According to the Civil Defense Manual, "Personal Preparedness in the Nuclear Age," "A major principle of fallout protection is

Ex-Professor Died Jan. 6

Dr. Harold F. Richards, retired FSU physics professor, was found dead in a small cottage near Carabelle Beach, Jan. 6, by a Negro caretaker.

Investigating officers said that Dr. Richards had apparently fallen on an electric heater. His body was partially cremated. All indications showed the death to be accidestal, Dale Croy, an investigator for the State Attorney's office, said.

Dr. Richards joined the FSCW faculty in 1925 as a physics professor. He served as head of the Physics Dept. from 1929 until 1952 when he retired for health reasons.

While at Florida State Dr. Richards served as first faculty chairman of student publications. He was the author of The Universe Surveyed, a widely used textbook in physical sciences.

Dr. Richards was a member of the American Physical Society, American Association of Physics Teachers, American Association of University Professors, Florida Academy of Sciences and Phi Beta Kappa.

On Feb. 15, they will present Mozart's overture from the Marriage of Figaro; Symphony No. 4 in D, 43, by Sibelius; and the Die Meistersinger by Wagner.

Tickets are available at Westcott Ticket Office for both performances.

FOUNDED IN 1914

Founded in 1914, the Detroit Symphony Orchestra has emerged into a period of new strength and stature after several great eras.

The first of these eras was its golden age. The orchestra was conducted by Ossip Gabrilowitsch from 1918 until his death in 1935. The second phase began in 1943, when the group was directed by Karl Krueger. During this period, Henry Reichold financially supported the orchestra. In 1949, The Detroit Symphony Orchestra was forced to close because it had no financial support. With the assistance of John B. Ford, the orchestra received in 1951 an unprecedented financial security. No one person, however, owns the Symphony Orchestra, it belongs to everyone in Detroit.

The organization was able to attract such renowned figures as concertmaster Mischa Mischakoff, violinist Gordon Staples, flutist Albert Tipton and conductor Paul Paray.

'Highwaymen' Folk-Singing Quintet Of Honor Students, To Perform Here

Tickets for the performances of The Highwaymen at Florida State University, Feb. 16, go on sale today at Westcott Ticket Office.

Tickets for the Student Artist Series sponsored show are $2 for students and $2.50 for non-students. There will be no reserved seats and no exchange of tickets.

The folk singing quintet, which broke the million mark in record sales with "Michael," will give performances at 7 and 9 p. m., in Westcott Auditorium.

COLLEGE STUDENTS

The Highwaymen are actually college students — all senior honor students at Connecticut's Wesleyan University. They began their singing career performing unofficially in their fraternity-house basement.

All five play the guitar and beyond that they diversify into a variety of instruments that includes a five-string banjo, recorder, autoharp, maracas, a ten-string South American charango made from an armadillo shell and a Nigerian talking drum.

Singing in English, French, Hebrew, and Spanish, the group is a kind of Kingston Quintet doing a wide range of folk songs, American and foreign.

INTERESTS

Strangely enough, David Fisher, the group's musical arranger, is the only Highwaymen seriously interested in music. Of their singing, says Chan Daniels, another member, it is just "a hobby in overdrive".

Outside the folk singing realm, Daniels is president of Wesleyan's International Relations Club. Bob Burnett, another member of

U.S. Hypocrisy Showing

Though the recent United States trade embargo of Cuba will weaken the Communist regime and the island economically—hurting its effort of infiltrating South America—United States action at the Punta del Este meeting of the Organization of American States provided grist for the Communist propaganda mill. Castro has continually screamed that "Yankee-imperialism" is threatening South America and US action at the OAS meeting gave an instance to back up his claim.

The United States had its hypocrisy showing at the OAS gathering. After making gains in South America with the idea of North Americans and South Americans walking hand-and-hand in an "Alliance for Progress", the United States then used its great political prestige and the lure of possible economic aid as a wedge to throw Cuba out of the OAS.

THE SIGNIFICANT happening was the refusal of six of the larger Latin American nations to go along with the "get-tough policy" pushed by the US. Among these were Argentina and Brazil, two countries which the United States has taken great pains to woo.

The reason for their refusal was that OAS sanctions against Castro were contrary to the policy of self-determination, a policy these countries hold sacred. Their claim was weak considering that only with a stretch of terms could one contend that a dictator-determined country is the same as self-determined one. But, by refusing to sanction Cuba, these countries served warning that they would be exercising the right of self-determination and had no intention of being led by the US.

THE SOUTH AMERICANS were telling the United States one thing: Deal with us as equals or don't deal. The US should have learned this long ago. The policy of looking down its nose at the Latin Americans has long hurt SA-US relations.

The trade embargo is justified. The United States is an individual nation with national interests. An embargo weakening an enemy and keeping Castro from spreading his infiltration throughout the hemisphere is in the national interest. Communist countries, which are virtually supporting the island nation, will be burdened in keeping the country economically stable. Without extensive Communist aid, Castro could not have retained power as long as he has. Eventually, it is very possible that the Communist bloc, already hurting economically itself, will have to cut support causing Castro to topple. Until then, Cuba is an expensive drag on the Communists.

But in dealing with other South American countries the United States must treat them as equals. A hand-in-hand relationship does not mean a US hand pulling a South American hand along a course the US plots.

Lensen Talk Promising

Sincere, patriotic Americans genuinely concerned with the welfare of their nation in its struggle against world Communism will turn out to hear Dr. George Lenson, professor of history, give his "Last Lecture" at 8 p.m. Thursday in Opperman Music Hall. The address will be part of the excellent series annually sponsored by Mortar Board.

His talk, "The Nature of the Soviet Challenge," promises to be one of the most illuminating, informative addresses concerning Communism presented in this area. For, unlike the majority of would-be Communist witch hunters, Dr. Lenson knows what he is talking about.

Dr. Lenson is emminently qualified to discuss the Soviet challenge. He spent Spring semester of last year in the Soviet Union as a post-doctoral student and a participant in the official Soviet-American Educational Exchange Program, living at Leningrad University. He has lived with Russian people; talked with them; and studied their political, economic, and sociological systems. He can speak knowledgably about the ins-and-outs of that country.

It is a rare opportunity in this age of "Anti-Communism" rallies and violent accusations to hear a calm, intelligent address on Communism. The opportunity should not be missed.

Cummings And Progress

Famed poet E. E. Cummings, one of the few living American writers in his field of any particular note, is currently undergoing an indignity typical of "progress" in particular and the national attitude toward prominent men of letters in general.

A LONG TIME RESIDENT of Greenwich Village, Mr. Cummings has been faced with eviction from his dwelling since last October, victim of heavy handed authority that can't see beyond the next spool of red tape.

The city of New York has gotten around to requiring certain measures be taken where indoor plumbing is concerned. Mr. Cummings lives in a house that "must have" two bathrooms regardless of the fact that only he and his wife live there. The landlord, of course, has a couple of costly choices: he can plumb away as directed, or he can go to the considerable time and expense required to have his property designated as belonging in another dwelling category that would get around the plumbing requirements.

SUCH IS THE HARRASSMENT of E. E. Cummings. Were he married to a mammalian movie actress, the public would have risen in vehement revolt and denounced everyone connected with thei affair. Political careers would be at stake; commissioners would shiver behind the glare of their mahogany desks. And sooner or later they'd go way and leave the Cummings family alone.

But Cummings is only a foremost living American writer. Possibly, since he works with words and all that they can mean, he is considered a proper target for inconvenience and should be regarded with deep dyed suspicion.

IN MANY COUNTRIES Cummings would be regarded with at least minimum awe and respect. Not many officials would dare molest a well known poet in other western nations.

If Mr. Cummings is evicted, what will the city of New York have proved? Only that it has chosen to shove an elderly couple about with its civic rightousness. Better it hould be commissioning Mr. Cummings to write something on other municipal weak points . . . for instance, the welfare situation.

The Illusion Of Food Service

The fraternity boys, social butterflies and pampered dandies who dominate our Student Government do not have to eat on campus. Associate Deans, Deputy Bursars, Assistant Housing Directors, Professor of Cosmic Force, and other Powers That Be do not have to eat on campus Tally-Ho editors, Flambeau columnists, Legend contributors, Smoke Signals writers, inscribers on restroom walls, and other alleged molders of public opinion usually do not have to eat on campus. In fact, it seems that none who has the slightest say-no or influence over the operation of FSU's so-called Food Service has to eat regularly the dreary product of that institution.

THERE ARE STUDENTS who are not so fortunate. They are forced to join the FSU Food Plan-forced by economic necessity. Often they are the students who are in college at great sacrifice to themselves and to their parents. They are here because they value an education so highly that they are willing to work long hours, to go heavily in debt, and to do whatever else is necessary to earn their way through school. Theirs is an austere existence. Ads for the "latest college fashions" don't concern them. Who can afford them? the campus movie is often the extent of their entertainment. Food? There is no real choice but to join the Food Plan.

Lacking cars, they are pretty much restricted to dining on campus, where the prices charged to those not on the food plan make it financially impossible to do anything but suffer along another semester with Morrisons.

"SUFFERING" MAY NOT be quite adequate to describe student reaction to Morrison's on-campus efforts. Lines are long, service is poor; that is taken for granted. Personnel, except for those at the Soda Shop, are generally best described as sullen. A customer entering one of the Food Plan establishments is greeted, after a slight delay in line, by a pool of water and a stack of wet trays. One Gilchrist coed recently set a new record by dumping 37 pints of murky water, a pickle and assorted crumbs off her "clean" tray. Proceeding through the line, the customer passes the salads, some of which are visible to the naked eye, and the desserts, some of which are not.

But it is in the meat courses that the skill of Morrison's chefs is most apparent. They have amply demonstrated during the past semester 1001 ways to disguise a one-ounce serving of ground beef, how to serve a multitude on chicken pot pie without tiring the poor chicken, which apparently walks back and forth amidst the stewing vegebables which, together with the crust and some grease, constitute that dish as envisioned by the gourmets of the Seminole Club. And so it goes, from the cold rolls through the "tead ice." What is supposed to make all of this bearable, somehow, is the fact that students are allowed to pay in advance for the privilege of sticking their snouts in the trough.

ACTUALLY, THE situation continues because the students who are on the food plan have no real choice about the matter and because they have no voice with which to protest. Meanwhile, the university authorities are sincerely under the illusion that everything is now all right — that everybody is happily well-fed.

A few years ago they were under no such illusion. When the University - operated, non-profit food service was turned over to a profit - making firm, the prices became so outrageous and the quality of the food declined so markedly that the students were near revolt. Someone conjured up the food plan to pacify them, and on paper it sounded like a good idea. It still sounds like a good idea to those who do not have to eat its offerings regularly, day in and day out, month after month.

THE PROBLEM HAS only been swept under the rug, however, it still exists. The university has a definite responsibility to provide low-cost, quality food for the students. It is completely shirking this responsibility by turning over to a private, profit-seeking firm a service which it should operate on a non-profit basis. With college expenses rising, costs are high enough for students without the additional burden of fattening the pocketbooks of Morrison's stockholders.

In spite of this, the University will probably do nothing. The Byrd Watching Society will do nothing. You can do something, however. If you are forced to eat the product of the co-called Food Service, and you are dissatisfied, write your thoughts on any handy scrap of paper and send them through the campus mail to this columnist in care of the Flambeau. They will not go unheeded.

Welcome Back, Sort'a

How nice for you! Back at good ol' FSU for another semester of scholarly shenanigans. Like becoming addicted to bad coffee, power failures, stairs, stairs, stairs, stairs, and now and then for variety, a ride in the Bullet, the Westcott version of an elevator. Whatever you do while at FSU, don't miss riding that conveyance. Nothing moves that slow, not even classes.

AND THEN THERE are the people. Good one, bad ones asd those that are trying. Some wear circle pins, conical or bubble hairdo's, jump boots, or silly grins. Now and then you see someone in a suit and you can generally deduce that that one is probably a dean. Everyone else wears whatever they fell into when they fell out of bed in the morning.

Instructors are another lot. You can't tell anything about them as a rule, including the point they may be trying to make. That's where the Dean's have it all over the prof's . . . they know how to make a point. One day when my nerve is solidified, I will make up and distribute a list of professors to avoid.

WHEREVER YOU CAME from, you come at a disadvantageous time for FSU. Seldom have so many people been in the doldrums at one time. It either has something to do with the advance of Spring, or with the recent distribution of the omnipotent grades.

Grades are the worst part of college. They'd be all right if they were given and forgotten, but oh no! They are inscribed is a thousand places to come back and haunt you with every letter from home, every job application, every visit to the counselor. And they offer a fiendish outlet for the downtrodden professor. You can envision half the instructors you know sitting around in that dim den over behind Broward rubbing their hands together in the "can't wait till the end of the semester" fashion and cackling madly every time they look at the mural in the faculty lounge. It's a lovely mural like the ones that used to border the blackboard in grammar school. If looks something like this: AaBbCDd EeFFFFF.

Where'd you think all that professorial inspiration came from?

AFTER GRADES, professors and such, comes Spring. In Tallahassee that can be painful if dampness bothers your bursitis or worse. In the olden days before the praries were criss-crossed with concrete herding devices, students sometimes disappeared in the mud between Longmire and such glamorous places as Conradi, the Strozier Library and other points of occasional interest.

But no matter how occasional your interest, or in what, it's nice you made it back, whether this is your first trip or not. If that doesn't make sense, stay around a while. Nothing else will either.

In Fairness

DEAR EDITOR:

In all fairness to a considerable segment of our student population here at FSU, I must take issue with Mr. Robert Sanchez's sweeping and unreasonable statements regarding fratersal organizations in the Flambeau of January 12th. This type of slander, appearing as it does in a university publication, is totally unnecessary and uncalled for, no matter how strong the feelings of the author.

The only point in Mr. Sanchez's article worth debating is that of whether or not the founders of an organization have the right to determine the racial and religious background of its members. As far as one's father's occupation is concerned, I personally have a fraternity brother who is a carpenter's son, and am quite sure that there are many more fine fraternity men around campus who come from such "inglorious occupational backgrounds.

If the branding of all fraternities as "intellectual slums" is to mean that all such organizations are below average in their scholastics, one has only to check into past records to see that there have always been fraternities above the all-men's average, and it is not always the same ones which remain at the bottom of the list. If all fraternity men were "shallow", as Mr. Sanchez implies, one may look at our campus leaders — in student government, publications, and other extra - curricular activities — to see that very few of them could then be fraternity men—but the facts are quite the opposite.

South Bottles For Yankee Industry

There was a time when the image of the South was a muscular, sweat-beaded Negro bent toiling long, weary hours in the white blanket of cotton fields that stretched out to the horizon.

Only the sweat of hard, honest labor remains for the mutations caused by the rapid influx of industry have almost entirely changed this image. The South is now bent over huge machines which whir out a bright and prosperous future for this tradition-laden land. It is active in the plush conference rooms of sprawling northern business. It is a vigorous, inspired pamphleteer turning out colorful brochures to lure the rich industrial dollar.

The coming of the new, industrial South has caused changes among its leadership. Elected state officials, accustomed to seeking votes (in cornfed counties) by decrying "Damn Yankees and Carpetbaggers," must answer for these epithets in the northern municipalities. The lure of money has done what reason could not—soften the screams of pork politicians who would fight the Civil War again for gain at the polls.

• • • • •

.. THE NEW YORK TIMES recently reported details of the South's search for more industry.

North Carolina offers big business a work force trained at state expense in skills specified by the manufacturer. This is in line with the state's attempts to emphasize education by spending money on schools. Kentucky lures with property-tax exemptions to publicly finance facilities. Ayer, a town of 400 in South Carolina, raised $65,000 to build a plant to lure business and the jobs that go along with it.

The search has paid heaping dividends. A recent Dept. of Commerce report shows that the value added to goods in the manufacturing process increased 120 per cent in the sixteen Southern states and the District of Columbia compared to 90 per cent in the rest of the nation. Expenditures for new plants rose 66 per cent since 1947 while the national outlay climbed only 49 per cent.

There were bountifully more jobs in the South from 1950 to 1960 as manufacturing employment rose 23.9, while the nation's employment moved up only 9.8 per cent.

The South supped on the Yankee dollar and found that it filled bellies—better than grits and hog jowls.

Though great strides have been made, more plowing must be done if the land is to be made rich by industry development. An industry-barren land takes continued toil to bring fertility.

The South's great gains so far have been more comparative than real. It began with a tiny industrial base and therefore had further to go. Per capita income tells this story. Southern income stood a $1,754 in 1960 while the average American was reaping $2,222. And since the South's income pulled down the national average, a North-South income comparison would be both startling and embarrassing.

The labor goes on, but all of this labor is not done in the North. Much of it is done in making the South appealing at the grass roots political level. Equality in process of law, education, and voting, and job opportunities for all Southern citizens has played a major roll. The thought of economic death, such as that which struck Little Rock after the shameful hate riots, cools many a hot Racist's head. An example is Atlanta, which kept its schools open peacefully. As former Mayor William Hartsfield said before the crucial test, "This is a town too busy to hate."

This is becoming true throughout the South. The sometimes latent Southern conscience (and one does exist) is being stirred by industry. The Civil War fighters are on their way out. They are too busy battling for Yankee business.

'Dear Mr. Sanchez' I Invite You . . .

Dear Mr. Sanchez:

It seems that once again you have practiced what appears to be your primary objectice at Florida State University — insulting and degrading groups of which you are not a member through the use of false information and in the light of your own somewhat ill-conceived concepts. Perhaps you receive some degree of pleasure from such contemptible activities, although I should hope this is not the case.

However, I do hope you realise that truth is a word or concept that doesn't often seem to find its way into your writings, this of course being quite obvious to anyone who reads your columns. When your most recent article was brought to my attention, I found that once again you had utilized your Sophist abilities and sour grapes attitude to slander a favorite target-Greeks.

But, Mr. Sanchez, why are you so staunchly against these "organizations which are not open to all members of the public"? Did you forget that you are a member of such an organization? When you were admitted to Florida State University, you were selected from among many other aspirants who were refused admission. Surely you can distinguish between selectiveness and discrimination, Mr. Sanchez.

Finally, to correct a particularly glaring error among many in your last column, both Jewish students and carpenters' sons are included in the brotherhood of Sigma Chi here at FSU. I should also like to take this opportunity to invite you to Sunday dinner at the Sigma Chi house, so that you may meet and judge one group of the "educational parasites" of whom you write. I am not afraid to ask you to judge my brothers as responsible citizens and capable students, Mr. Sanchez. Are you afraid to learn the truth, or are you afraid that thing upon which to base your future columns?

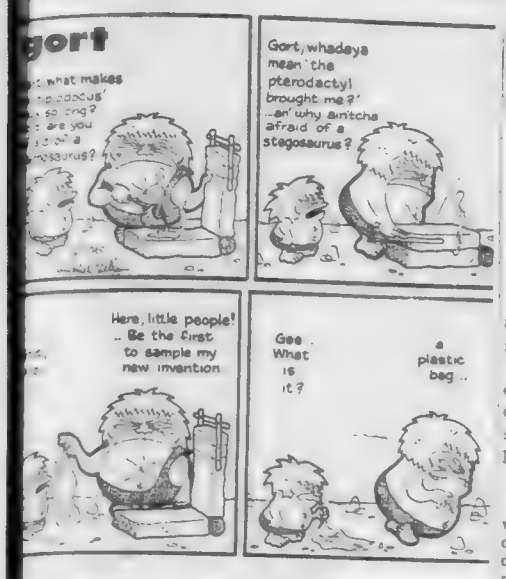
You Blasphemed . . .

DEAR MR. SANCHEZ:

In reply to your article in the January 2, 1962, Flambeau in which you so decidedly condemned the fraternity system, I wish to point out some discrepancies and offer suggestions for your future work.

I make no attempt to argue the relative merits of the fraternal system versus a non-Hellenic campus life. The individual must decide this for himself. Granted, fraternities have their faults. They also have good qualities, a point which you seemed to have forgotten.

The majority of these organizations are not as prejudiced toward minority groups as you pointed out with your crude reference to religion. In fact, the fraternity which you blasphemed has a Jewish member as do others on campus.



The intellectual slum of Fraternity Row also had a higher grade average than the independents last year.

In regard to the limited memberships of these groups, you have applauded the failure of a move which would have caused a great expansion of our system here at FSU. There are many independents who would make fine Greeks. The lack of facilities has closed the door to them. Even so, society is formulated of groups, our church memberships, the office crew, athletic teams, honor societies, political parties, etc. All have certain pre - requisites for membership. Don't we have a right to choose our associates?

I am an independent and proud that the majority of us don't condemn the fraternity system. Only a loud few cause tension between the two groups.

As usual, you have produced a thought provoking article. As usual, your value judgements are based on poor information or no information at all. Your article is typically narrow of scope, and perhaps you are too. Wouldn't you better serve your purpose with facts, fairness, and substance?

'Inside WFSU TV-FM' Opens Thursday In Museum

By MARY ELLEN HARRIS
Flambeau Feature Editor

An exhibit entitled "Inside WFSU-TV-FM" will open Thursday from 7:30 to 9:30 a. m. in the University Museum, second floor Dining Hall. Refreshments will be served at the opening.

The exhibit was designed and executed by Dick Puckett, art director of WFSU-TV. The museum is under the direction of Dr. Hale G. Smith.

PROGRAM PRODUCTION

Framed by a large mock television screen, the displays consist of processes related to the production of radio and television programs. Within the screen is part of a typical set used in the television station as well as cameras, lights, and an "On the Air" sign.

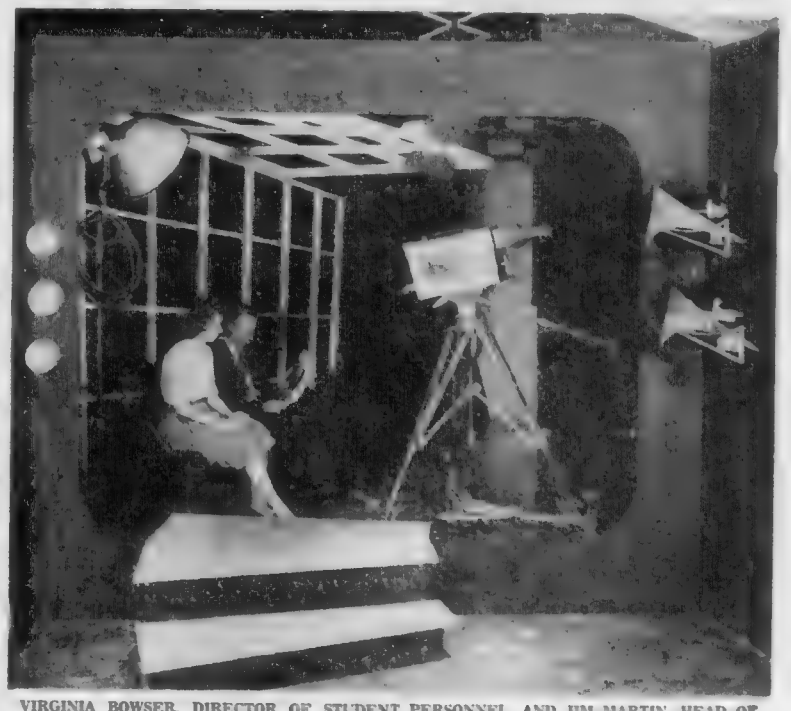
Displays depicting the program areas of WFSU-TV occupy a large portion of the exhibit. A teleprompter machine is shown as well as excerpts from the various programs.

Another part of the exhibit concerns the prize films produced by the University Broadcasing Services. Two of these films were first place winners in the American Film Festival in 1959 and 1960. Another received the top plaque from the National Council on Films for Safety while a fourth received the Certificate of Merit from the Vancouver International Film Festival.

The news sections and the music and art areas are also prominently displayed as well as an explanation of the video tape process in programing.

FILM PROJECTION

A highlight of the exhibit is a series of slides depicting film projection. The faces of Marcel Marceau and several of his contemporaries move slowly across a screen framed within a miniature television set.



An entire section is devoted to the WFSU-FM radio programming and some of the techniques of production.

Another interesting display presents samples of some of the tubes and mechanical instruments involved in production. A replica of the test pattern and a map of the area convered by the present facilities are also shown

MAKE UP SECTION

A final section on make up techniques for television completes the display.

According to Puckett, the exhibit involved about "three weeks of hark, hard work" to set it up. He remarked that he and his assistant started with an entirely bare room and worked from there. The display will run for an indefinite period.

VIRGINIA BOWSER, DIRECTOR OF STUDENT PERSONNEL, AND JIM MARTIN, HEAD OF the photo lab, are framed within the television set for the opening of the "Inside WFSU-TV-FM" exhibit opening at the University Museum Thursday.

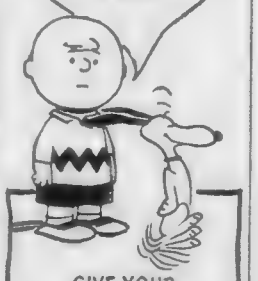
ENGINEERS... SCIENTISTS

You are cordially invited to attend a private interview with a Special Representative of Lockheed Missiles & Space Company. Objective: Pursue mutual interests by examining the almost limitless fields of endeavor being investigated at Lockheed.

Lockheed Missiles & Space Company in Sunnyvale and Palo Alto, California, on the very beautiful San Francisco Peninsula, is constantly probing all the sciences related to missiles and space projects. These cover the complete spectrum—from human engineering through celestial mechanics—providing a fascinating challenge to those whose interests lay beyond the ordinary day-to-day job.



Lockheed, Systems Manager for such projects as the Navy POLARIS FBM and the Air Force DISCOVERER and MIDAS Satellites, is also an important contributor to various NASA programs involving some of the nation's most interesting and sophisticated concepts. As one of the largest organizations of its kind, the Company provides the finest technical equipment available; for example, the Sunnyvale facility houses one of the most modern computing centers in the world. Every opportunity is given members of the technical staff to participate in the initiation of advanced technological developments.

Further, Lockheed strongly encourages continuing education and advanced degree work, maintaining two programs in their support.

- Lockheed's Tuition Reimbursement Program remits seventy-five percent of the tuition for approved courses taken by professional and technical people who are working full time.
- The Graduate Study Program permits selected engineers and scientists of outstanding scholarship and professional potential to obtain advanced degrees at company expense while employed on research assignments.

Anderson Addresses Fall Graduates

A federal program of aid for the social sciences and humanities similar to that of the National Science Foundation, was urged by Dr. Robert C. Anderson, executive vice - president of Auburn University.

He spoke to 384 graduates during mid - winter commencement exercises at Florida State University.

He said there is a real and pressing need in this nation today for a Federal program to further academic disciplines other than science. It would encourage research in the social sciences and humanities, and improve instruction and development of new teaching aids.

"Such a program," he said, "could provide the assistance to colleges for the purchase of books, periodicals and equipment, such as language laboratory equipment, for the humanities and social sciences. It could encourage, through financial assistance, the expansion of existing programs in the social sciences and the humanities, and the establishment of badly needed new programs in those areas."

PROBLEM-SOLVERS

Dr. Anderson noted that throughout American history this nation has been a nation of problem - solvers, solving many of them by war. "We may now be facing a world - wide problem which cannot be solved. The great preponderence of considered opinion is that at least it cannot be solved by war," he stressed.

"Perhaps we as a nation have reached a point in our history where we must bring about a new national orientation. Perhaps we have reached the point where we can no longer put all our effort toward the solution of our problem, but rather put part of our effort toward the discovery of ways to live with it," he said.

"Perhaps we are at the point where the very existence of world civilization depends upon man's ability to adopt to a new world environment rather than to change it," he suggested.

"I am not for a moment suggesting that we give in to our enemies, nor isolate ourselves from the problem and the rest of the world. Nor am I suggesting that the malady from which we suffer is fatal. I am suggesting that perhaps the malady must be listed as 'incurable,' at least until some new and powerful social medicine or method of treatment can be discovered," he concluded.

DEGREES CONFERRED

Following Dr. Anderson's speech, President Gordon W. Blackwell conferred 303 bachelor's degrees, 61 masters degrees and 20 doctorate degrees..

M/Sgt. Richard N. Westaway, of Tyndall Air Force Base, Panama City, Maun McPherson Rudisill of Dalton, Ga., John Price Crews and Eugene C. Edel of Tallahassee and Loise Andrews Ward of Miami graduated cum laude. To receive this recognition, students must have maintained a 3.5 (A-minus) average for their four years.

Mary Catherine Bayfield and Eugene C. Edel received special recognition for their completion of the honors program. Miss Bayfield did her honors thesis on bacteriological research. She will continue her studies as a graduate student at Iowa State University. Edel did his honors thesis in psychology and will continue his studies at Purdue University.

"Even the first floor of an ordinary frame house would offer some protection if the radiation intensity is relatively light," the the manual emphasizes.

All University buildings were surveyed by a consulting engineering firm under the authority of the U. S. Government last summer when FSU began Civil Defense Planning.

The reports were utilized in establishing 20 shelters in 11 buildings on campus.

IS STUDYING NECESSARY?

Once there were three roommates and their names were Walter Peacock, Casimir King and LeRoy Hotchkiss and they were taking English lit and they were all happy-friendly [illegible] types and they all smoked Marlboro Cigarettes as you would expect from such a gregarious trio, for Marlboro is the cigarette of sociability, the cigarette of good taste and good fellowship, the cigarette of [illegible] concord, with the [illegible] and flavor, the king-size and flip-top box, 50¢ at [illegible] and while they were [illegible] find when you smoke Marlboros that the world is a friendly place and everything's just as mellow as can be and peace reigns supreme.

Each night the roommates would come home [illegible] to their room and study English lit. For three hours they sat in sombre silence and pored over their books and then [illegible] and spent, they tossed their pallets and solved [illegible]

This [illegible] obtained through the first semester. Then one night they were [illegible] by a [illegible] versus plea. "We are all studying the same thing," they cried. "Why, then, should each of us study for three hours? We could study for one hour! It is true we will only learn as much that way, but it does not matter because three of us and one hour [illegible] in the arms, we can get together and pool our knowledge."

Oh, what rapture there is in Walter and Casimir and LeRoy!

They flung their [illegible] into the air and danced a gavotte on [illegible] but thirty or forty Marlboros and ran out to pursue the [illegible] which had so long, so latterly, been missing from their [illegible].

Alas, they found instead a series of grisly [illegible]. Walter, alas, went searching for love and was soon going steady with a cool coquet [illegible] of [illegible] alas, hopelessly addicted to bowling. Each night [illegible] five hundred lines, some nights a thousand. Poor Walter's thumb was a shambles and his purse was empty, but [illegible] just kept on bowling and in the end, alas, she left Walter for a pin-setter, which was a terrible thing to do to Walter, especially in this case, because the pin-setter was automatic.

Walter, of course, was [illegible] to study his English lit, but he took some comfort from the fact that his roommates were studying and they would help him before the [illegible]. But Walter, alas, was wrong. His roommates, Casimir and LeRoy, were nature lovers and they used their free time to go for long tramps in the woods and one night, alas, they were treed by two bears, Casimir by a brown bear and LeRoy by a kodiak, and they were kept in the trees until spring set in and the bears went to Yellowstone for the tourist season.

So when the three roommates met before exams to pool their knowledge, they found they had none to pool. Well sir, they had a good long laugh about that and then rushed to the kitchen and stuck their heads in the oven. It was, however, an electric oven and the effects were, on the whole, beneficial. The wax in their ears got melted and they acquired a healthy tan and today they are married to a lovely young heiress named Cordelia Bran and live in the Canal Zone, where there are many nice boats to wave at.

In case you worry about such things, their wife is a Marlboro smoker, too, which adds to the general merriment. Marlboro is ubiquitous, as well as flavorful, and you can buy them in all 50 states as well as the Canal Zone.

Caging 110 points . . edging Miami by a five-point margin . . . losing to the same score as the season opener's . . . and copping a squeaker against Oklahoma City highlighted the recent basketball games that brought FSU's season record to 8-7.

The results of the Houston-FSU contest, which was fought last night in Houston, were not available at press time. Complete coverage will be given in the next issue of the Flambeau.

The Seminole cagers became the 11th team to bowl over the luckless Rollins five when they chalked up a 110-53 victory. Not only did the Seminoles beat Rollins by more than Rollins scored, the Tribesmen also tallied 110 points for the second time in FSU basketball history.

The Seminoles' attack, which upped the field goal average to 51.2 per cent (the best in the nation), was spear-headed by Dave Fedor (16), Dale Reeves (15), Long (14), and Dale Ricketts (13). Rollins got nearly one-half of its points on free throws.

EDGES MIAMI

A near win by the University of Miami Hurricanes was snatched away in the last minutes of the second half when Fedor tied the contest with a field goal and then looped in four free throws. Miami, which was ahead during most of the game, fell, 65-60

The Canes' 7-1 Mike McCoy dropped in 11 of 21 field goal attempts for o 52.4 percent average. The UM unit caged 42.1 percent from the floor to FSU's 35 percent. The Indians sank only 27 percent in the first half.

Florida State's usual nemesis, free throws, did not materialize as FSU canned 23 out of 26 attempts. Fedor hit seven charity tosses for a perfect average.

Julie Cohen, UM's playmaker, looped 17 points and averaged seven out of eight free throws.

The University of Alabama's Crimson Tide swamped the Seminoles, 72-57. This was the same score by which top ranked Ohio State leveled the Seminoles in the season opener.

Ray Swain, who had tied the game, 47-47 whith a jumper, grabbed top scoring honors (19) by canning nine of 12 field goal attempts for 75 percent accuracy.

The halftime score was 30-30.

Alabama shot ahead, 49-47, with over 10 misutes left in the second half when Larry Adcock (18) dropped in a jump shot. The Tribe went cold as ice during the remaining period and scored only four baskets.

There was one bright aspect however.

Fedor came out of the game with a new school record for most field goals scored in a career. The Zephyrhills export scored 15 points— 12 from the field and 3-of-3 at the foul line.

The six buckets set a new FSU career record of 510 which is two points better than Ham Wernke's '52-55 mark. Fedor broke the record in three seasons, after Wernke's had set it in four.

FSU SQUEAKS OCU

Long expolded against the Oklahoma City Chiefs to slice the baskets for 34 points, the most any Tribesman has scored this season in an 81-79 game Saturday night.

It was against OCU that Fedor set a season high of 28 points as he poured in 12 field goals and four free throws in a 99-74 Seminole victory.

Gene Tsoodle, who sank 10-of-14 field goal attempts for OCU,tallied 24 points for second place scoring honors; Larry Jones of Oklahoma City came in third with 21 markers. Jones hit eight of 21 field goal attempts and 5-of-5 free throw tries.

The inspired Long bagged 14 out of 20 on the field and 6-of-8 at the foul line, while Fedor, who totalled 20 points, hit seven of 16 from the floor and 6-of-6 at the foul line.

Swain, who joined Fedor in pulling down 12 rebounds for FSU, looped eight field goals and his only free throw attempt for 20 points. Fedor snd Long helped FSU to win the rebounding battle, 39-33.

The Chiefs led, 49-46, at the half, but they relinguished the margin at the start of the second period. Six minutes before the buzzer, the Seminoles were ahead, 71-64. Jones drove in with a layup to bring the Chiefs within two points of Florida State after Bud Koper and Tsoodle spear-headed an Oklahoma rally.

The OCU unit has a 10-8 record.

Florida State had only a 22-of-39 charity record, but three successful shots toward the end of the wame insured the victory.

Valdosta To Face Seminoles

The Florida State Seminoles will play their seventh home game of the basketball season Thursday night when they face undefeated Valdosta State of Georgia. The Georgians claim a 14-0 record to FSU's 8-7 tally.

Only three more varsity home games are scheduled this year. On Feb. 12, The Tribes will meet Tampa University. The Seminoles lead the series 18-9, but the South Florida squad upset the University of Miami Hurricanes, who nearly defeated FSU this season.

The University of Florida, which adopted FSU's shuffle after their defeat to the Seminoles this season, will face the Tribesmen Feb. 21. The Gators were recently downed by the Ohio State Buckeyes by a smaller margin than their loss to FSU.

The Seminoles broke a 14-game winning streak on the Gators' home court.

Florida State will have a chance of adding to its winning streak against the University of Georgia Bulldogs Feb. 15. Florida State leads the basketball series 10-9 and the school has not lost to Georgia in any sport this year.

Tribesmen Rated 3rd

Florida State's Seminoles, who once held the field goal percentage title in collegiate basketball, have fallen into third place behind Ohio State and North Carolina.

The Seminoles were a fraction shy of capturing second place, having .499 to North Carolina's .500. Ohio State, led by cager Jerry Lucas, is first with a .502 tally.

The Buckeyes, sporting a 16-0 overall record, lead the Big Ten Conference with six wins. The Bucs have racked up 1,371 points to their opponents' 1029. FSU's first defeat of the season was dealt out by the Ohio team.

In the Seminole statistics, Dave Fedor is still winning the scoring battle. The athlete, who has a 19.4 average, has dropped in 233 points from the field and 53 points from the foul line.

His free throw average tops his field goal average, 80.3 to 51.1. He earlier pulled down a season high of 21 rebounds against Rice.

Ray Swain downs seconds place in the scoring bracket. He has hit for 94 points from the field and 39 at the charity line. His overall average is 15.1.

Dick Howser Chosen Top Pro Athlete

Dick Howser, former All-American baseball player from Florida State University and star of the Kansas City Athletics in his rookie year, was named the top Florida professional athlete of the year.

He became the first person to win both the amateur and professional awards in Florida. Howser copped the amateur award after his junior year at FSU.

Howser, who owns the highest average of any shortstop in the American League (.280), was chosen over Joey Jay of the Cincinnati Redlegs.

The former Seminole broke three team records in his rookie year with the A's.

Bill Miller, the All-American end from the University of Miami, edged FSU's Dave Fedor for the amateur prize. Miller, who has been called the greatest end in Miami's history, broke nearly every pass-receiving record in the Hurricanes' book. He caught for 640 yards on 43 attemps last season.

Tankers Seize 5th Straight Swim Meet

Florida State's swim team copped its fifth straight meet of the season by defeating highly-regarded Bowling Green of Ohio, 71-24. The Seminoles were sparked by the double-winning effort of Risto Pyykko, who captured the 200 individual medley title in 2:19.3 and the 200 butterfly in 2:19.1.

Tallahassee's Paul Thompson set a ne w mark while winning the 220 freestyle in 2:07.8.

Lee Bransford broke a meet and a pool record while swimming the 100 freestyle in 50.3. Others to finish first for FSU were Bill Dahl, who took the 440 freestyle in 5:04.4, and Dick Acosta, who won the 200 backstroke in a record-setting time of 2:14.3.

The combined effort of Acosta, Bill Lawrence, Peter Combes, and Bransford in the 400 medley relay established a new school mark of 3:55.1.

During the Seminole's tour of Ohio, the swimmers also defeated Miami University, 65-30, with the record smashing performance of Bransford—who set two school records.

His 22.9 performance in the 50 rewrote Ken Abbot's 23.2 effort of 1958. Bransford's 50.1 timing in the 100 erased Bucky Hiles' 1961 mark of 51.2.

Thompson tallied a meet record in the 220 freestyle with a 2 08.9 time, while Pyykko cracked the 200 butterfly record in 2:18.3.

Bill Dahl finished the 400 freestyle in a record-setting 5:58.5.

Acosta took first place in the 200 backstroke with a 2 18.2 time. Other winners were Tommy New in the 200 individual medley and Mark Owen in the diving.

TECH, TULANE TUMBLE

During the semester break, the tankmen had little trouble dunking winless Georgia Tech, 70-24, and Tulane, 53-40.

Dahl won the 440 freestyle in 5:12.5 against Tech and the 220 freestyle in 2:20.7. Other outstanding FSU performances were two record smashings, one in the 200 individual medley and the other in the 400 medley relay.

Thompson swam the individual medley in 2:10.1, while Acosta, Lawrence, Tommy New, and Pyykko, timed 4:04.6 in the relay.

Tech sparkled when Lawrence Caghan copped the 50 freestyle title in 24.0, a new meet record, and the 100 freestyle in 53.1.

John Jackson, a member of Tulane's winning relay team, proved to be the only double winner in the Tulane-Florida State battle. He finished first in the 440 freestyle with a 5:20.2 time and first in the 200 individual medley with 2:27.0 on the clock.

The Seminoles grabbed seven out of 11 events to win their third victory over an SEC team this season

Last night, the Seminoles met the University of the South at Sewannee, Tenn., but the results were not available at press time.

The FSU frosh team, like the varsity, is also undefeated for the season. During the semester break, the yearlings downed previously undefeated Georgia Military Academy, 71-24, for their second straight triumph.

A new national prep school record was set when GMA's John Kalmbach swam the 200 individual medley in 2:11.9.

Scores 9½ Points

FSU Rates 5th In Indoor Relay

By VICKI WARDEN
Flambeau Sports Writer

Florida State tracksters went up against stiff competition this past week-end in the Coliseum Indoor Relays in Montgomery, Ala.

Picking up 913 points, they finished fifth behind Northeastern Louisiana with 36, the University of Alabama with 24, Auburn with 13, and Furman with 12½, and bettered last year's tally of 8½ points which placed them sixth.

Fifteen schools competed for honors.

Alabama, the winner of last year's Coliseum Relays, had been a strosg favorite to win, but with such cindermen as the outstanding Stryon twins, Northeastern dammed the Crimson Tide. The couple have set several national track records.

Top man for the Seminoles was sophomore Tommy Bourne who tied for first in the high jump with a leap of 6'-2½".

Junior Herb Kraft, who was injured in an automobile accident recently and was not expected to compete, took second in the broad jump at the 22'-10½" mark. Kraft tied the FSU school broad jump record of 23'-3½" twice last season.

Co-captain Jeff Clark put the shot at 50'-3" for a third in his specialty and senior Bill Davis finished fourth in the half mile with a time of 1-59.1. Davis second in the 880 yard dash was the main feature for the Seminoles in the 1961 Relays.

The Seminole line-up for this season is loaded with seniors and Coach Long will be depending quite heavily on them. "If our seniors come through for us," he commented, "we'll have the nucleus of a fine squad.

LONE, LONG WAY

The meet bore out Long's pre-competition prediction.

"We've got a long, long way to bo before the team will be ready for the kind of competition it'll be facing in Montgomery," he said earlier.

"We've got the potential to do the job, but we just haven't had the time to get ready. The fact that our boys have just returned from a semester break has definitely hurt us," he warned.

TO ENTER MASON-DIXON

The thinclad's next meet will be the Mason - Dixon competition, which will be held Feb. 17 in Louisville, Ky. Coach Long said he will enter a mile relay team, whose personnel he has not yet determined.

In addition, Quenton Till, a senior from Coral Gables, will compete in the 600, while Davis runs in the 880.

Peterson's Contract Extended 2 Years

The contract of Coach Bill Peterson was extended two years by the State Board of Control recently. The move, which extended his contract to 1965, was unanimously recommended by the athletic committee of the university.

Peterson's original contract was signed in December 1959, when he replaced Perry Moss as head football coach. Last year, Peterson's salary was raised from $14,000 to $15,000.

The coach, who came to this university from Louisiana State where he was an assistant coach, claims an overall 7-11-2 record at FSU. He finished the first season with a 3-6-1 tally and the second year with a 4-5-1 record.

"We have been entirely satisfied with Mr. Peterson as a coach and with his desire to fit football appropriately into FSU's overall objectives, program, and available financial support," Pres. Gordon W. Blackwell said

The contract extensoin has been viewed as an attempt to relieve some of the pressure on Peterson to come up with a winning season next year. Also, it could make the coach think favorably about staying at the university when the winning season comes.

Next Year, Peterson's Tribesmen will face the Southeastern Conference teams, the most the Seminoles have faced in one season.

The teams include The University of Florida Gators, the University of Georgia Bulldogs, Georgia Tech's Yellowjackets, the Auburn University Tigers, and the University of Kentucky Wildcats.

Republicans Organize

The newly organized Young Republicans feel a definite need exists for a campus interest in the two party system that is rapidly developing in Florida, said Ron Jones, president of the club.

This has been recognized by the apparent increasing Republican response in the last governor's election and by a Republican Congressman from the 10th Congressional District, he added.

At the first meeting, organized by Clark Wylie, the group elected Ron Jones as temporary president. Aiding him will be Tom Crook, secretary and Ed Reid, treasurer.

The meeting included a film, "Operation Shoebox," which was supplied by the Republican National Committee and the Republican Congressional Committee. It stressed the importance of grassroot politics.

The Young Republicans, said Jones, invite all Republicans of the faculty and student body to attend their next meeting, Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the Library Lecture Hall. At this meeting future organizational plans for goals and programs will be made and representatives will be elected to attend the state convention at Gainesville.

Summer Work Is Available

A meeting for anyone interested in summer work in resorts, national parks, camps, hotels, business and industry, or other tourist areas will be held Thursday night at 7:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

The meeting, sponsored by the Office of Financial Aid and Student Government will feature specialists in the various employment fields. Each student who attends will have an opportunity to ask questions and get additional information on his particular interest.

BEGAN THREE YEARS AGO

Dr. James Carr, head of the Office of Financial Aid was the initiator of the program when it began three years ago at Florida State University. Dr. Carr feels that this type of meeting will enable more information to be given to a greater number of students.

Dr. Ashley Staff of the Hotel and Restaurant Management Dept. and summer manager of hotels in Glacier Park, Colorado, will discuss employment in resorts, hotels, and national parks.

SUMMER CAMPS

Dr. Mary Virginia Alexander of the Women's Physical Education Dept. will speak on the opportunities for employment in summer camps. In a few weeks the employers of the camps will be on the FSU campus to meet the students who show interest in this area.

Other topics discussed will be work requirements, pay scales, transportation considerations, and general qualifications.

Anyone interested in summer camp work and unable to attend the meeting may see Dr. Carr, in Longmire Bldg.

Zerbe Paintings Displayed In New York Art Museum

Forty-four paintings by Karl Zerbe of Florida State University go on exhibition tomorrow at the Whitney Museum of American Art, in New York.

Yesterday, 21 Zerbe paintings, executed in 1961, will be exhibited at the Nordness gallery in New York. The Nordness exhibition will run through Feb. 24 and the Whitney through March 11.

RETROSPECTIVE

The Whitney exhibition is a retrospective exhibition of Zerbe works, containing paintings principally in encaustic, gouache, polymer tempera and acrylic from 1929 to the present.

Three of his earlier works are borrowed from the Staatliche Graphische Sammlung in Munich, the only paintings of his still existing in his native Germany. In 1934 Zerbe moved from Germany to the United States and in the same year much of his work was destroyed by the Nazi regime.

Born in Berlin in 1903, Zerbe spent most of his childhood in Paris and his first one-man show was held in Berlin when he was 19. Through the years ahead his work was exhibited throughout Germany and it was acquired by leading institutions.

Zerbe's work was first shown in America in 1930 and since he came to this country in 1934 it has regularly been exhibited in New York, Boston, and in major national group exhibitions. It is represented in more than 50 public collections in this country and abroad and he is known as one of this country's foremost expressionists, known for the handsome, rich surfaces of his canvasses.

ALSO TEACHES

The artist also is well known as a teacher. Since 1964 he has been a professor of painting at FSU, teaching not only advanced students but first year students. Before that he was for several years head of the Paintinf Dept. in the School of the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

The Nordness exhibition has paintings too late for the retrospective exhibition. They include work in the acrylic medium he presently uses and the predominant theme is the Caribbean Zerbe, whose favorite pastime is bird - watching, spent a vacation recently in the Bahamas.

In March and April the first European exhibition of Zerbe paintings in Europe since he left Germany will be held.

BOP Recognizes 'Church Key' As Honorary, Slates Elections

The Board of Publications voted Wednesday to give members of the former "Church Key" social honorary, now called the "One-Up-Men Society", a free half-page in the 1962 Tally-Ho.

The request was submitted by Tony Clinzer and Walter Cory, president of the group, in view of the fact that other academic, service, and leadership honoraries were given a free half-page in the yearbook.

Church Key was revised by the Senate last year, renamed to the "One - Up - Men Society" and geared to meet the qualifications of an honorary. These qualifications are to have a selective membership, to have a scholastic requirement of more than 2.0, to be recognized by the Attorney General, and to be University budgeted. The only stipulation that Church Key does not fulfill is that it is not University budgeted.

WORKSHOP

The Publication Workshop will be held Saturday at 9 a. m. in Longmire Bldg. Bill McLemore, chairman of the Board, stated that the workshop will be held for the editors and staff members of each publication to discuss common problems. Each editor will present his plans in regard to the trimester system as to terms of editorship and financial and general management. Another problem to be discussed will be that of getting more photographers for publications.

Ben Sharp suggested that the Board change the date of election of publication editors from April to March in order to give the newly elected editors more time to plan for the trimester system. Therefore, the Board agreed to elect the editor of the Pow Wow on Feb. 28, and the editor of the other campus publications on March 14.

Veep 'Disappointed' When Dean Vetoes Student Legislation

Mygnon Champion, womens vice president, stated Tuesday that she was greatly "disappointed" that Dean of Women Katherine Warren had vetoed a bill to allow women students in upper class dormatories to use telephone lines to make outgoing phone calls until 12 p.m.

The bill presented by Sen. Pat Doomar of Landis would extend the time alloted for outgoing telephone calls from 30 minutes to one hour after closing time on week-nights.

REASON GIVEN

Dean Warren, in vetoing the bill stating that residence counselors, especially those from Gilchrist and Cawthon, had not reported any need for opening the switch board for a longer period of time. Dean Warren also implied that with the trimester system students will be more rushed for study time and will not have a real need for the extended phone privilege.

Sen. Doomar explained the reason that she feels the time limit should be extended is to give all the women in the dormitories and equal opportunity to make their outgoing phone calls. Sen. Doomar said that with many girls not returning to the dormitory until closing hours and not receiving their messenges until then, that a natural congestion on the telephone lines is created. She feels that it is unfair for those living in a dormitory to be so restricted whereas those in off campus housing have no such restrictions.

FSU Sen Jennifer Newcomer agreed that those living in a dorm are at a distinct disadvantage in this case. Sen. Newcomer felt that it is unreasonable for "girls living in a dormitory to be deprived of phone privileges which girls living in a scholarship house or sorority house have at their disposal."

TWO OTHER BILLS

Two bills presented by Sen. Joyce Killian were also vetoed by Dean Warren.

The first bill concerned extending the lights out time in the dormitory room after a late permission dance or home football game from 1:45 a. m. to 2 a. m. Dean Warren vetoed this bill stating that any woman student who had to spend more than 15 minutes in bedtime preparation could come in from her date a little early.

Sen Killian explained that there may be certain reasons, for example staying to the end of a dance, whereas a woman would not want to come home early. She then explained that certain rooms have group devotions or other preparation at night and need the lights on for a period exceeding 15 minutes.

Another bill presented by Sen. Killian and vetoed by Dean Warren concerns playing a musical instrument in the dormitory. The bill stated that a woman student may play an instrument, radio, or record player, for enjoyment as long as it is not a source of disturbance".

Dean Warren's main opposition to this bill is that playing any instrument could easily lead to unnecessary noise.

Sen. Killian explained that certain instruments would make less noise than a "combo" record or a blaring radio. Since JC's would continue to regulate the noise situation she does not feel that an additional "source of disturbance" would be created.

Tickets

Tickets are still available for the performances of the Highwayman and of the Detroit Symphony Orchestra, appearing in Westcott Auditorium next week.

'Soviet Challenge Is Struggle For Minds'

Dr. Lensen After Study In USSR, Spoke On Russians, Communists

By LANA MURRAY
Flambeau Staff Writer

"The fundamental nature of the Soviet challenge is the struggle for the minds of men". Dr. George A. Lensen declared last night in his "Last Lecture."

Dr. Lensen, who did post doctoral research at Leningrad State University in the Soviet Union last Spring as a participant in the U. S. - U.S.S.R. educational program presented his views of the military and ideological challenge of that nation.

Trying to clear up some commonly-held misconceptions, he characterized the Russians distinct from the Communist bosses, as being warmhearted and remarkably straightlaced. Saying "far more in common with the American people than the conflicting ideologies would lead one to believe."

In fact he asserted Americans are more popular in the Soviet Union than anyplace else in the world." He stressed the fact however that the Communists employ every means at their disposal to deceive the Russian people concerning life inside the United States.

EDUCATION IS FUNCTIONAL

Soviet education he said, is functional, its aim the "strengthening of the state and the eventual attainment of Communism." To this end, past history is revised to concur with present Communist official dogma. To this end also, he added, works by promient American authors are printed and distributed in the Soviet Union—but only books that give an unrealistic and unfavorable picture of American life.

Because of this twisting of facts and the virtual ignorance concerning actual conditions of even relatively well-informed intellectual Russian citizens, true communication is impossible. Dr. Lensen declared.

MISCONCEPTIONS

Other misconceptions that Dr. Lensen discussed were:

That many of the rapid advances in technical and living conditions claimed by the Communists are true cannot be denied, he said, but most of these advances are a product of world-wide progress.

The power of the working class is a myth and there are few of the individual liberties enjoyed by peoples in other parts of the world.

The idea of the hard-working [illegible] competely serious student dedicated only to his work and to the triumph of Communism, is completely false, with classrooms in universities characterized by a startling lack of attention. Students read magazines and even listen to transistor radios during class, he said.

MILITARY THREAT

But even if these popular conceptions are false, Dr. Lensen warned the military threat [illegible] not to be minimized or disregarded.

The ideological challenge is not [illegible] between the [illegible] but between the competing systems of thought [illegible] within themselves [illegible] within the nature of the Soviet [illegible].

The question, he said, is whether [illegible] challenge in time.

Campus Practices To 'Sing' Feb. 17,18

Strains of "Do, Re, Mi, . . . are drifting from windows of scholarship houses, men's and women's dormitories and fraternity and sorority houses as these students practice for the Campus Sing program, which will be held Feb. 17 and 18.

This songfest is annually sponsored by women's music honorary, Sigma Alpha Iota and the men's music honorary, Phi Mu Alpha.

PURPOSE

"The purpose of Campus Sing is for the students to work with and enjoy good music in a gentle and healthy competitive manner." said Carolyn Reeves president of the women's honorary. Miss Reeves said the competition was not the most important factor, but that the fevered excitement rendered by the groups' sharing music with one another and their working for a common good, while respecting the groups' talents and efforts, yeilds the greatest satisfaction and achievement.

Participation in the program is open to any group on campus, with the exception of music groups from the School of Music. Each group will present two songs, one a light number and the other a more serious selection.

AWARDS

Awards will be divided into men's and women's categories. To the first place winner in both divisions a loving cup and a picture will be given. The group or organization then keeps the cup for a year, and at the end of the year they receive an inscribed [illegible]. Second and third place winners are awarded plaques and photos.

Semi-finals will be held at specific assigned times all day Feb. 17. Finals will be held Sunday, Feb. 18.

[illegible] for the program are Miss Betty Jane Greene, Dr. Wiley Housewright, and Herman Gunter.

Winners from last year's Campus Sing were in the women's division Theta Zeta first place, [illegible] second place, and Zeta Tau Alpha, third place. In the men's division Air Force ROTC, first place; Phi Delta Theta, second place; and Pi Kappa Phi [illegible] third place.

Byrd Requests:

Father Wylie Starts Mission On Campus Sunday For University Episcopalians

One of the leaders in the Episcopal program of College Mission Work, the Rev. Samuel J. Wylie will conduct an Episcopal University Mission at Florida State University beginning Sunday.

Father Wylie will lecture during an Instructed Eucharist at 9:30 and 11 a. m. Sunday in the Chapel of the Resurrection, 655 West Jefferson. He will lead mission services at 8 p.m. Sunday, Monday and Tuesday evenings. Holy Communion will be served at noon Wednesday.

Father Wylie served as a wartime Navy chaplain and has been chaplain to Columbia University, the University of Virginia and Brown University. He is currently Rector of the Church of the Advent in Boston.

He has also served as executive secretery of the Division of College Work in the Episcopal Church's National Council. He is the author if New Patterns for Christian Action, which is subtitled "How Christians Here and Abroad Are Meeting the Challenge of Secularism."

In this book he commented that, ". . . . If, on most large university campuses, all the active Christians of all kinds suddenly left school, it would make practically no difference whatever to the life of the university."

REV. WYLIE

Judge Rudd Speaks Sun.

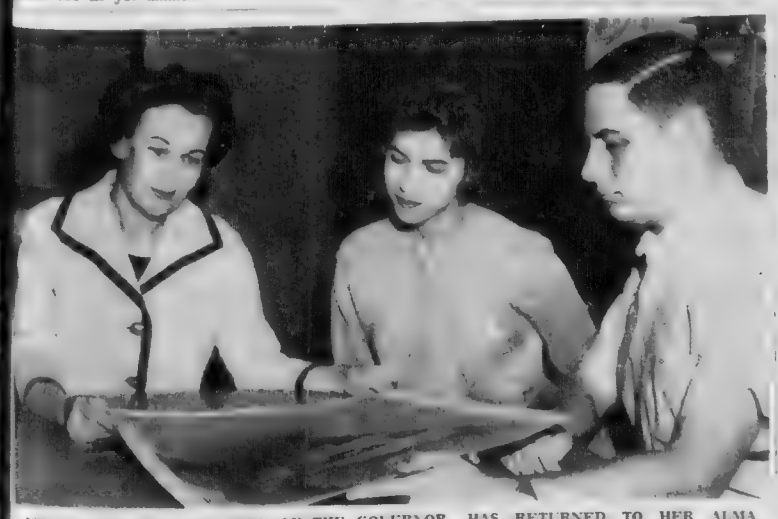
Judge John Rudd will speak on "The Municipal Court of Tallahassee" at a meeting of the Liberal Forum Sunday night. The Forum meets weekly at 7:30 p. m. at the Unitarian Chapel.

In the next few weeks in addition to Judge Rudd, Lawrence Chalmers will speak on "The implications of Behaviorial Determinism", Retired Rev. Alfriend will discuss "The John Birch Society"; and Stuart Brisley will speak on "Art and the Social Order."

All programs of the Liberal Forum are open to all members of Florida State University and all activities are free.

Nationally Known Scientist-Educator Studies Teacher Education At FSU

Dr. James B. Conant, a chemist and university administrator whose recent books about American schools have received widespread attention, spent a day on the Florida State University campus yesterday in a study he is now making of teacher education.



Dr. Conant and two associates conferred with Dr. Mode I. Stone of the School Of Education and other FSU faculty members, visited classes, conferred with faculty members concerned with elementary and secondary school teacher preparation and met informally with FSU students.

His present survey is a two-year study financed by the Carnegie Corporation and asked for by leaders in teacher education, a complicated field Conant said yesterday is a hornets nest of controversy. The survey covers some 18 states. With him yesterday were Dr. William H. Cartwright of Duke University and Dr. E. Alden Dunham of columbia University.

Dr. Conant, who for many years was president of Harvard University and after World War II became U. S. high commissioner and then ambassador to West Germany, has written several books on education in recent years.

His last Slums And Suburbs, made an analysis of the problems of schools on the one hand and large city slums on the other. It focused attention among other things on the problem of [illegible] of school [illegible] in Negro slums.

Two years ago his book The American High School Today had a strong impact on secondary education.

MRS. FARRIS BRYANT, WIFE OF THE GOVERNOR, HAS RETURNED TO HER ALMA Mater, Florida State University, to take a course in art history being taught by Dr. Adolph Karl. Here Mrs. Bryant, who as Julia Burnette received her A.B. degree from Florida State College For Women in 1939, is shown with two fellow students, Kathleen Spencer of Pahokee and Robert Eastman of Winter Haven. The class meets twice a week.

DR. JAMES CONANT CONFERS WITH DEAN MODE STONE, OF THE SCHOOL OF EDUCATION, and the Dean of Faculties, Dr. Werner Baum concerning the methods of teaching in the secondary school.

Lewd And Objectionable

A recent letter to State Attorney [illegible] from an anonymous Florida State student regarding lewd and objectionable material being sent through the mails points out a weakness in our freedom. Liberty to send materials through the mail without fear of censorship [illegible] open for those who would use this to their [illegible].

The [illegible] recently received [illegible] he received an advertisement for a filth-ridden book entitled the Sexual Side of Life. The mailer was very, referring sensationally to perverted activities ranging from nymphomania to homosexuality. The student wisely asked what could be done.

Mr. Pepper, Yon Tallahassee postmaster, [illegible] the answer in a letter to Business Manager Rod Shaw. Yon stated: "Postal regulations describe obscene and indecent matter as [illegible] [illegible] matter [illegible] containing information where, how or from whom such may be obtained, and matter which is otherwise mailable [illegible] or envelope any indecent, lewd, lascivious, or obscene writing or printing.

"In order for the Post Office Department to take action on mailing of this kind, it is necessary for us to ask the cooperation of all patrons in turning the material over to their Postmaster for transmission to the Postal Inspection Service. In the United States we have no form of censorship, therefore it is illegal for us to open first-class mail even though we 'intercept' such mail to contains unmailable matter. After examining the contents of the letter, if the patron feels that the material is objectionable, we must have the envelopes and contents in order to make an investigation."

Freedom from censorship is one of America's most precious liberties. It should be preserved intact at all costs. But those exercising any freedom should be accountable for their action if it infringes upon the rights of others. We strongly urge all FSU students to do what one of you has done and turn these materials over to the postal authorities. Such action will help close the door to those who [illegible] freedom.

Glad Call's Closed

The campus Security Officer, the [illegible] of the University administration and the city officials that [illegible] Call street. That, you realize, meant [illegible] had begun to make itself felt all over. Unfortunately, [illegible] anything. Happily, [illegible] [illegible] days are the [illegible]

FSU HAS PUSHED its luck from both ends of Call street for too long. There are too many students who have to cross that street on foot in the course of a class day and they have little enough time to wait on curbs if they're trying to get from the History Building to Conradi or Education.

Curb standing for long intervals encouraged a "the heck with it" attitude that brought out all the fatalism that a good FSU'an can muster. Where crossing Call was concerned, the idea had become "they can only kill me once and the registrar will get [illegible] anyway if [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] times."

THE DRIVERS THAT used call street were careless and reckless. Not only did they constantly ignore the crosswalks so long assumed to be "safe", but they broke most of the speed regulations on the University books.

Even Student Senate had begun to mutter about the bad situation on Call street. That, you realize, meant [illegible] had begun to make itself felt all over. Unfortunately, [illegible] anything. Happily, [illegible] [illegible]

WHAT WOULD PROBABLY have done some good long ago would have been to call in a couple of city policemen with an unlimited supply of traffic tickets and let them issue same with gusto. Overparking has been dwelt on heavily here on campus, but that has been about all.

Now, since Call street doesn't threaten to kill somebody every day maybe the gentlemen who decide these things will get around to reminding the various off-campus dormitories (which is what the assorted Greek dwellings are, after all) that they are likewise subject to the traffic regulations intended to protect everyone. The [illegible] speeders of Jefferson street speeding up across the sidewalks and thinking it very funny, might benefit from a fine or two. And that goes for the people on Park who pack cars two and three deep and three or four wide across the sidewalk, forcing predestrians either into the street, or up on lawns.

LP

Time For The Whip

The Senate's Trimester Committee has been piddling around aimlessly. They have made weak excuses for inaction, complaining of lack of cooperation. The committee must go at a snail's pace, they say. Judging from last semester, a snail's pace would be rapid for this group. And there is no excuse for a largely wasted semester.

The committee is charged with the vital responsibility of revamping the statutes to mesh with the Trimester System. There are important questions to be answered. For how long will the Student Body President be elected? The Vice-President? Will Student Government, including the Honor Court, operate on a year round basis? When will elections be held? Will the requirements for office be changed? Will class officers be necessary? What about class senators?

THESE AND OTHERS are problems the committee must tackle square on. They can not be allowed to shirk as they have in the past.

The man to get them moving is Vice-President Ken van Assenderp. In his efforts to be a fair and impartial presiding officer, van Assenderp has not fulfilled his coresponsibility to pressing important actions and spurring committees forward. He has appointed committees and hoped they would operate successfuly alone, as they should.

The hands-off technique has not worked, so it must be shelved. Van Assenderp should begin attending Trimester Committee meetings and get the committee rolling. Unless he receives immediate response, the Vice President should use his power to appointe another committee.

A snail's pace will not suffice now. The committee should meet long and often until accomplishments have been made. The Vice President should see that this is done.

The kid gloves technique has not worked, Mr. Vice President. It's time for the whip.

The European Common Markets And Future Aspects

BY ELKE FRANK

Closer economic cooperation in Europe began in 1947 with the rebuilding of war-shattered economies. It was stimulated by the Marshall Plan and resulted in the institution of the Organization for European Economic Cooperation (OEEC). All ready within that organization the first steps were taken to get rid of quota restrictions and barriers to payments between its members.

PRODUCTION, consumption and trade in Western Europe developed so rapidly that a further extension of the markets beyond national boundaries was wanted, because it seemed to promise re-allocation of resources, specialization, lowering of production cost and other desirable elements of a large market. The OEEC apparently did not deal effectively enough with tariff barriers, and demands arose among its members that these should be tackled next, although consistently with the provisions of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade GATT).

Europe as a market, was compared to the USSR and even more to the USA with its large-scale, low-cost, production methods and its domestic market which is sizeable enough to absorb the output of optimum scale plants. Two alternatives arose through which to reduce or abolish tariffs: either through the erection of a customs union or the formation of a free trade area. The former involves a common external tariff and a rather extencive amount of political cooperation with regard to gard to economic planning, social legislation and fiscal policy. The latter enables each country to maintain its individual tariff structures in relation to third countries and permits a greater measure of political autonomy also expressed in the economic sector.

HOWEVER, WHEN in June, 1955, the Foreign Ministers of Belgium, The Netherlands, Luxembourg, Italy, France and the Federal Republic of Germany met at Messina and decided to work towards a common market for all products traded between them, and when a report proposing a plan for coordinated action was approved by the Six Governments in Venice in May, 196. other members of the OEEC and, with them, Great Britain, became concerned. As a British writer puts it:

"Directly due to the European Common Market there emerged the conception of the European Free Trade Area. It is no accident that the European Movement which had been dormant for some years in Britain has suddenly come to life again."

THE OTHER EUROPEAN states feared the economic consequenced of the Six's plan for a common market, but they are not prepared to join in because of the political aspects of the Messina Plan. Great Britain assumed the leadership within the concerned group of states to whom a free trade area began to appeal. Plans were formulated with the OEEC for an area of free trade within the organizational framework of the OEEC to which the Messina Powers with their common market could also belong. In July 1956, the Council of the OEEC met to study possible forms and methods of association on a multilateral basis between the Common Market and the OEEC members. A working party was set up in which all 17 OEEC members were represented.

After the Signature of the two Treaties of Rome on March 25, 1957, the Six Messina Powers instituted the European Atomic Energy Committee (Euratom) and the European Economic Community (Common Market). The Treaties were to come into force the following January.

THE EUROPEAN Economic Community had as its basis a customs union of the six countries to be achieved by stages over a period of 12-15 years, from January 1958. During the [illegible] import duties and other restrictions among the six are to be abolished. Simultaneously they will erect a common tariff against the outside. Altogether, with this, the Rome Treaty urges the adoption of a common policy is imperative.

The Treaty provides for the free movement of capital, labour and services within the Community, for the establishment of rules to ensure fair competition between enterprises, and for the coordination of many aspects of economic, financial and social policies. In short, eventually the six hope to arrive at a point where a unified market will emerge.

Since the assembly, the Court of Justice which was established in connection with the European Coal and Steel Community also serve the Common Market, it has been pointed out that this is the clearest indication that political as well as economic integration is the ultimate aim of the Common Market. The fact that a number of policies regarding social legislation are part of the arrangements between the Six, for various observers seems to point towards a supra-national character of the Common Market.

"Common Market, Hell! That's A Supermarket!"

'International Concert'

CHRIS CLARK

Things didn't go well at all at the beginning of the Scholarship Concert Monday night. The guest artist, because of a transportation mix-up, was not at Westcott Auditorium on time. The schedule for the evening was changed and Conductor Sedore led the orchestra in the Capriccio Italian to make up time. The audience was pretty uncomfortable. After the Capriccio, a 41 year old violinist named Henrky Szerny (pronounced Shearing) walked hurriedly onto the Westcott stage. In his hand he held an instrument priceless not only in monetary terms, but more importantly, tone wise.

SMILING AT HIS welcoming applause, he stood quietly while the orchestra played the opening measures of the Beethoven Violian Concerto. Looking not unlike a penguin with his violin tucked under his arm, he listened for his opening and began to play.

The first movement did not go as well as the subsequent ones. Not until the second and third movements did the guest artist establish ethos with his audience and become something more than a good violinist at a university which has several good violinists of its own.

FROM THE RONDO movement of the Beethoven through the Tschaikowsky Violin Concerto and two encores, the violin, the artist (by now he was an artist), and the audience were one. Mr Szernyg played two encores and received a rare Florida State standing ovation.

While he lacked the lightness of touch of Oistrakh of the intentness of Heifitz, he did show his own definite style somewhere between the two. The handling of the Tchaikovsky cadenza was especially fine. Of the two encores, a piece by Kreisler and a Bach fugue, he was obviously more at home with the former. This is not to say that his playing of both was not quite satisfactory and at times even inspired. It just seems a statement of fact to say he seemed more at home with the freer form of the more modern works.

AFTER THE concert the violinist received high praise from Conductor Robert Sedore as the orchestra for his patience and muscianship. After a twenty - minute spree of autograph signing was over, Szernyg graciously consented to an interview.

"I found the members of the orchestra had good group spirit and were serious and eager. An artist must do two things in order to perform well. He must [illegible] and know the composers' [illegible] period and style in order the work to be performed, he must be familiar with it. And he must command technique, interpretation, and add his own personality to the composers' message — he must project — the audience in the world can spend unless the concert [illegible] really has conveyed the message.

"THIS IS MY FIRST time in Florida, although it is my fourth consecutive tour of the United States from coast to coast. My first impression has been favorable and I hope to be able to come to Florida and Tallahassee, a city with which I've so many sentimental and personal links, very often indeed in the future.

"I find it most enjoyable to think that on the occasion of my first concert tour in Tallahassee it's been really an international day for city, university and orchestra. The soloist was a Mexican citizen of Polish birth and was on a goodwill tour for Mexico. He played a violin made by the greatest Italian violin maker, Guarnerius, and he performed under an American conductor. Mr. Sedore will [illegible] FSU symphony and played one German and one Russian piece. This is but one proof, if any need be given, to confirm the philosophy of this musician of music . . . since this most noble art is a wonderful means to promote internation understanding and deep fraternity between the nations."

Complex, Obscure, Impaired

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

Once upon a time people thought that the earth was the center of the universe, and that the sun and the moon moved [illegible]. Eventually, as astronomers began to discover new wonders in the heavens, it became more and more difficult to fit the new knowledge into the old conception of the universe.

THE SEASONS, the motion of the planets, eclipses, the "rising" of the sun and moon, and even the motion of the comets all had to be accounted for in a universe with the earth at its hub. To do this, astronomers constructed some of the most incredibly complex models of the world ever devised by man. Planets zig-zagged across the sky in weird paths. Some [illegible] everything was accounted for, or so men assumed, for the patterns had become so complicated that few men could understand them. Almost no one, however, seriously questioned the basic fact that the earth was the center of the universe.

But eventually the new findings could no longer be accomodated within the framework of the old theories. The work of Galileo and Copernicus made it obvious to men of learning, if not to the Church, that the earth was not the center of things. Rather, it was just another planet, revolving around a rather puny star in an obscure corner of a gigantic universe.

WHAT A BLOW TO men's ego! What a blow to the foundation of religious orthodoxy. Reacting characteristically, men and the Church retaliated by reviling, rejecting, and occasionally, burning advocates of such heretical ideas. But the ideas persisted, because "the truth will out" when men of learning are persistent in their quest for it.

As we in the modern world look back on the days of Galileo we find much to amuse us. There is also much to learn. The geocentric models of the universe constructed by early astronomers are monuments to the diligent application of misguided intelligence. They are the work of keen minds laboring feverishly to verify what we now know was a false hypothesis.

And so it is today, it seems to me, in the ideas of Dr. Paul Tillich. Dr. Tillich's theology represents the last gasp of a dying philosophy. As with those ponderous model worlds of yesterday, it is the product of a keen [illegible] misguided intelligence. Too, it is so complex, so obscure in vague phraseology and so [illegible] Encased by linguistic difficulties, that few of its admirers can even understand it.

WHAT DR. TILLICH has attempted to do is to incorporate what science has learned about man and the physical world into the ancient system of the supernatural as represented by Christian mythology. The result is a hodge - podge which, like the old geocentric models of the universe, is so complicated that it is often beyond comprehension. The public, however, can does appreciate the conclusion which Tillich draws — "That God is in His Heaven — and thus assumes that the system of thought which produced the conclusion is correct. The public wants to believe in something. For those who demand more than a Bill Graham or Norman Vincent Peale can give, Paul Tillich offers a solution. His obscure, stuffy prose is especially comforting to those troubled by the nihilism of the atheistic wing of existentialism.

Thus, the philosophy of Paul Tillich is enjoying a sort of boom among the members of the intellectual upper-crust. Few understand it, but everybody likes what it does as it confirms the persistent superstitions and anti-scientific attitudes characteristic of the general population. Dr. Tillich, in short, has made existentialism respectable at the Rotary Club, and has temporarily obscured the contradictions between science and religion by a mass of verbiage unusual even for German theologians.

DR. TILLICH is nevertheless a major theologian, and Florida State is fortunate to have him as a speaker next month. However, students attending should know that it is extremely unlikely that historians of the year 2062 will recall his name among the philosophers or theologians of our time, for he is plainly out of step with the march of history.

Where Do I Go For A Lollipop?

By BONNIE FREEDMAN

Classes are over, finals are over, registration is over—a long vacation lies ahead of us to plan for the next end-of-semester.

FORTUNATELY, there are many suggestions for those who have too much leisure time.

There is a sizeable group going in for moving, mainly in and out of bedrooms and kitchens and on and off campus, depending upon what one wants out of life.

In the dorms, the halls are filled with boxes of undetermined magnitude and direction.

IN THE ACADEMIC world there is a renewed interest in attending classes. Evaluation of the new instructors is always a delightful game and some seniors are getting faculty members for teachers.

The registrar's office is ringing with an interrogative air: "Maybe you made a mistake on my grades — could you check them, just once?"

"WHERE DO I GO for the lollipop, for going through registration without crying?"

"What happens if I can't fit ROTC into my schedule?"

A new clump of elementary education interns are preparing for their trials. "Oh, oh, oh. See the line. It is a LONG line."

FLAMBEAU IS PREPARING for the let-down after the build-up: "Well, we have one each, representing the campus; one girl Greek, one boy Greek, one girl independent, and one boy independent. THIS semester, let's see if we can get some REPORTERS, too."

The signs are good—there are debates and threats, and lies and smiles. There is everything we need for a full semester.

Let's Get Serious

A Philosophy From Old Songs

B.Y GERRY DOBSON

I have listened to an album of songs of the Civil War, or, if those of you who are Rebels prefer, The War of the Yankee Aggression. And at the risk of being accused of wanting to return to the nineteenth century, I will venture the opinion that there is much we can learn and apply from the idealistic words of these songs.

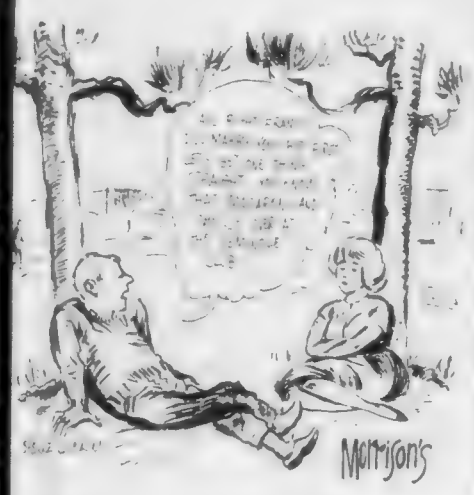
FOR WE HAVE BECOME a nation of selfish slobs. We are concerned only with our own physical and material well-being, and to hell with those who are in slavery today. Let's wink at justice and immorality in the world, and salve our consciences with a few dollars. It's the comfortable thing to do. And besides, we might upset the delicate world situation.

When the Hungarian Freedom Fighters rebelled in 1956, we were afraid to act even though we ourselves, by misleading those brave people with a lot of pompous garbage, had brought about the revolt. We were afraid to act because we valued our own comfortable lives more than the ideals and moral precepts upon which our civilization is based. People said "what if it leads to a war? We'd better not risk it." Union soldiers could answer the question from the grave:

As He died to make men holy,
Let us die to make men free.

And, from "The Battle Cry of Freedom";

We are springing to the call
Of the loyal, true and brave
Shouting the battle cry of freedom
And our battle cry shall be
'Not one man shall be a slave'
Shouting the battle cry of freedom.



TODAY OUR LEADERS cringe at the possibility that the slaves in East Germany might revolt and "complicate the international situation." We therefore carefully tell them not to try such a thing, and make it clear that we won't help if they do. For after all, they should consider us; it might upset our comfortable, secure lives. We forfeited our rights in Berlin by permitting the Communists to build the wall. We say that the Berlin situation is complex, that there is no easy solution. That there are many factors to be considered, and that we dare not risk a war. The boys in Gray would have called it cowardice. He said through Harry Macarthy's "Bonnie Blue Flag":

Then here's to our Confederacy
For strong we are and brave
Like patriots of old we'll fight
Our heritage to save.

And rather than submit to shame
To die we would prefer
Then cheer for the Bonnie Blue Flag
That bears a single star.

And those guys weren't just singing; they meant it.

Of course, today all this is dismissed as superpatriotism. But it's the stuff that male our nation great, and it's a large part of the reason the United States used to be able to claim to be "The land of the free and the home of the brave."

Who's Who Names Removed; Replaced

The National Office of Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges has been notifed by R R. Oglesby Dean of Students to remove the names of Bobby Byrd and Jack Ascherl from the names of those chosen for Who's Who for the year 1961-62.

Raymond F. Allen and Joseph D Smith, Jr have been substituted

This action was made at the request of the Student Body President Byrd, and by a resolution of the Student Senate.

In the selection of the persons eligible for Who's Who, the committee selected Byrd and Ascherl who did not meet the standards set up by the Statutes of the Student Body.

Dean Oglesby received a petition containing some 700 names requesting that the names of Byrd and Ascherl be retained.

"This is evidence of the high esteem with which Bobby and Jack are held by the Student Body. I do believe, however, respite the petition I have no alternative but to follow the instructions of the duly constituted officials of Student Government," said Dean Oglesby.

Army ROTC Rifle Team Plans Match

The Army ROTC rifle team at Florida State University will compete in its first home match of the year at 9 o.m. Saturday at the .22 caliber rifle range under Doak Campbell Stadium.

FSU To Open Spring Drills

Spring practice will open March 31, and the fall drills will open earlier this year, according to athletic director Vaughn Mancha Wednesday.

The March 31 spring drill date is about two weeks later than the usual starting time for spring practice. It will be ended by the Garnet and Gold game, which will be played May 5 between the squads.

Florida State, which follows the Southeastern Conference rules (although it is an independent school), usually begins the fall drills on the customary Sept. 1 opening.

But the University of Florida was permitted at a recent SEC meeting to start practice several days ahead of time, despite the protest of a few member schools.

FSU Faces Tampa

Florida State's basketball team will meet the University of Tampa five Monday night at Tully Gymnasium in the 27th encounter between the two schools.

Tampa has sparkled this season by upsetting the University of Miami Hurricanes. FSU, who also met this common enemy, defeated the 'Canes in an 65-60 game, in which the Seminoles trailed most of the way.

The Seminoles (8-8) are led by Dave Fedor, Ray Swain, Charlie Long, and Dale Ricketts.

Fedor has meshed the nets for 310 points and a 19.4 average. The Zephryhills athlete has a 51.0 average from the court and a 78.9 average at the foul line. He has dropped in 127 points from the field and pushed in 56 free throws.

Swain, who has a 15.3 average, has dropped in 102 points from the field and 41 points at the free throw line. He trail Fedor in rebounds, 156, to 120.

Long, who scored a season high against Oklahoma City when he bagged 34 points, has tallied 84 points from the field and 42 markers from the charity line.

Having a 49.4 average, Ricketts has sliced the nets for 41 points. He has also totaled 37 free throws.

Gridiron Is Still In The Limelight

Football has proven to be a die-hard sport once the seasons have changed. This normally would be a strange time to discuss such an autumn sport, but lately the gridiron of Florida State keeps cropping up in the state papers..

For instance, two varsity Seminoles, Happy Fick and Buddy Yarbrough, have quit the game. Fick, who came to FSU from Miami Edison, was made ineffective this last season by a leg injury.

Yarbrough saw reserve duty throughout the 4—5—1 season.

Then, there came the notice about the Board of Control approving Coach Bill Peterson's contract extension, an inexpensive gesture that was designed to give the grid mentor confidence and relieve the pressure caused by a schedule with five Southeastern Conference teams.

Grid Returnees

In addition, there are the unreported and possible events . . . events that are yet to happen.

Such as, halfback Keith Kinderman may possibly play on the Seminoles next year. Kinderman, who abruptly left the term last season, started in only three games (Georgia, Mississippi, and Richmond), but the sensational gridder gained enough rushing yardage to hold down second place in the state. And this is against athletes who played a whole season.

Massive Charlie Keneipp (270) may also return to the squad. He has been regarded by the coaches as one of the most promising linemen ever to enroll at FSU.

FSU Falls To UH In 84-76 Contest

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Sports Editor

Florida State's Seminoles, leading by 11 points in the second half of a non-conference basketball game, were robbed of their ninth victory by the University of Houston Monday night.

The 84-76 loss occurred when the zone passes and Lyle Harger's driving layups destroyed the second half margin.

The Cougars, playing on their home court before 2,000 people, copped their 16th win against four losses, while the Seminoles' record was levelled at 8-8.

Charlie Long of the Seminoles nearly repeated his outstanding night against the Oklahoma City Chiefs by 25 points in the dueling contest between the Texans and Seminoles Against Oklahoma last week. Long canned 34 points to capture the season high for the Indians. Long hit 11-of-18 for a 62 percent average against Houston.

Nevertheless, the Tribesmen were edged for high scoring honors in this contest when Harger sliced the nets for 27 points.

The Cougar, who led the Cats' board battle with 13 rebounds, hit the basket for 11 field goals and five field goals. He missed three free throw tries, and five field goal attempts.

Houston outdueled the Tribesmen 54 per cent to 50 per cent in a shooting session between the third ranked offensive team of the nation, Florida State, and one of the top independent college teams in the country.

The Cougars, who trailed, 42-36, at the half, started hitting at 65.5 clip in the second half to score 19 of 29 shots from the field. The percentage battle was intensified by Houston's Jack Thompson, who hit 71 per cent of his floor shots to dunk 5-of-7.

Don Schverak, who grabbed 11 rebounds from the boards, tatalled 16 points for the Cats, hitting seven out of 15 attempt from the field and two of seven from the foul line, for good.

With 8:18 to go, Harger drove into put Houston in front, 64-61.

Dave Fedor meshed 19 points for second - place scoring honors on the Seminoles. The 6-6 Zephryhilss product, who grabbed 19 rebounds, hit 8 - 16 from the field and dropped in 3-of-5 at the foul line.

Ray Swain bagged 18 points, looping eight of 13 attempts.

Three Florida State cagers went down on personal fouls. They included Long, Swain, and Davis. Houston didn't lose any men to fouls, but Harger and Malone received four personals each.

The oversized volumes shown here contain 30,000 letters of Napoleon I, who kept three or four secretaries busy at one time taking down what he had to say about military matters or affairs of state. They are among approximately 350 volumes containing more than 150,000 documents of the Napoleonic period being acquired by Florida State University's Strozier Library. Donald D. Howard, an instructor in history at FSU, ran onto the material while doing research in Paris. Some of the volumes, at left, are richly bound in red Morocco and bear the Imperial Crest of Napoleon III, who had the books printed.

Napoleonic Reprints Obtained For Library

Donald Howard, a history instructor at FSU, has obtained more than 150,000 reprints of documents of the Napoleonic era.

During the summer of 1960, Howard was in Paris studying the Portuguese campaign of Napoleon's Marshal Massena. While he was there he browsed through the book shops of the Paris Latin Quarter and learned of the many rare documents of the Napoleonic period.

The documents are contained in about 350 volumes and were obtained through funds by the University and the Library Research Council, after being mentioned by Horward to Dr. Weymouth T. Jordan, head of the History Dept.

LETTERS OF NAPOLEON

Thirty - two volumes contain more than 30,000 letters of Napoleon I and one set of about 10,000 documents in 12 volumes contains the dispatches of the Duke of Wellington. These were obtained through an English dealer from the estate of the Earl of Chesterfield, whose coat of arms is engraved on the books. Also included among the documents are a set of letters of Napoleon relaying instructions of military campaigns and affairs of state.

The set was originally published by Napoleon III and are bound exactly like those that still can be seen in his private library at the Palace of Fontainbleu. The entire 32 volumes were obtained by the University for $110 of which half of these are bound in majestic red Moroccan leather embossed with gold borders and green taffeta facing. All bear the Imperial Crest of Napoleon III.

OTHER LETTERS

Other accessions include the published correspondence and memoirs of Empress Maria Louise of France, Empress Josephine of France, King Joseph of Spain, Queen Hortense of Holland, Prince Murat of Naples, Pope Pius VII, Marshal Davout, Marshal Soult, Marshal Ney, Marshal Macdonald, Marshal Marmont, Count Mollien, Count Pasquier, Duc d'Enghien, General Rapp, General Foy, General Moor, General Colbert, General Bertrand, General Smith, General Paget, Madame Remusat and Madame Recamier.

Horward thinks that French Historians have shied away from the Portuguese campaign because it was such a flop. Napoleon had instructed Massena to go to Portugal and "drive the British into the sea." The Portuguese delayed the army's movement and the Duke of Wellington and the British retreated southward to Lisbon. At the peninsula at Torres Vedras a few miles above Lisbon Wellington stopped the French Army and almost starved it to defeat. Massena finally retreated across the Spanish border with only a slim army left.

Student Senators Debate Semantics

By MILA ARNOLD
Flambeau Staff Writer

The meeting of Student Senate last Wednesday was the scene of a semantics debate which lasted approximately thirty - five minutes.

The discussion concerned Student Senate Bill No. 14, which was introduced by Women's Vice-President Mygnon Champion and Sen. Pat Doomar and proposed an amendment to one section of the Student Body Statutes. This section deals with the compliance of Student Government officers with the Constitution and the Statutes.

The problem centered around whether to call "wilful disregard" of the Student Body Constitution or Statutes, malfeasance, misfeasance or non - feasance, or all three.

The difficulty in choosing the proper word for noncompliance was summed up by Sen. Gerry Dobson when he said, "We are just bogged down in semantics . . . we can call it ice-cream sundae if we wish."

INTENTION

It was pointed out that the importance of wording is to make the bill as well as the intention precise for students and senators in the years to come. At the end of the discussion the bill was returned to the Judicial and Rules Committee for further debate.

Also brought before Senate was Student Resolution No. 31, which concerns the junior counselor program at Florida State University.

As introduced by Senator Jeannie Ferlita, the resolution provides that letters be sent to the presidents of the freshman dormitories expressing Student Senate's appreciation to junior counselors.

The resolution also provides that "senate send a letter to the Executive Branch Budget Committee favoring the establishment of a budget for the Junior Counselor Program for the purpose of providing funds for necessary supplies . .

According to Student Senate Resolution No. 30, which was also passed, Resolution No. 1 shall be amended by adding the following:

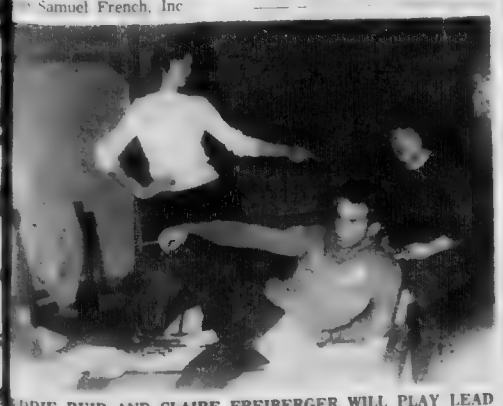
'Appointments of the President of the Student Body shall be read at the first regular Senate meeting following their submission to the Senate, and then shall be referred to the Elections and Appointments Committee.

NEW CHAIRMAN

President of Senate, Ken Van Assenderp, announced at the meeting that Sen. Joyce Killian has been named the new chairman of the Senate's Organization and Finance Committee. She is succeeding Sen. Jodie Smith, who has just been awarded a scholarship to Yale's Divinity School and felt she needed additional study time for preparation.

The last business of the day was mentioned by Sen. Dobson and concerned jurisdiction of the Honor Code.

According to Dobson a student who applies for a new I. D. card is warned that loaning or giving said card to another person is an infraction of the Honor Code.



President of Senate Van Assenderp stated that this should be looked into, as this is not an Honor Code offense. The Honor Code treats only cases of academic dishonesty.

Lost And Found??

Long Misplaced Student Body Charter Is Found By Officer

The long misplaced original student body charter has been found.

The charter, long lost and all but forgotten, was found in an old filing cabinet in the Student Body President's Cabinet office recently by Frank Milwee, undersecretary of finance.

"The charter was dated April 27, 1955, and was signed by student government leaders Peter Llewellyn Nimkoff, Coyle E. Moore Jr., Hans Werner Tews, James Emanuel Joanos, David Thomas Kennedy, Bruce Winston Fletcher, Charles Graham Carothers and Berry Kenneth Gatlin.

The signatures were notarized by a notary public and the document signed by the circuit judge.

Interest in the whereabouts of the old charter arose last year when student leaders began making plans to incorporate Student Government as a non-profit corporation.

NOT BINDING

Although the charter could not be found at that time, student leaders decided that it in no way affected their plans, because the earlier charter was an incorporation of the "Student Body," whereas the new charter as approved by Senate concerned a non - profit corporation, titled Enterprises, Inc."

Further, the first charter was not binding on either the Student Government or the student body because it was never registered in the office of the Florida Secretary of State as required by Florida law, nor was it ever ratified by Student Senate.

The student body president and several Student Government officials had obtained the charter, took it to the Senate and found that the Senate didn't want it. Acceptance of the charter was referred to a committee and action was allowed to die there.

Although the charter was never accepted by the Senate, Vice President Moore called the Senate meetings, to order as "the Student Senate of the Student Body of Florida State University, Inc."

FSU Receives Grants

Florida State University has recently received a total of $640,728 in the form of grants from the Federal Government and W. K. Kellogg Foundation.

In the field of science, Dr. William C. Rhodes, of the Chemistry Dept. received a grant of $63,375 from the United States Public Health Service. This grant will help to finance a three year study of genetic DNA, the substance which plays a key role in both heredity and the vital functions of the cell. Dr. Rhodes' research will be both theoretical and experimental in nature.

Three science education grants were also given to the University. Grants totaling $58,000 from the National Science Foundation will be used to conduct summer institutes for 50 high school teachers of mathematics and 50 high school science teachers.

NSF GRANT

A $125,000 grant from the National Science Foundation will be used to up-date science [illegible] at Broward County [illegible] schools. The program, to be conducted at FSU, will be during the summer of 1962 and the 1962-63 school year. An additional $60,000 was granted for a similar program to be conducted the following school year.

Dr. Lawrence Simkins of the Psychology Dept. has received a one - year grant of $3,863 from the United States Public Health Service for a study of linguistic behavior. He will be assisted in the research by graduate student, Pat Livingston.

Florida State University and the University of Florida have received a grant of $5[illegible] from the Kellogg Foundation. The joint program is aimed at providing the needed junior college administrators for ten states of the Southeast.

BOP Workshop Discusses Problems, Plans For Trimester

By NANCY OLSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

Editors of the campus publications met at the Board of Publications [illegible] Saturday and discussed problems and plans for publications under the trimester system.

Recommendations made at the meeting will be submitted in the form of resolutions at the next Board of Publications meeting.

Tony DiCarlo, representing the Flambeau, suggested that the editor be elected for not less than one, or more than three semesters. The editor should not have to run each semester to be elected but should at a designated time, be required to declare his intention. He should be elected prior to the semester he assumes office and should maintain a grade average of 2.3 to be eligible for the position.

During the third semester the Flambeau will probably publish one issue a week instead of two, [illegible] students attending the third session can be [illegible].

The Tally Ho editor should be elected for editorship of one yearbook, rather than for a year. In this manner the editor would begin in the middle of the trimester in the spring. Nancy Sill recommended. Each editor's term would overlap.

The group discussed the possibilities of printing the Tally Ho in the summer instead of the fall in order to have more time and include more spring activities, including graduation.

Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby, mentioned that class pictures would possibly be eliminated since class status would be difficult to determine under the trimester system.

PHOTOGRAPHERS PROBLEM

A pertinent problem of getting more photographers for the publications was discussed. A suggestion was made to have a central processing program under one salaried photographer for all publications. Dean Oglesby suggested that such a person might also act in the capacity of a part-time photographer and also a hobbiest for students interested in the area.

The business manager of the Tally Ho should be elected as the Flambeau editor but could be subject to re-election, Diane Klinck reported.

SMOKE SIGNALS FUTURE PLANS

Spence Guerin presented the problems of the Smoke Signals in regard to future plans. The editor should be elected for three issues published in the fall, spring and early part of the third semester.

He also appealed for an alloted amount of $50 per issue for salaries, and for a salary for the managing editor. The Smoke Signals would print the same number of copies as the Flambeau does.

Bill McLemore suggested that the trimester would not affect the Legend in that it would elect an editor to publish one edition in the Spring.

The advertising manager of the Flambeau is independent of the Board in regard to election. Ray Allen pointed out that the position does, however, require previous experience.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the student body as a whole or the administration of Florida State University. Editorials represent only the opinions of staff members and the initials of the writer following the editorial.

Chinese Checkers?

The recent American-Soviet swap of political prisoners brings up a number of questions. We are glad Francis Powers is out of the Russian prison, of course, but we can't help wondering what brought on the swap.

AS HAS BEEN SAID so many times in editorials across the country, Khrushchev had nothing to lose by freeing the American U2 pilot. However, a lack of loss to the contrary, we are not inclined to think Powers was freed out of the goodness of a bountiful, humanitarian heart. If that were so he'd have been home long before now.

The Russians, of course, got their famed spy, Rudolf Abel, in exchange for Powers, but Abel probably is of little if any use to his masters now. While his espionage career should be pretty well shot, we won't be surprised if he eventually shows up again "touring" some non-Communist nation. For the time being he'll return to Russia, possibly being hailed as a martyr of American justice for a while, and then disappearing into the vast steppes until his owners have decided what to do with him.

POWERS WILL come home to his wife and family. His future may be as doubtful as that of Abel. His neighbors, wherever he goes, may or may not be willing to overlook some of the statements attributed to him at the time of his trial, regardless of suspected pressures which well may have been levelled at him. He may alternately be treated as a hero and a goat. Certainly Francis Powers should be newsworthy for some time to come.

And what of all this? Why were the prisoners exchanged? What are the real stakes in the checker game that is too big to allow most of us to see beyond the occasional human pawn that is dangled before our eyes in some sensation that breaks in the papers?

WHAT WILL BE THE outcome of this swap? Who, if anybody, got the best deal? Or, as has been suggested, maybe this isn't a regular checker game of the international variety; maybe this is Chinese checkers. We wish we could tell what is going on.

New Speed, Accuracy

The Registrar's office is to be commended on a new grade and processing system which enabled them to get first semester grades out in record time.

DR. MURRAY W. KENNA, registrar, said grade reports for the 9,873 students enrolled here last fall, were mailed only 48 hours after the machine records staff began feeding grades into the IBM system.

The new system enabled Dr. Kenna and staff to get grade reports out eight days sooner than usual, and with better than 90 per cent accuracy. The new system also enabled registration officials to have tabulated, alphabetized grade books available when spring registration opened.

Also due student thanks are Mr. William E. Turner, director of machine records, and his seven-member staff, who worked straight through a weekend to expedite the grade reports.

Our Apology

The Flambeau has done an injustice to Miss Elke Frank. There is only one thing we can do: apologize abjectly. A part of that apology is her letter to the editor reprinted in the editorial column today.

MISS FRANK, kind enough to furnish material as background for a guest column which she thought someone else was going to write, found herself rudely surprised to see her material excerpted and run under her byline. Understandably she is annoyed.

The staff of this newspaper is contrite. We are sorry for any embarrassment caused Miss Frank. We are sorry her material was used in a manner she neither expected nor sanctioned.

LESLIE POWELL
Associate Editor,
For the Staff.

Elke Frank's Letter

TO THE EDITOR:

Several of my students called the editorial page of the Flambeau to my attention today. As I looked it found to my surprise a small column "THE EUROPEAN COMMON MARKETS AND FUTURE ASPECTS, under my byline. I would appreciate it very much, if you would inform your readers that I was neither asked nor told about the guest column.

One of the graduate students in the Government Dept., asked me where he might find information on the European Common Market, because he had been asked by you to write a column on the Market. I told him, he could see the material I have in my office. He did not come by and I did not give it another thought, until you came and asked me the same question. I showed you the pamphlets and background information on the Common Market which I have, but we both decided that it would not be quite what you needed. Then I showed you a seminar paper which I wrote in the Spring of 1961 for a course in comparative political parties and interest groups at another university. We agreed that parts of the introduction, summarizing European developments up to the Common Market agreement (The Treaty of Rome, 1958) might be helpful as background material, and I pencilled those parts which might be of use to someone who wanted to write an article on the Common Market and wanted some quick "catching up" on the background. Since you seemed in a hurry for the material, I told you that I would not object if the writer of the article would use a few parts of what I wrote and incorporated it, expanded it and tied it in with something else, but I warned you that you better up-date it and be sure to put it in context. All of this, including my pencil marks on the pages I gave you, should have made it clear to you, that I was merely trying to help you in getting background material upon which you, or anyone else could build your own column.

Surely in your position as editor of a newspaper you know that you should get permission to print if you use material given to you by someone else. As a junior at a university majoring in international affairs you should know, how fast international events become outdated and how thoroughly they need to be brought up to date and re-evaluated if they are to be used as background for information. The guest column under my name is neither up-to-date, coherent (because it was taken in pieces and put together out of context), informative nor meaningful in the sense of the headline. (Anyone concerned with world news knows better than to use material which is a year old and give it the title "Future Aspects.") You have published a piece of unintelligible mumbo-jumbo and I want it made clear that it is neither a guest column, nor anything which I wrote in the present shape. As you printed the EUROPEAN COMMON MARKET AND FUTURE ASPECTS, I have to object sharply to having my name associated with it.

'The Twist' Is A Horrible Fate

Editor's Note: Miss Ward speaks from experience in this article. She has been rendered infirm by a cast on her leg and this story is the result of a week in the infirmary and a dance called the twist.

"Come on Baby, let's do the twist.

COME ON BABY, it goes like this,

Well, round and round, up and down, we go,

Round and round, up and down" down....."

Sounds strenuous, doesn't it? Well, you are right,it is strenuous. Not only that, the twist can be down right dangerous.

The latest sensation that has been sweeping the nation is the coolest, most figure reducing dance of the age, and an orthopedist's delight, bringing in new victims every day.

AS YOU CAN probably tell by my bitter tone, I am a "Twist Statistic." I've read the warning articles in newspapers and magazines about those poor, ridiculous kids who suffered twist accidents, but my final judgement was "That could never happen to me." And that's just what I was thinking a week ago as I fell to the floor clutching a grotesquely distorted knee. "This couldn't be happening to me."

Five days in the Florida State infirmary and a plaster splint on my leg has finally convinced me. It can, and did, happen to me.

BUT DON'T MISUNDERSTAND the purpose of this article I am not taking pen in hand to banish an evil, evil dance from the world forever. Rather, I am trying to save all the able body twisters on campus from falling victim to the same horrible fate that I did.

The twist, if properly performed, can be beneficial to the health, strengthen muscles and use of excess energy. But you are in danger when you start twisting what shouldn't be twisted such as kneecaps, hip joints and backbones. Twist injury problems have become a special interest of the orthopedist around the nation.

TECHNICALLY, the twist can be executed in any one of three ways or combinations thereof. First, you can bend your knees, shifting your weight with your feet like a soldier marking time in Chubby Checkers.

Second, you can let your hips do the work in what could be described as a bottom-half shimmy. Third, you can use the Arthur Murray approved method, keeping your weight on your toes and twisting like you are stamping out cigarettes. All of these styles include the familiar bath-towel-to-the-stern arm motions.

NATURALLY, INDIVIDUAL combinations of this dance quickly become to unique to describe. Our vigorous, healthy young generation with nothing else to do in their spare time uses up tons of energy doing the twist. The amount of inertia worked up by one frat man doing the twist within a limited space is phenominal. Still, this dance can be safe, all of that inertia can be kept under control if you stay on your toes.

Simple, isn't it? But an unbreakable rule. Because if you are on your heel and your weight goes out of control, there is nothing to absorb your inertia but a knee, a hip or your back, heaven help you. At least on your toes you have a fighting chance against gravity.

You Can Cooperate

By REEN PERKINS

What would you do if Communism replaced Democracy on the Florida State University campus? What would you do if you lost all the freedoms you now enjoy? You would do nothing just as you have done in the past. Evidence proves this.

SIX NORMAL, American college men on the F. S. U. Campus, all having reasonable intelligence, were asked to write the Pledge of Allegiance and to tell what the Fourth of July symbolizes for Americans. Three of these college men, who call themselves Americans, could not do these two things correctly. This proves many Americans unconcerned about the freedoms they so freely enjoy, freedoms for which many people are giving their lives today.

With Americans being unconcerned Communism could easily take over. We, the upcoming American public, should fight Communism now. A college campus is the best place to start. This is what Project Awake is for.

"PROJECT AWAKE IS composed of members of the campus community who have become concerned over the growing threat of international Communism to our American way of life. We believe that America's ultimate survival depends upon the understanding by its people of the challenge of Communism." Thus Speak Project Awake members.

To promote a better understanding of the nature and aims of international Communism is the first purpose of Project Awake. Only if we understand Communism can we fight it. The revival of interest and understanding in "our basic American documents, our heritage, our government of laws and our economic system" all of which have made America the country she is today, is the second goal of Project Awake. Only with interest can we realize what we have that so many others do not.

THE THIRD AND greatest purpose of the Project is "to offer to citizens certain suggestions which they may accept and act upon in their own way in providing a patriotic rebirth in this nation, and in helping us to stand alert against the enemy." The third purpose is the most important because, once you have the information, it is your duty as an American to act against Communism. So far, there has been little participation and interest in the program on the part of the campus as a whole. Everyone needs to co-operate. You can co-operate by letting your opinion of Project Awake be known.

Project Awake is not affiliated with any other movement. It is an independent project operating on the F. S. U. Campus. Its purpose is to primarily inform and to educate on the subject of Comunism. "We donot profess to be experts or to have all the answers to this problem. But, we do hope to foster awareness and concern on the part of each individual so that he may come to his own conclusions," speak the Project Awake members.

HOW CAN YOU BECOME an active member in this Project? By taking part in the programs. Projett Awake has had three programs. The Honorable Richard Mitchell of the Florida House of Representatives spoke on "Operation Abolition" in December, 1961. A film entitled 'Nightmare in Red" was shown in February, 1962. The next program will be presented on Friday, February 16 at 7:30 p.m. in the Library Lecture Hall. Malcolm Johnson, Editor of the Tallahassee Democrat, will speak on "Subversion by Acquiescence." A discussion period follows each program.

Only with participation and interest will this program be successful, and only with the success of programs such as Project Awake will Communism cease to be a threat to our Democracy. Please let your opinion of Project Awake be known.

Coma

Never On A Monday

By LESLIE POWELL

Coma put on her purple coat, her yellow sweater, her green skirt, threw her red wig into the air and walked under it, then surveyed the mess in her full length mirror though her rose colored glasses.

SATISFIED WITH the artfulness of it all, she flipped a double headed coin and sought to decide whether to spend her day off in the Swami Room or the Pseudo Shop.

The Pseudo Shop won the toss. Coma pulled on her blue suede jump boots, gargled with Old Spice, and ambled to the elevator, cranked up her red velvet chaise lounge and drove away.

"THIS IS NOT going to be a busy day," she muttered. "Mondays are my day of rest mostly because weekends are tough."

"Classes three days a week are enough for anybody. Besides, if I breakfast in the Pseudo Shop, I might get a peek at Robert Sanchez or even Feelthy Jeem Smeeth, boy jazz afficianado."

"MAYBE EVEN A look at Clare Hare, the Sarah Bernhardt of this stage of evolution. Maybe aven a look at Mike Sahara or Malaria Porter designing new circle pins with the bold look."

But, parking her chaise lounge at the coffee urn, Coma noted a peculiar glare in the area. Turning to survey the crowded room, she was blinded by the glitter of gilded objects pinned to varied sweaters affected by tourists.

"TOURISTS ALWAYS wear sweaters when in doubt," thought Coma. "Whether they're seeking altitude or new depths, which is no doubt the case now. I should tip over the coffee urns and flood the room. All the hardware-laden tourists would drown, pulled down by the weight of soggy, gilt laden sweaters. The old timers would be o. k. You couldn't drown them in the Pseudo Shop coffee under any circumstances."

But the tourists were saved. It reoccured to Coma, this was a Monday. Mondays one rested from the weekend. Fridays one rested from the coming weekend. Not a bad arrangement at all.

A Shot In The Ego-Arm

Dear Robert:

Pardon me using your first name, but I hate to use last names of famous people for using their first ones seems to give my ego a shot in the arm so to speak. But I'm getting away from my main purpose in writing you this letter aren't I?

I wish to congratulate you on your article "The Illusion of Food Serivce" which appeared in your Feb. 6, newspaper (Ed. Note: M'am, that was the Flambeau) The sudel (Pardon my marvelous spelling (Ed. Note: We are willing to forgive it if the lady will drop by the office and tell us what "sudel" is. We're fascinated at speculation) way in which you slowly buried our superior food service was quite commendable. I agree with you completely about the food they serve there for it isn't exactly the best I've eaten. It takes a getting use (sic) to before one can truely (sic) appreciate it's many unusual tastes. I should know since I have eaten on the food plan for one semester and am about to start on my second. (Ed. Note: Any minute now she'll excuse herself by saying she cooks like she spells!) At first I was quite shocked to see grease on the glasses but now it has become a game to see just how much grease I can rub off of one glass. Needless to say the ones who wash them are corporating (sic). (Ed. Note: "Corporating" was second choice in Publications down for certain terpretation. The first conclusion would have closed the Student had we printed it.) Perhaps they're having a game to see who can leave the most grease on the glasses.

I certainly wouldn't have joined the food plan if I had had to say so, but those far greater in knowledge felt it would be best. Eavery (sic) parent would know the truth about this plan before they ask their healty (sic) children if they want to use it. I am one of those who has no real choice but to stay on the food plan in order to eat and I have regreted it every (sic) since. I am really ready for some good food and a lot of it. Though, who knows that perhaps they'll begin to give helpings with five eatable beans on a plate instead of four. Then I shall eat like a King.

You stated that usually those who work on such things (Ed. Note: WHAT! as Flambeau, Legend, or Smoke Signals do not eat on the food plan. So perhaps this wee molder of public opinion has helped a little in writing to you just to let you know that I sympathize with those who must eat where only the delicious food from Morrison's is served.

Congratulations (sic) again on or you (sic) article and keep it up. FSU needs more of your type even though the officials may not want to admit it, the students will.

Name Withheld
Smoke Signals Staffer

Editors Note:

Seriously ,the Morrison's manager of all the on-campus eateries stated last week that changes, including a new machine that will keep the grease off the glasses, have been instituted. May we suggest that you complain directly to the managers. In many cases that will be effective.

We Concur

DEAR MR. SANCHEZ:

Congratulations for a job well done! We concur completely with your sentiments concerning the FSU food service. We sincerely hope that your editorial will have some effect. Let's have more of the same until the problem is corrected. We are tired of attempting every morning to keep the raw stirred eggs on our greasy plates.

Give 'em HELL!!!

Inflamed Or Informed?

DEAR BOB:

It is very clear that you have never eaten on "Uncle Sam's" Food Plan for very long — I spent three years eating "non-profit" servings that make Morrison's food appear very satisfying, even when the "human" machinery breaks down.

Some of your remarks were well founded. But many were designed to inflame, not inform.

JAMES E. KILLOUGH

EDITOR' NOTE: We must (inflame - inform) further. Mr. Sanchez is a veteran who spent the usual required period of residence on army posts. Mr Sanches's own remarks: "(I) am quite familiar with Uncle Sam's Food Plan," . . . the food is as good as unit commanding officers insist that it is."

Dissent

Relativity And Tillich

DEAR EDITOR:

In his column dated Feb. 9, Mr. Sanchez makes the mistaken assertion that the Ptolemaic cosmology is a "false hypothesis" because it asserts that the sun revolves around the earth. According to Einstein's theory of the relativity of motion, the Ptolematic or geocentric cosmology is just as "true" or valid as any other. All motion is relative and therefore it makes no difference which body we choose to regard as at rest for the purposes of describing the motion of a system, except in regard to descriptive simplicity. The Copernican or heliocentric theory is far more useful to science only because it is simpler. As Einstein has pointed out, neither theory is "true" or "false" but they are equivalent systems.

Passing on from Mr. Sanchez's ignorance of physics, I am again struck by his pathetic ignorance of the theology of Paul Tillich. Sanchez states that "What Dr. Tillich has attempted to do is to incorporate what science has learned about man and the physical world into the ancient system of the supernatural as rep-Presented by Christian Mythology." This absurd statement reveals a sophomoric misunderstanding of what Tillich is trying to do. In fact, Tillich has never tried to reconcile science and theology and never will. In Tillich's own words, "theology is unconcerned about scientific procedures and results and vice-versa. Theology has no right and no obligation to prejudice a physical or historical, sociological (or) psychological, inquiry. And no result of such an inquiry can be directly productive or disastrous for theology." (Systematic Theology, Vol. 1 p. 18).

Mr. Sanchez, may I suggest that you read the man before you attempt to criticize him? No, perhaps that would be asking too much.

ROBERT W. LOFTIN

Aphoristic?

DEAR MR. SANCHEZ:

May I extend my compliments to you for your most appropriate article condemning the poor food served at the cafeteria. I have long been an admirer of yours, and (sic) am sorry I have not before this time lauded you for your aphoristic statements on the intellectual life of the campus. Like so many people, I am quick to disparage, but slow to bequeath laurels where they are deserved; however, and I hope it is not too great a detriment to my character, my stomach, in violent rebellion against the quality of food and culinary skills displayed in the cafeterias, has shaken my pen out of the doldrums long enough to thank you for exposing this fetid sutuation. And in keeping with the tradition of English letters, I hope that you do not let your satiric pen rest until the scandal and the cry is so great that this unwholesome condition is rectified.

Burton Heads Grant For Theme Studies

A theme writing experiment is being conducted in Pinellas County, Fla., schools for the evaluation of student improvement in written composition.

The experiment will relate the frequency of theme-writing and the thoroughness of teacher evaluation on student composition.

"Theme-writing sometimes is considered a weakness in present day students," according to Dwight L. Burton professor and head of the English Education Dept. at Florida State University. Dr. Burton has received a grant of $12,000 from the U. S. Office of Education to direct the research study. The program is one of the first grants authorized by Congress under Project English.

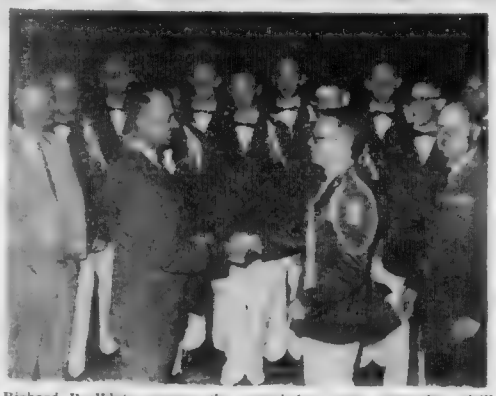
WILL TEST SOPHOMORES

Miss Lois Arnold, supervisor of English instruction for the Pinellas County Schools will conduct the experiment with 400 sophomores in four high schools in St. Petersburg, Clearwater and Largo. The students, in September wrote a theme which will be carefully appraised by three senior teachers living in Pinellas County who are considered to be experts in theme evaluation.

The experiment uses students from two schools as a control. Their writing will continue as in the past and evaluation methods of the themes will remain unchanged. Sophomores at the other schools are grouped in four categories. Some will write themes once a week, others every three weeks, others every four or five weeks, and others less frequently.

"From this four-way grouping," Dr. Burton said, "it is hoped to gain some understanding of the relation of frequency to improvement in writing."

EVALUATED AGAIN



In May, the same 400 students will be asked to do another theme and these will be evaluated by the same three outsiders. Various degrees of improvement will be related to the frequency of theme-writing and the degree of evaluation.

The results are hoped to help in questions involved in theme writing in other school systems. Determining the ideal frequency of theme-writing is important from the standpoint of finding how to get maximum performance and whether less frequent theme-writing is as good as frequent theme-writing.

AFROTC Unit Cops National Award

Cadet 2-Lt Richard B White was awarded the most outstanding drill team commander at National competitions of Air Force ROTC drill teams.

White commanding the Florida State University Unit, led the drill team to four top awards for competition without arms. The national competition included 46 ROTC units and seven Angel Flight teams at Davis-Monthen Air Force Base, Tucson, Ariz.

Richard B. White accepts the award for most outstanding drill team commander at national competitions. The FSU drill team was one of 46 units to attend the meet.

The AFROTC drill team from the University of Hawaii won the three remaining top awards in inspection, regulation drill and exhibition drill. They also presented the FSU team with several momentoes which included a native charm, a ukelele and items of native costume. The trophy and momentoes will be displayed in the day room of the Military Bldg. on the FSU campus.

The competition was sponsored by the Silver Wings and the Arnold Air Society of the University of Arizona in conjunction with the Aero Space and Arizona Days celebrations.

Jug Of Instant Wine, A Loaf Of Dehydrated Bread And...What Next?

Bread stored for five years on a shelf tastes as good to Dr. E. G. Bayfield of Florida State University as the day it was baked.

The secret of the bread's persistent freshness is it has been dehydrated—left in a drying oven at 230 degrees for 14 minutes, until the water content has been reduced from the usual 36 to 38 per cent to as low as five — and then protected from air.

If one likes the bread soft instead of dry as butterless toast he has only to rehyrate it—leave the bread in a very moist room or a moist vessel for a time. The slices then will resume the sofetness they had when the bread first came from the oven.

RESEARCH GRANT

Dr. Bayfield, director of FSU's Baking Industry Program got in to his bread-storing research in 1956 when the U S Quartermaster Corps provided a $25,000 grant for a three-year study of the possibilities of dehydrating bread and later restoring it to its normal consistency in the field.

Bread is the stuff on which armies march and it was thought the soldiers in the field would like to have their bread as much like that as home as possible.

During the three years of research Dr. Bayfield and two graduate students experimented with a variety of ingredients added to ordinary bread dough in order to get the kind of bread which would keep well after dehydration and could be rehydrated successfully.

About 2,500 loaves of bread were cooked, and from the better ones slices of dehydrated bread were placed in plastic bags and piled on top of a cabinet in one of the lab closets.

'KEPT VERY WELL'

"They've kept very well," said Dr. Bayfield, as he munched a slice of the five-year-old bread. "It is dry, almost like toast but the addition of moisture will restore it to the natural soft quality of fresh bread. It will bend in the hand just like fresh bread," he added.

"One of my students who worked on the project," he said, "suggested that a soldier out in the field, could in a pinch wrap the bread in a wet sock to remoisturize it."

Many uses other than that of feeding soldiers in the field might be found for the bread. It might even be possible to feed an isolated area during a disaster by air by dropping plastic bags of the right bread from planes. To restore the bread to life, only a water supply would be needed.

VARIETIES OF DOUGH

In the original research many different formulas and different mixing procedures were tried out. The successful process required the addition of certain gums and emulsifiers to the dough to enable the bread to dry properly and then pick up moisture again when needed as fresh bread.

The mix which was found ideal contained a bread softener, gum arabic and a substance from the kelp found on the floor of the sea.

Girl Watcher's Guide

Presented by Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes

Three views of an average, healthy girl

LESSON 1 - How to recognize a girl

It is not surprising, in these days of constantly changing fashion standards, that girls are often mistaken for men.

Certain popular items of apparel, such as slacks, baggy sweaters and boxy suits, contribute to this unfortunate situation. Therefore, we suggest that new students of girl watching start with the fundamentals (see above diagram). As you can see, girls are easiest to identify from the side. However, even the beginner will soon achieve proficiency from front and rear as well.

Advanced students can usually tell a girl from a man at five hundred paces, even when both are wearing asbestos firefighting suits. (You might try offering the subject a Pall Mall, but you won't prove anything. It's an extremely popular brand with both sexes.)

Retirement age in the United States is usually 65, but on the Florida State University campus the age of retirement has been reduced to 20, for coffee urns, that is.

The golden urn with the sad painted face has been a part of the interior decor of the Campus Soda Shop since the Shop opened in 1940.

For more than 6,000 days the urn produced daily approximately 425 cups of coffee. Simple mathematics will prove that more than 2 million cups have been filled with coffee from the golden urn.

Although the coffee maker is still capable of operation, its size makes it impossible for further service to the increasing number of both students and faculty who frequent the Soda Shop. The urn's three-gallon capacity has been filled more than 113,636 times in order to serve the more than 1100 daily patrons.

Yost Talks On J. Thurber At Coffee

Comedy exists only when one becomes involved in the action, said Dr. George Yost when he spoke on James Thurber at Friday's English Coffee Hour.

"Tears and laughter come from the same nature and comedy is the relaxation of tension," Dr. Yost said. A human connection is necessary for comedy or laughter to exist. "If you can reduce life to a mechanism, then you have a comedy," he added.

Dr. Yost analyzed the art of humor of James Thurber, who writes tragedies comically. He read Thurber's "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" as an example.

CED Speaker:

Education, Research Aid Economic Growth

Florida should direct its energies toward fostering education and research as principal sources of economic growth, Dr. George Macesich told members of the Florida Council on Economic Development Thursday.

Dr. Macesich, research director of the CED, is associate professor of economics at Florida State University. The CED is composed of business leaders, university personnel and state officials.

"Florida has a very good chance of outdoing many of the other states, both southern and northern, if the research and education industries in Florida are properly nourished," Macesich declared.

The role of providing economic intelligence or information becomes clear, he pointed out, when one takes into account the fact that in the period 1929-57, growth in real national income per person employed can be attributed by over 40 per cent to "increase in education" and by over 35 per cent to "advance in knowledge."

"At the same time, it is with respect to these two industries that our type of market economy or free enterprise economy is the least efficient," he asserted. This was in part he said "because results are not immediate, and the individual who spends the money may not reap the profits.

"It is far different for a State, however, which is both beneficiary and the spender," Dr. Macesich noted. He added that this doesn't mean government should supply what is lacking, but that research and education industries should be strongly encouraged by the state, interested individuals and enterprises.

Before joining the FSU faculty in 1959, Dr. Macesich was research economist for the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Washington, D. C. He has served on the faculty of Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago and as research associate in money and banking at the University of Chicago.

Szeryng Plays For Scholarship Fund

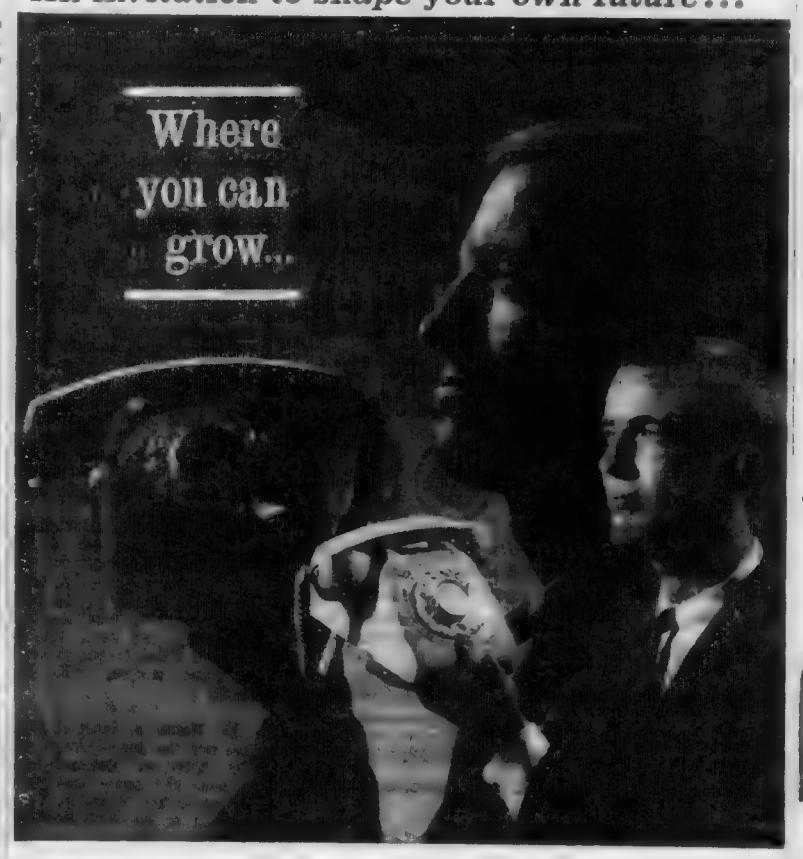
By KELLI NOELLER
Flambeau Feature Writer

Henry Szeryng, a distinguished violinist who has just returned from an entourage of the Soviet Union, honored Florida State University by appearing with the University Symphony last Monday night. The concert was presented by Szeryng for the benefit of the University Symphony Scholarship Fund.

Appearing with the University Symphony, Szeryng played the Jules Guarneri, a very valuable violin. Often times called "a prince of the bow" Szeryng has been playing this particular instrument for almost five years. It dates back to 1743 and is said to be a priceless instrument.

He performed Tschaikowsky and Beethoven concertos as a soloist with the seventy-five member orchestra.

Admission was by contribution toward the fund. Patrons that donated ten dollars or more were seated in a special reserve section.



Szeryng was extremely pleased with the enthusiasm of the audience and the serious attitude of the orchestra", said Sedore, associate professor conductor of the university symphony. "The proceeds will go toward funds to help talented instrumental musicians from Florida and the south-east United States", stated Sedore. "Their proficiency could make a contribution to the symphony on the Pursuit of musical training in our School of Music. It is no always necessary that the benefactor be majoring in music or even have a freshman classification. For instance, an award may be given to a transfer student."

MUSIC COMPETITION

Sedore expressed his gratitude to the students, faculty and citizens of Tallahassee and surrounding communities for their patronage toward a worthy cause. Remarked Sedore, "Competition is getting to be as keen for musicians as it sometimes gets even for good football players. We would like to give scholarships of from fifty to two hundred dollars and we will now be able to do so."

Florida State Breezes By Rebels

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Sports Editor

Unbeaten Valdosta State met its Waterloo Thursday night when it tackled the Florida State Seminoles and fell in battle, 72-42, before 3,500 fans in Tully Gymnasium.

The Rebels, who owned a 15-0 record, were ranked third among small colleges and sixth in team defense, having limited opponents to a 53.4 average per game. The Valdosta squad had meshed the nets 53.7 per cent of its field goals in other games.

But the Florida State easily tarnished the Rebels' perfect record.

Last night, the Seminoles faced the University of Tampa five, but the results were not available at press time. Complete coverage will be given in Friday's Flambeau.

The Seminoles, substituting with an air of abandon, kept high scorer Dave Fedor out of about half the game, but while Fedor played he bagged 19 points. Fedor, hitting 7 - of - 10 field goals, dropped in 5 - of - 8 at the foul line.

Dale Ricketts, number two scorer for the Seminoles, hit for 13 points, scoring 6-of-10 from the field and 1-of-3 at the charity line.

Charley Long of FSU had a cold night compared to the two previous contests — one against Oklahoma, in which he looped 34 points for the season high, and against Houston, in which he tallied 25 points. He still managed to score in double figures (10).

Valdosta, which gave FSU a contest for the first half, and trailed only 34-24, at the half, was spearheaded by Jim Nichols, a 6-5 senior who tallied 13 points. One point behind was Mike Perry, a 6-0 sophomore.

Nichols and Perry were two-thirds of a Rebel triumverate which averaged about 45 points per contest. The third player, Bob Anderson, a 6-5 senior, was able to score only three points, a field goal and a free throw.

Other Valdosta State cagers faced no better on the chart, looping only a third of their shots. The misses became most apparent when FSU moved, 21-7, at the start of the second half.

Florida State also held an edge in rebounding, but a small one as it grabbed 35 out of 32 from the boards. The Peaches' high scorer, Nichols, also grabbed eight rebounds.

Dropping in 30 field goals, the Seminoles scored nearly as many as the Rebels tried. The Rebs hit 12-of-36 from the field and meshed 18-of-25 at the free throw line.

Florida State was Valdosta State's nemisis last year also, snapping the Rebels' 10-0 streak, but the Rebs went on to finish, 19-6, and grabbed the Georgia Intercollegiate Athletic Conference title.

This year, Valdosta had downed Rollins twice and Florida Southern in a 53-52 fracas.

Swimmers Drown Alabama, 52-43

By VICTOR COMOLLI
Asst. Sports Editor

Florida State's swimming team added its winning string to ... meets by defeating the previously unbeaten University of Alabama, 52-43, last Saturday ... in Tuscaloosa.

The Seminoles have won 15 straight dual meets over a two-year period.

Bransford

Sophomore Lee Bransford of Jacksonville rewrote his own school mark in the 50 freestyle to 22.9 a time that would have earned him All-American status last year. Another school record was set in the 400 freestyle relay, which was comprised of Bransford, Dale ..., Paul Thompson, and Pete ... Their 3:29.5 time was one ... faster than last year's ...

Other first place winners for ... were Dick Acosta in the 200 ... stroke and Don Montgomery ... diving.

The freshman squad remained ... feated too, beating the Ala- ... frosh, Westminster Prep ... Tuscaloosa High in a four- ... meet.

The Baby Seminoles were sparked by Jim Mullally of Queensville, N. Y., whose 0:63.3 turning in the 100 yard backstroke set a new freshman record.

He also copped the 200 individual medley in 2:20.9.

A freshman record of 1:49.0 was set in the 200 medley relay by the combined effort of Tom Casper, Sherman Henderson, Jim Busse, and Charles Tandy.

Henderson swam the 100 breaststroke in 1:08.7 to set a freshman record. Henderson rewrote the old record of 1:09.2, which was established by Tom Lasanta last year.

Next Saturday night in Montgomery Pool, the most formidable swim bout in the South will take place when the University of Florida's defending SEC champion Gators challenge the Seminoles' perfect season.

FSU To Face Georgia Quint

Florida State will have another chance to add a notch to its lets-beat-Georgia-in-every-sport gun Thursday night as they face the Bulldogs in Athens, Ga. Previously, FSU has beaten the University of Georgia in football and swimming.

The Seminoles hold an edge as far as games won, having defeated nine and lost eight. Coach Red Lawson's Georgians have a 5-10 overall record and a 1-7 tally in the Southeastern Conference. Saturday night, Georgia suffered its 10th defeat when it fell to the Auburn Tigers, 79-49.

Last night, they faced the University of Alabama Crimson Tide, but the results were not available at press time.

The Georgians seem to have a slight edge over the Seminoles in height, a factor that has thrown the Tribesmen off balance all season. FSU's tall regulars include Dave Fedor (6-6), Ray Swain (6-4), Rufus Ashworth (6-4), and Charlie Long (6-4).

The Peaches could send these players into the court, Harold Morris (6-7), Carlton Gill (6-5), Chuck Adamek (6-5), Charles Bagby (6-4).

Florida State's top gun, Dave Fedor, has been out shooting the best players on the Georgia team. High scorer Allen Johnson of Georgia has been averaging about 16.3 per game. Against Mercer last week he tallied 24 points, including 10 field goals. Fedor has been averaging about 19 per game.

Last year, Johnson, who is now the team captain and senior guard, meshed the nets for a 14.9 average, the fourth best in the Bulldogs book. But this year's average nearly tops all previous efforts by Georgia cagers, because only two players have averaged more than 16.3 in Bulldog history.

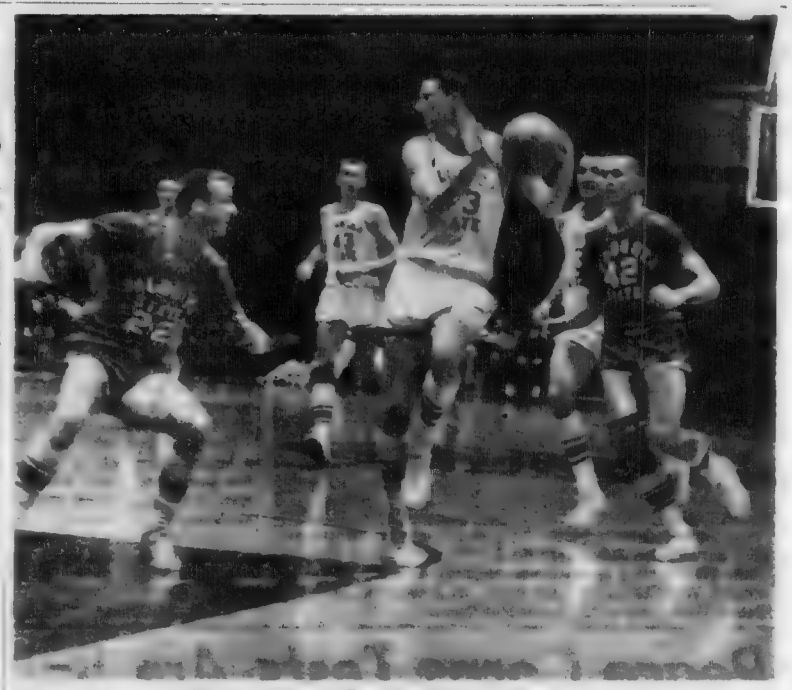
Zippy Moroco hit for 23.6 points per game in the 1952-53 season and Murphy Williams completed an average of 20.1 points a game in the 1954-55 season.

Another high scorer which Georgia will pit against FSU will be Adamek, who netted 18 points in a game last week and came in second in the rebounding department.

Lawson's Bulldogs however, will be without the services of two players in Thursday's contest. They are Joey Miller and Frank Clark, who were averaging 6.9 and 2.0 respectively. The two cagers had been plagued with knee injuries and were retired for the season before the Dogs met Auburn.

36 Footballers Earn Letters; 25 To Return

Thirty-six Florida State Seminoles received letters for the 1961 season, according to Coach Bill Peterson. Of these, 25 are expected to return for the 1962 season.



Junior lettermen include 12 Seminoles. They are tackles Mike Blazovich, Tom Slicker, Bill Tyle, Jim Sims, guards John Levings and Gene McDowell; ends Y. C. McNeese and John McConnaughhay, halfbacks Ken Russom and Tom Hillabrand; center Bruce Darsey; and quarterback Eddie Feely.

Returning sophomores number 13 players. They are ends Cliff Gunter and John Wachtel, guards Jerry Bruner, Bill Daly, and Ferrell Henry; center Chuck Robinson, halfbacks Doug Messer, Larry Brinkley, Marion Roberts, and Dave Snyder; and quarterback Charlie Calhoun.

Only one junior letterman is not returning. He is quarterback Ed Trancygier, who signed a professional contract with a Canadian Football League team.

Graduating letermen include ends Jim Daniel and Fred Grimes, guard Frank DeFrancesco, tackles Steve Klesius, Joe Vebernski, and Don Donatelli; center Larry Hood; quarterback Roy Bickford; fullback Paul Andrews; and halfback Jack Forehand.

Donatelli signed a professional contract with the Houston Oilers of the American Football League.

Naw, You Can't Have It

Ray Swain of the Seminoles plays hop-scotch with the ball as two Rebels try to snatch his prize in the 72-42 victory over the Georgia quintet. Coming to his aid is Dave Fedor, who played about half the game. Swain and Fedor tallied six and 19 points respectively. (Photo by Emmette Jackson)

Frosh Now 9-1

Chipola Breaks Winning Streak

The foul-prone Little Seminoles lost their perfect basketball season Saturday night in Marianna as the Chipola Junior College Indians pulled a 74-70 upset.

Fouling cost the Seminoles 34 points and the use of three players, including high scorer Jerry Shirley.

The Mobile Murphy export who recently bagged 44 points against St. Leo Junior College for an FSU frosh record, was given the boot after the second half was only three minutes old.

But he still managed to loop 23 points — hitting nine field goals and five free throws.

Chipola's Bobby Paschal took advantage of FSU's 49 fouls by dropping in 15 markers at the charity line and then hit eight from the field for a game-high of 31 points.

Paschal, however, also departed via the foul route about halfway through the second session.

Over all, Chipola meshed the nets for a 69 percent free throw average, the winning factor. The Indians sheed the nets for 34 out of 49 free throw attempts. FSU led in free throw percentage by hitting 20-of-28 for a 71 percent effort, but they also yielded the most fouls.

Litwhiler Joins Baseball Clinic

Danny Litwhiler, Florida State University baseball coach, participated in the Fort Walton Beach baseball clinic last weekend along with many other major league players.

Litwhiler, who has guided FSU to a 119-47 record in six seasons, coached the outfield along with Ben Chapman, former outfielder with the New York Yankees and Cleveland Indians and Lamar Rochbourg, superintendent of schools in Okaloosa County and a former Brave's outfielder.

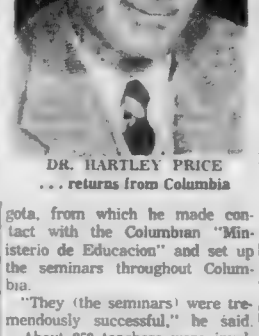
Dr. Price Back From Latin Trip

By JOHN WOOD
Flambeau Sports Writer



Prof. Hartley D. Price, the Florida State University varsity gymnastics coach and coordinator of gymnastic activities in the surrounding area, has returned from a trip to South America.

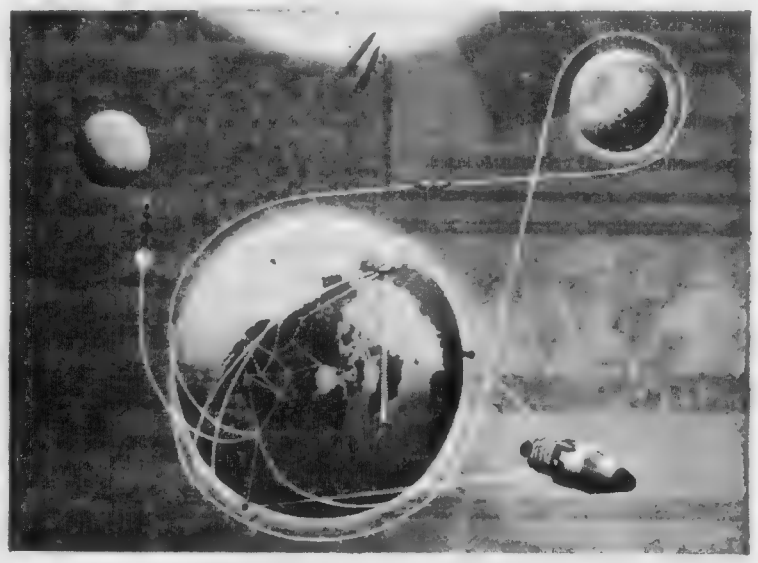
Dr. Price, a nationally known gymnastics coach, visited South America as part of a cultural exchange between the Republic of Colombia and the United States Government. He made the trip to teach the Columbians about physical education under the auspices of the Fulbright Foundation, a division of Uncle Sam's Board of Foreign Scholarships.

This is the second Fulbright Professorship he has won, the first being a similar expedition to India in 1958-59.

This recent trip, from March to December of 1961, involved organizing seminars of physical education to bring sports in Columbia up to a higher level.

Dr. Price was attached to the "Universidao Nacional" of Bogota, from which he made contact with the Columbian "Ministerio de Educacion" and set up the seminars throughout Columbia.

DR. HARTLEY PRICE
... returns from Columbia



"They (the seminars) were tremendously successful," he said.

About 250 teachers were involved in the seminars, which were held in all of the major cities from Bogota to Bacramanga.

The morning sessions were devoted to the overall philosophy of physical education and directed toward the schools, Dr. Price said. Emphasis was placed on a P.E. program with minimum expense, involving improvised equipment, he said. Afternoon sessions permitted the people to practice these things and emphasized all-out effort activities.

Those taking the tests will be considered for the new projects scheduled to begin this spring and summer in Africa, Asia and Latin America.

Anyone interested in applying for these projects may do so by taking the tests and then filling in a Peace Corps questionnaire, or vice versa.

Among the many fields providing opportunities for Peace Corps service are teaching, nursing, engineering, plumbing, carpentry, agriculture medicine home economics architecture, city planning, geology and physical education

While some of the projects call for technical skills, many others require men and women without such formal or specialized training. Among these are liberal arts graduates for community development projects and people with general farming backgrounds to serve as instructor - demonstrators in poultry and livestock care, irrigation, fertinzation and horticulture

"No one should automatically exclude himself from consideration because he considers himself either too highly skilled or not skilled enough," Peace Corps Director Sargent Shriver said in announcing the tests. "We will match qualifications to the growing requests we are receiving from abroad, he said

The minimum age for applicants is 18; there is no maximum.

TWO TESTS

At the test centers, each person will be given his choice between two types of placement tests.

One is for men and women who would like to be considered for positions as secondary school or college teachers. To take one of these tests applicants need a bachelor's degree but they do not need to be an accredited teacher.

The other test is for everyone else who wants to serve in the Peace Corps.

After lunch, anyone may return for an additional optional hour of testing in a field not covered by the morning session

BOC To Discuss FSU Union

Actual detailed planning of the proposed new Student Union may get underway in the very near future.

At a Board of Control meeting in Gainesville today, Florida State University President Gord- on W. Blackwell will request the release of $75,000 in planning money for the new union. The funds to be used would be taken from auxiliary reserves and would facilitate getting the plan- ing of the union underway.

After it has been decided wheth- er the Student Union will be built under the Governor's bond issue or from borrowed federal funds, the reserve funds would be replaced.

In the meantime, however, much of the "red tape" may be cut, and the planning of the union could proceed using the released reserve funds, accord- ing to Dean of Students, R. K. Oglesby.

The administration hopes that actual construction may begin this summer. If this early sched- ule is realized, the new Student Union should be ready for oc- cupation early in 1964.

Other subjects concerning FSU that are to be discussed at the Board of Control meeting are: procedures for setting salaries; consideration of university po- licies concerning political partici- pation of faculty members; and tenure and dismissal of faculty members.

Senate Gets 50-Star Flag, Discusses Who's Who,' Flambeau, Trimester, Etc.

By MILA ARNOLD
Flambeau Staff Writer

ident Senate was pre- with a large hand- n fifty-star flag at the esday session. The a gift from the local erican Legion.

presentation was made by two Legion representatives, Bill Macklin and Doyle Golden, to President of Student Senate Ken Van Assenderp. A smaller flag was presented to Dean Mode L. Stone of the School of Education for use in his own office.

There was also an installation ceremony during the Senate meet- ing. New senators, Willard Os- borne of Alumni Village and Tex- as Willshire, Freshman Class Senator, were sworn in by Chief Justice of the Honor Court, Dan Walbolt.

TRIMESTER COMMITTEE

A progress committee report was given by Senator Ted De LaVergne concerning proposed Senate Trimester Committee rec- ommendations. Senator DeLa- Vergne stressed that this was only a report and not a bill. He began by saying, "this is mainly to give you and to give the Flambeau a good idea of what we're doing."

He added that the plan was agreed upon at a well-repre- sented committee meeting Mon- day night, where reportedly "... Ken got down to cracking the whip!. . ."

The recommendations mainly concerned additions, deletions and changes in the Student Body Sta- tutes, which are referred to for Constitutional definitions.

The recommendations will be presented in bill form only aft- er senatorial opinions are con- sidered and a meeting with the Executive Branch's Trimester Committee has brought forth ad- ditional suggestions.

Senate President Van Assen- derp commented that, "This may seem like bulky material, but it has to be presented in this way" so that all the material can be covered and presented in bill form as soon as possible."

SEMANTICS DEBATE

The bill that was the subject of the semantics debate last week and was referred back to the Judicial and Rules Committee was again presented.

The wording problem was solv- ed by saying that "willful and deliberate disregard (of the Stu- dent Body Statutes) shall be con- sidered grounds for impeach- ment." Nerver the word mis- feasance, malfeasance, or mal- feasance is necessary in the bill as it stands.

This bill was still a topic for discussion, however Senator Jo- die Smith expressed the opinion that according to the new bill almost anything could be con- sidered grounds for impeachment.

Senator Smith illustrated his point by saying that Thomas Jeff- erson was being deliberately un- constitutional when he arranged the Louisiana Purchase but he did it in the interest of the peo- ple.

TRANSCEND CONSTITUTION

Smith added that "In some cases I feel that the Constitution can be transcended here in the best interests of the students" and that the bill in question seem- ed like a punishment resolution.

Senator Joanne Ferlita to whose committee the bill had been referred answered him by saying, "When you pass laws, you do not pass them to punish people, but to prevent mistakes!"

After approximately four weeks of consideration and debate for the purpose of perfecting it the bill was passed with only one negative vote.

WHO'S WHO

A bill was introduced by Sena- tor Ronald Jones, which recom- mended that the required grade average for Who's Who be low- ered from a 2.5 to a 2.3.

Since there are to be 36 peo- ple in Who's Who, the competi- tion should be thrown open to more students and the grade level should not be the same as for Hall of Fame.

Several senators commented that this was only a hair above average and that certainly any- one in Who's Who should be above average and outstanding. Senator DeLaVergne in opposing this

FSU Enters 'College Bowl'; Undergrads May Try Out

Florida State University undergraduate [illegible] at recalling specific facts are invited to a try-out at 3 p.m. Sun- day, for a four-member panel which will compete on the Nation- ally televised G.E. College Bowl, April 1.

Dr. John A. Griffin, director of university relations, an- nounced today that FSU has been invited to be represented on the Sunday evening television program and that Dr. Paul J. Piccard, associate professor of government, has been asked to be in charge of selecting and coaching the FSU participants.

Piccaro said the first tryouts will be held in 124 Science at 3 p.m., Sunday. Students, regardless of their grade averages, who have an expertise in a particular [illegible]

A well-balanced team will be assembled [illegible] questions in ancient and modern European history, English and European literature; philosophy; science, math; economics; current affairs; classical and popular music; art; mythology; and the Bible.

A first team and an alternate team will be selected. The final selections must be made by March 10. Students will be coached in FSU's television studio. If possible a team of two men and two co-eds will be selected for the contest.

Dr. Piccard said the opposition for the contest looks tough. The possible opponents are Haverford College, University of the South, University of New Hampshire and Mundelein.

The show is broadcast live every Sunday night from 5:30 to 6 p.m. EST over the CBS network. The winning college gets $1,500 for scholarships. The loser gets $500. The winning team remains on the program until retired by an opponent or for a maximum of five weeks.

Students will have their expenses paid to attend the event.

Class Officers Needless

The Trimester Committee has just begun working industriously on reworking the Constitution and planning changes which will have to be made under the approaching system.

While they are in the process of changing, cutting, and revising, we think it would be advisable for them to discontinue class offices beginning next fall.

It is not that the class offices are bad. To the contrary, many capable people have served in these positions.

But at present, there is very little for the classes, or their officers, to do and there will be even less under the trimester plan.

FLORIDA STATE students have just about lost all identity with a class structure already. With an increased number of students attending summer sessions, students have moved from class to class fluidly. With the full time operation, students will be able to go and come practically as they choose and there will no longer be any "standard" amount of hours for a particular class strata. Under this plan, only the first semester freshmen and the graduating seniors will be distinctive, while the masses of students in between will be thrown into a hodge-podge of differing hours.

This cuts the already thin tie to class identifications and does away with a need for the post-high school tradition.

If continued, the Sophomore-Senior Investiture could be handled by another Student Government post. Social activities, which comprise the bulk of class officer time, could also be assigned to another section of the government. Neither of these tasks are demanding enough to need complete sets of officers.

STUDENT BODY President Bobby Byrd will propose their abolition to the Trimester Committee Monday. We concur with Byrd that there is no need to keep virtually useless offices in the Constitution. BCS

Youth Are The Same

A series running in the NEW YORK TIMES last week revealed some interesting facets about the Russians youth.

It is interesting to note that the Russians are not as "study-conscious" as the propaganda machines have been telling us. They are bored. Communism holds little excitement for a good majority of them and they look to the West for spice.

A GOOD PERCENTAGE of the Soviet young women are wearing their hair in home-made bouffants and "bee-hives." They also shade their eyes and darken their eye lashes. The young men sport "Princetons" or hair cuts which brush up in front like President Kennedy's.

Russian girls many times copy American coeds while their escorts wear dark suits and narrow ties.

Their music tends to be western in nature. There was a time when the Soviet government tried to jam the Voice of America from broadcasting American music, but now even Moscow stations are spinning some US discs.

THE RUSSIAN youth welcomes Castro to the realm. Now the young men can wear beards and Latin dances, the Rumba, Mambo, etc., are the trend.

One of the frustrations of the Russian is caused by their thirst for knowledge. They don't know how to Twist. THE TIMES correspondent reported that Russian youths spent hours cornering tourists to find out how to do that particular dance.

This leads to one conclusion. Youth are the same around the world. We are restless and rambunctious; we enjoy raising the dickens. An organized government, whether it be American or Russian will never dictate our actions or our thoughts. BCS

Committee Needs Help

Student-Senate Relations Committee has put commendable effort into closing the gap between students from foreign lands and American-born students. Individual senators, who were asked to invite the foreign students, have not matched these efforts.

This is a shame, for the bettering of relations between the visitors and the natives is certainly a worthy cause. Too often, Americans take the term "foreign" too literally and shy away from anyone who differs from themselves. This creates something of a breech that is certainly not beneficial to either.

VISITATIONS OF Senate meetings, invitations to Greek functions, and opportunities to meet American students on a more cordial basis would provide the visiting student with a clearer insight into American life.

Such contact would be equally beneficial to Americans. Brought up in environments which are pretty much alike, we have not had the benefit of contact with people of other cultures. Such contact gives us a better prospective of the immense size of our globe.

The Committee is trying hard, but it needs help if the program is to have any measure of success. BCS

"God Gave This Land To Me!"

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

Recently there was a popular song called "Exodus" in which the popular singer screeched the profound lines, "This land is mine, God gave this land to me." Those who could get through the pickets to see the movie epic associated with those lines may recall the spectacle of Sal Mineo or Fabian or somebody leading The Chosen People back into The Promised Land

THE TROUBLE ALL began, you may recall, when the Arabs who already lived there began singing "this land is mine, Alah gave this land to me! Violence ensued. The Chosen People won, and the Arabs moved next door, where several million now live like animals in refugee camps.

That is strange too, for after the Hungarian Revolt, we could hardly wait to take in thousands of Hungarian refugees, possibly to assauge our feelings of guilt. But the Arab refugees have been around almost a decade longer, and we have accepted a mere handful. Our attitude is causing us to miss out on a glorious opportunity. If a million Arab refugees could be resettled in Arizona, where the desert would make them feel at home, this would simultaneously bring us the good will of the Arab world and get rid of Senator Goldwater, whom the Arabs would undoubtedly find too conservative compared to King Ibn Saud and other assorted sheiks.

BUT I DIGRESS. The point of the story was that The Chosen People and the Arabs both thought Palestine belonged to them, respectively. This raises the question of how we determine just who owns which chunk of the earth's surface. It is a complex question, one which has caused innumerable wars and conflicts throughout history. If there is any answer to the question, it appears to be that nations favor whatever arrangement favors them.

I remember, for example, good old George, a graduate student in meteorology who hailed from Greece. George assured me that Greece was the proper owner of that little piece of territory now occupied by Turkey. The Turks have merely been illegally homesteading there for the last thousand years or so. "They came out of Afghanistan," he persisted, evidently thinking that they should go back.

WELL, GREECE AND Turkey are allies. The problem really becomes complicated when enemies are involved. Who owns Goa? Last month Portugal did. Now India does. India says that self-determination should be the deciding factor of Indian rule. But what about Kashmir? Kashmir is ruled by India, but would rather be part of Pakistan. "Let's change the subject," comes the reply.

No matter how much territory a nation owns, it never seems satisfied. That is why a proposal to freeze things the way they are would bring howls of protest from nations who expect to gain territory or independence, and would be supported only by those who expect to lose territory, as Portugal does. Indeed, why freeze things in 1962? "Why not in 1916?" ask the Germans. "Why not in 1775?" ask the British. "Why not in 1491?" ask the Seneca Indians. "Why not in 1862?" asks Kappa Alpha.

INDEED, WHY NOT? One arrangement seems to be as legal as another, for in fact there does not seem to be any law in international affairs except the old maxim that "might makes right." Unfortunately, [illegible] not proved to be good [illegible] the past Millions [illegible] selessly slaughtered, a [illegible] to the God of international [illegible] lessness. With the threat [illegible] clear war, however, all m[illegible] is in danger. We can no [illegible] afford to tolerate chaos. Violence anywhere involves us. The [illegible] has come for the United States to demonstrate its support [illegible] world law by repealing the Connally reservation and submitting ourselves to the jurisdiction of the World Court. If the United States does not support the rule of world law, who else will?

Shriver Believes In Peace Corps Product

Robert Sargeant Shiver is a square-jawed ex-Marine who throws a recruiting speech that eclipses even the high powered leatherneck propaganda artists.

Shriver uses a hard-hitting brand of patriotism, the type that is tough and proud, to sell his Peace Corps. He says the road of existence is a rough, dirty, weedy one for the Corps member but challanges those with courage to follow. In this, he [illegible] the Marine pitch

But Shriver excells the USMC line when he delivers [illegible] Corps' objective like a knockout punch—to work for a proud and lasting peace by helping raise living standards of people around the globe.

"The people around the world say that we have lost the lean and hungry look," Shriver told the assemblage of college [illegible] at the Overseas Press Club-United States National Student Association conference in New York City.

"We are the "haves" and they are the 'have-nots'," Shiver continued. "And they [illegible] that fat Americans [illegible] hard for anyone except themselves

But on the first anniversary of the Peace Corps, Shiver happily reported that the fat Americans had responded to a plea for tough, patriotic and the rest [illegible]

"Before we had one Peace Corps volunteer, before we even knew if we would have one Peace Corps volunteer, the President of Burma asked me one question," Shriver recalled

The Burma President said 'You think young American [illegible] Kokomo, Indiana, can match the young Chinese Communists [illegible] you think they have the zeal for democracy like the communist zeal

"Of course, I said yes. What else could I say?" said Shriver. "But you know, the American students came through [illegible] I ever dreamed or hoped."

Thousands and thousands of young Americans turned out for qualifying tests. They were sifted and weeded until only the best of the lot remained. Eight hundred and thirty of these lasted and over 600 of their number are now overseas.

I get cards every day," Shriver said proudly. "They all say how tough it is but how rewarding it is working in these countries. I also get letters from the countries asking where they can get more Peach Corps volunteers.

"These volunteers have had experiences that they had never dreamed of [illegible]

Shriver told of the 55 teachers who went into Ghana. Upon leaving the ship, the group was confronted by curious natives peering at the foreigners. As a way of saying hello, the teachers sang in unison the national anthem of Ghana. A local [illegible] recording the song and repeated it throughout [illegible] "The effect on the country was tremendous," Shiver related.

In all of Ghana's history the Africans had never seen white teachers work for black principles. But these white teachers did and this again impressed the African nation," said Shriver

Columbia was another encouraging country. A pair of [illegible] members went to one Columbia town on a mountain and became a popular part of the community. A village in the valley heard of the Americans who did good work, and wanted some themselves.

The Peace Corps members made plans to move [illegible] mountain villagers threatened to hold them forceably. [illegible] the first time I know of that natives have almost fought to keep Americans," Shriver said

The successes of the Peace Corps has satisfied many [illegible] Sen. Barry Goldwater, of Arizona, one of the chief critics, [illegible] Shriver week, "I was one of the skeptics but I have changed my mind after seeing the quality of the Peace Corps volunteers [illegible] am for [illegible] Peace Corps all the way.

The work of the Peace Corps has just begun, but Americans now recognize the need for its work. Shriver has thrown the challange of toughness at the soft American youth and the [illegible] has responded. Shriver is a good recruiter because he believes his product American youth shares in this belief.

The Coming Trimester

TO THE EDITOR:

With the coming introduction of the trimester system at Florida State University and the complexities which will surround it, I have followed with interest the moves being made by the university student government in planning [illegible] for the future.

Having served in student government [illegible] before transferring to this university, I see the need for action on a specific level which would facilitate more competent and less frivolous student government on our campus.

This action is called for in the area of class officers. In a university of this size, under the trimester system, class or class division will be impossible. Also where you have a functioning student government composed of members of all academic standing the usefulness for class officers becomes even more obscure. Therefore, I feel that action should be taken by the Florida State University student government to do away with the redundant institution known as class offices.

Provisions can readily be made for the simplified handling of what functions if any, now being performed by the maze of class offices.

Also, I feel the doing away with of class officers would free many capable students for more useful service to the student body.

Little Orphan Dobson

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to make some comments in reference to the Let's Get Serious column in the Florida Flambeau.

Mr. Dobson stated: "For we have become a natuon of selfish slobs. We are concerned only with our own physical and material well being . . . Let's wink at justice and immorality in the world, and salve our consciences with a few dollars." I wholeheartedly agree that we have this winking tendency, but "superpatriotic" intervention on our part might land a bomb in our laps that would render us unable to wink at anything again.

I am not afraid to defend our freedoms, and the freedom of others but I do think a statement Mr Dobson made does bear a little more consideration than he gave it. The Berlin situation and other crises is a complex problem and there is no easy solution. We have to think before we act, and we had better think pretty carefully. Little Orphan Annie presents Mr Dobson's kind of patriotism but most everyone will agree she is a little far-fetched. I would refer the columnist to an article entitled "The Juggernaut" in the June 24 1961 issue of the Nation.

In closing I would like to say that I enjoy the songs of the Civil War very much. But we cannot forget they were written for 1862 and this is 1962. The Yankees had to face Jefferson Davis and a mounted cavalry; we have to face Nilita Khrushchev and a nuclear bomb. Do these two situations demand the same kind of action?

The Playboys Of

Mighty Mouse Hall

By ALLAN DERMOTT

When I walk through the basement of Kellum Hall on Saturday mornings and see a group watching the "Mighty Mouse Show" on television I for some reason, begin to wonder about the maturity of some college "men." Cannot those who supposedly have the intelligence to come to college spend their time in a more beneficial manner?

WE CAN GIVE SUCH individuals credit for something however in their industriousness to do something besides studying, they are not being destructive except to the inner mentality, of course. They are not—I guess they aren't the ones — throwing explosions around as they were too.

There have been many complaints about the explosions going on in Kellum Hall. The men of Kellum are tired of the idiots who are not only throwing firecrackers and cherry bombs out of windows but also using these explosions and tear gas bombs in the building itself and thus, endangering the lives of other residents.

IN JANUARY, A janitor almost got hit by a flying "toy" of powder. (Last year one resident of Kellum did get hurt and is now wearing a hearing aid

Some have torn up parts of the ceilings, thus, taking away beauty. Some have stolen parts of telephones, thus, taking away conveniences. But those who throw explosives in a building, have and will continue, like idiots, to endanger the lives, and especially the hearing, of the other men

WITH A FEW individuals the least common sense is common sense lacking the power of reasoning, the stupid few forget that freedom in America is not absolute, but is relative. They play, however with others' lives and apparently do not care if someone gets hurt or not. Even when someone gets hurt, the stupid few continue.

The men of Kellum would certainly appreciate it if the firecracker boys would turn their industriousness to some other means of an outlet. Perhaps they might join the group who watches the "Mighty Mouse Show."

Boners

Lots Of Pagantry

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following boners of the funny variety were submitted to us by DR. ALLAN THOMSON, a member of the English Department and an instructor in the Humanities. These boners are from a Humanities 201 section. Once you've read them, you can't doubt that they are genuine.

REUBENS WAS A famous Renaissance artist who experimented with the flesh. He was often soft and sensuous.

So abcessed is Hamlet by revenge that in reality he never acts

PURGATORY, THE PLACE between Heaven and Hell where the souls are cleaned.

Hamlet used reasoning and was thought insane.

The Medieval period had lots of pagantry. . . . . .

. . . ARCHITECTURE is starting to be built more for use than instead of just for religious purposes

People of the United States are either Christian or Jewish. Of course there are the Catholics.

People gradually ceased to be individuals and coagulated into cloisters . . . .

In SAINT APPOLLO NUEVO the Procession of Virgins all walking towards the alter to give the congregation a feeling of participation with God . . . .

The Mousetrap play was a dumb play given by Hamlet

RUBENS WAS KNOWN for his elaborate paintings and sensuous women.

Hamlet started as a human type and ended.

. . . religious scenes, The Virgin Mary, the Last Supper, the Crusifiction, were among the ideas in these paintings.

On Suave, Sophisticated, Arrogant Sorority Girls

By BOB FOSS

Take Lorenzo, now let's not laugh, he's a real goldarn proud fella caused his third great-grand-uncle had paddled a kyak down the Mississippi river, a task not everyone's third great-grand uncle has accomplished. Well anyway, Lorenzo was the most energetic of all energetic college type students. He ran a ricksha service between the Stupid Center and Westcott between classes to pick up enough money so that some day he could be important, and maybe even join a fraternity.

I MEAN IT'S ALMOST a necessity to be in a fraternity because his girl Emerida Cornstarch was a sorority woman and typified the suave and sophisticated arrogance of such Greek organizations. Lorenzo just had to be a fraternity man.

Let's face it, Emerelda was really a catch for any smart guy, 'cause who else could play jai-lai with one arm tied behind their back or write Florida State University backwards in Japanese on the bottom of Wescott pool in three seconds? Quite a girl that Esmerelda

AS FATE WOULD have it though, poor Lorrie was in for a big surprise, for you see, Essie would not even look at a man who didn't worship Lash Larue and save New York Yankee baseball cards. Essie even had Lash's third grade report card and his honest to goodness autograph on a can of Bruton's snuff. You see Essie dipped, but don't judge her wrongly because all of her sorority sisters did too. It was just the thing to do if you were a suave sophisticated, arrogant sorority woman

Let's look in on their [illegible] for that matter, their last. [illegible] ing. It came about when Essie hopped into Lorrie's ricksha [illegible] one of those hectic Monday mornings on the way to a class [illegible] Heating Plant Acoustics [illegible] just happened to be in the Physics Annex. She hopped into the ricksha, bellered "Physics Annex", and as fast as Lorrie size thirteen mucklucks could carry him he wisked his one [illegible] love off with the speed of a Tallahassee firetruck on the way to a trash fire at F. S. U.

ONCE AT HER destination Essie tossed Lorrie a five yen bill muttered something about incompetent ricksha drivers and was gone.

Everything was sweetness and roses until the next day when Lorrie found out that Essie had, the previous night, been pledged to a fraternity man who played jai-lai blindfolded while on a umcycle. This, one might imagine, brought great sorrow to Lorrie's heart and with much thought and deliberation he decided to forget Essie. As everyone who has ever been in love and has a broken heart knows, this is hard but it doesn't bother ole Lorrie. Bright and early each morning he and his ricksha are in front of the Stupid Center; so why don't you take a ride sometime? It's worth it, maybe, if you are a suave, arrogant, sophisticated sorority girl. You might end up mated with a ricksha.

Americans: Not Parrots

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to take this opportunity to comment on the situation exemplified by Reen Perkins' column of Feb. 13—the drawing of erroneous conclusions from trivial facts or observations. While the main part of the column may be true, the first two paragraphs of the column are illogical if not irrelevant.

In my mind six people would not provide an adequate cross-section of even the 9,873 students on this campus, let alone the entire American public.

Even if it is true that one-half of the students cannot parrot back the Pledge of Allegiance and "tell what the Fourth of July symbolizes for Americans," Americans are not proven to be unpatriotic or unconcerned. If the only prerequisite to believing in the American way was the ability to quote American documents and describe American historical events, I am certain that most communists could qualify as patriots.

From before World War II until now trite statements have been made about the American population being unconcerned about the threat from their country's enemies. The "unconcerned" American has always responded with his life or financial sacrifices in the time of need. Today Americans give financial aid to their government, CARE, Radio Free Europe, and other organizations to repel the Communist threat to this nation and the world.

Project Awake may be a fine thing, I am not attacking the Project or its effort to awaken Americans to the threat of Communism. However, I take offense at the statement that Americans are unconcerned, and the method by which the statement was justified.

THE ANGEL FLIGHT DECIDED THAT EVEN THE BEST OF groups needed to practice so Sunday night they decided to fall-out and go through their routine for the next day's Gasparilla parade.

HAVING LEFT TALLAHASSEE EARLY SUNDAY MORNING AND TRAVELING FOR SIX hours on the bus, those cots looked real good. The girls just couldn't wait to snuggle up in them.

ONCE IN BED, NOT TOO MANY OF THE GIRLS FOUND IT NECESSARY TO COUNT SHEEP in order to get to sleep. It was off to dreamland for the Angels, with pleasant thoughts of the day to come.

THE CALL OF "ARISE AND SHINE" CAUGHT the girls hurrying to get dressed and to the route of the parade.

THE GIRLS OF THE ANGEL FLIGHT PUT ON A DISPLAY OF PRECISION MARCHING THAT the Jose Gasparilla pirates won't soon forget.

MONDAY AFTERNOON, THE GIRLS WERE the guests of MacDill Air Force Base where they had lunch on the chow line.

The Florida State University Angel Flight participated in the annual Gasparilla parade in Tampa, Florida, on February 12.

The Angel Flight left Tallahassee by bus Sunday morning. Besides taking part in the parade Monday, the Angel Flight put on a short drill-team exhibition before the grandstand at the state fair grounds at parade's finish. In the afternoon, the Angels were guests of MacDill Air Force Base, having an opportunity to inspect one of the bombers stationed at the base. The Flight returned to Tallahassee Tuesday.

THE TRUE AND TRAGICAL TALE OF HAPPY JACK SIGAFOOS

Who would have thought that Happy Jack Sigafoos, the ver[y] lucky never-rewarded, would be found on the edge [illegible]

Certainly there was no sign of it on his boyhood. H[is] life was tranquil and uplifting. His mother was a nice fat [wo]man who baked a lot and gave baskets to the poor. H[is] was a respected citizen who could collect more than [illegible] calls and once saved a widow from dreadful [illegible] good suit. That was Mr. Sigafoos was in his good [illegible] elderly widow was [illegible] trunks. Happy Jack's [illegible] was nothing short of idyllic, till he went off to college.

Here Happy Jack quickly became a typical freshman—tweedy, seedy, and needy. He learned the joys of rooming off his parents' purse, and he learned it fast. His [illegible] like dew before the morning sun. There were times [illegible] me to report when, to date, I have never been enough [illegible] pack of Marlboro Cigarettes—and you know how [illegible] that can be! I rely deeply on Marlboro's matchless flavor, its [illegible] its delicious tastiness, its superb mildness, its ineffable excellence—its soft pack or flip-top box—with [illegible] prospect to break the heart in Jack.

Mercifully and mercifully, Happy Jack used to get [illegible] money from home. He wrote long, supine, cringing letters [illegible] out that the modern, liberated co-ed girl [illegible] courted on his meager allowance. But all Jack got back [illegible] home were tiresome homilies about thrift and prudence.

Then one dark day a sinister sophomore came up to Jack and said, "For one dollar I will sell you a list of fiendishly clever lies to tell your father when you need some extra money."

He gave Jack the list of fiendishly clever lies. Jack read:

1. A bunch of us fellows are getting together to buy a new house for the Dean of Men.
2. A bunch of us fellows are getting together to buy a headstone for Rover, our late beloved dormitory watchdog.
3. A bunch of us fellows are getting together to endow a chair of Etruscan Art.
4. A bunch of us fellows are getting together to build our own particle accelerator.

For a moment poor Jack was tempted; surely his father could not but support all these laudable causes. Then Jack's good upbringing came to the fore. He turned to the sinister sophomore and said, "No, thank you. I could not deceive my aged parent so. And as for you, sir, I can only say—fie!"

Upon hearing this the sinister sophomore broke into a huge grin. He whipped off his black hat and pasty face—and who do you think it was? None other than Mr. Sigafoos, Happy Jack's father, that's who!

"Good lad!" cried Mr. Sigafoos. "You have passed your test brilliantly." With that he gave Happy Jack a half million dollars in small bills and a red convertible containing power steering and four nubile maidens.

Crime does not pay!

Money and girls haven't changed Happy Jack. Except for the minor bulge in his cashmere jacket caused by (1) a pack of Marlboros and (2) a box of Marlboros, he's the same old Sigafoos.

Two Gridders Ink Contracts

more Florida State football players have signed professional contracts. They are Fred Grimes and Roy Bickford, important defensive players in the 61 campaign.

Grimes, "the guy who gets the job done," signed a pact with the Denver Broncos. The 185-pound end came to Florida State from Hialeah.

Bickford of Miami, a 195-pound linebacker who saved the Florida State-University of Florida game with him outstanding defensive work, signed with the Buffalo Bills. The defensive phenomenal led the Seminoles in tackles during the past season.

Grimes and Bickford did not receive aid at Florida State under athletic scholarships, but received them later when they went out for the team.

Have 9-0 Record

Frosh Face Eight Squads This Week

Florida State's freshman basketball team, probably the most successful in FSU history, will carry a 9-1 record into the final, hectic part of its schedule.

In eight days, the Baby Seminoles will meet five opponents. They will travel to Albany, Ga., to meet the Albany marines and Grahame Air Base today and tomorrow.

Next week, they will battle against the Gulf Coast Junior College quint, the University of Florida freshmen, and the Orlando Junior College unit.

Jerry Shirley, a big pivot man from Mobile, Ala., led the Tribe to nine straight victories, a freshman record before its lone loss to the Chipola Junior College Indians. Shirley also leads his teammates in both shooting and rebounding.

He has hauled 161 rebounds off the boards and has tallied 246 points. The 6-5 center is hitting over half his field goal attempts with 101 baskets out of 190 tries. From the foul line, he has made 44 of 60 free throws.

Against St. Leo, Shirley scored a single-game high for the season with 44 points and against the Pensacola Jaycees he brought down 25 rebounds for a game record.

A high school teammate of Shirley, Ross Winter, is second in the scoring race with a 16point average in nine games. He has buckoted 117 markers.

Cal Huge, a promising freshman from Madison, Wis., is the only other player averaging in double figures. The 6-4 forward was sidelined in the first game of the season with an injury, but he has still managed to pour in 57 points in the five games he has played in.

Second Half Of 'Murals Begin Soon

The second season of the intramural competition is drawing to close this week and the early part of next week. Most of the sports are beginning their semi-final or final competition the early part of next week.

According to Mr. Elton Hinson the badminton tournament in fraternity league has been won by Kappa Alpha. The final game was Wednesday night between two of Florida State's varsity tennis players, Paul Scarpa of Kappa Alpha and Gordie Smith of Sigma Chi.

Scarpa won the singles competition for his team. Tony Williamson and George Heflin won the doubles competition for the KA team.

Seminole Tankers Face UF

By VIC COMOLLI
Asst. Sports Editor

A mythical state swim title will be up for grabs at 8 tomorrow night when the University of Florida Gators invade Montgomery Pool.

A capacity crowd is expected to be on hand to witness the clash between the two undefeated Titans, which are recognized as the outstanding swimming teams in the South.

Although the Gators have not been able to defeat the FSU mermen in their last eight encounters this year they are expected to present a most formidable obstacle to the Seminoles' hopes for a perfect season.

The Gators, claiming to have the strongest team in the school's history, have already been established an overwhelming favorite to capture the SEC championship for the seventh time in a row.

During the present campaign, they have rolled without mercy over every form of opposition placed before them, including Alabama, Georgia Tech, Georgia, East Carolina College, North Carolina, and North Carolina State.

It is well known that the Gators have been preparing for this meet with due care. As UofF's sports publicity director Jimmy Gay puts it:

"It is notable that much Florida conversation centers around an upcoming meet with Florida State in Tallahassee on Saturday, Feb. 17. The Gators haven't beaten FSU since 1957, but feel they have a strong chance to pull off the trick this year."

Florida coach Buddy Crone will rely heavily on the performance of sophomore Jerry Livingston, who has bettered the existing SEC record in the 200 yard butterfly to 2:06.6.

Another Florida bright spot will come in diving where All-American Steve McBride and Lansing Price give diving coach Bill Harlan reason to brag that he has the "Best one-two punch diving in the South."

Other standout individuals for the Gators are Eddie Reese in the 200 individual medley, Bill Grover in the 50 freestyle, Terry Green in the 220 and 440 freestyle, and Harry Wilder in the 100 freestyle.

LOST ALL-AMERICANS

On the other hand, the Seminoles will have to rely on sophomores from last year's outstanding freshman team to provide depth. Florida State lost All-Americans Bucky Hiles and Curt Genders, the NCAA low board champion, at graduation last year.

Seminole Coach Bim Stults will count on senior All-American candidate Paul Thompson to provide the leadership necessary to derail the Gators. Thompson owns the school marks in the 220 and 440 freestyle.

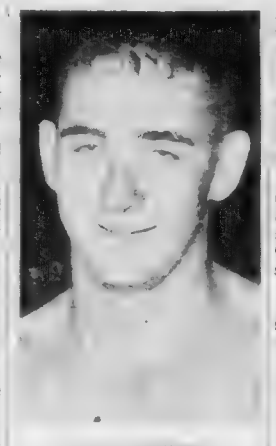
Other outstanding Seminoles are Risto Pyykko in the butterfly, Mark Owen in diving, and Pete Davis in the backstroke.

Florida State will also rely on sophomores such as Lee Bransford in the 50 and 100 freestyle, Tom Lasanta in the breaststroke, and Dick Acosta in the backstroke.

Interesting contests seem to be developing in both relay events and in the 50 yard freestyle, since both Bransford (FSU) and Grover (U of F) have recently set new school records at 22.9.

FROSH TO MEET

An equally interesting duel will shape up as the FSU frosh meet the L'il Gators in a preliminary encounter at 7 p.m. Both fledgling squads are undefeated.



Coach Dee Edington's Baby Seminoles have posted records for the season with wins over the Georgia Bulldogs, Georgia Military Academy, and the Alabama frosh.

Standouts on the team are Sherman Henderson in the breaststroke, Bruce Quayle in the free style, and Jim Mullally in the backstroke.

Henderson last week rewrote Tom Lasanta's record of 1:09.2, which was set last year in the 100 breaststroke at 1:08.7. He [illegible] a member of the 200 medley relay team which set a new mark at 1:49.0. Other members of the record setting relay team were Tom Cassese, Tony Bissese and Charles Lamy. The old mark of 1:49.2 was set last year.

Mullally, who swims as smooth as [illegible] last week. His [illegible] time in the 100 backstroke erased Tom Acosta's :60.8 effort of last year.

Two former prep All-Americans, Neal Allen of West Palm Beach and James Payne of Atlanta, give the team strength in diving.

Mississippians Shock Kentucky

The latest 'shocker' on the basketball scene is the upset of the Kentucky quintet by the Mississippi State in a 49-44 contest Monday night, the same night Florida State was dropping the Tampa basketball team.

This seems to be the age of upsets (for everyone but undefeated Ohio State). Loyola of New Orleans gave the University of Miami's hot-and-cold team a shellacking to the tune of a 43 point margin.

The same night, the University of Georgia Bulldogs fell to fellow SEC team member, the Auburn University. Then FSU, using its second squad effectively for a period, defeated Tampa, on the same night that Georgia was once again defeated . . . this time by the University of Alabama.

Seminole fans following the Tribesmen in several Southern newspapers occasionally have a game - like tendency to judge the amount of publicity FSU gets in out - of - town newspapers.

For instance several students have noticed that the Gainesville Daily Sun is somewhat prejudiced in its coverage, while the local Tallahassee Democrat consistently gives our team a good spread, for rather obvious reasons.

The Florida Times - Union recently devoted an entire column to FSU's 6-6 Dave Fedor, an unusual event since the Atlantic paper has written about FSU in an entire editorial column only once before.

The two Miami papers, the News and the Herald, have been known to grudgingly metion Florida State and other rural schools. A Miamian might never have known that the Hurricanes fell to FSU in basketball this year.

But two newspapers which have surprised Florida State followers, are the Birmingham News and the Atlanta Constitution.

The News covered the Seminoles like they were an Alabama squad when FSU faced the Crimson Tide. The paper sprinkled the pages with headlines saying "Fabulous Fedor" and "Bama Makes Like Buckeyes" — an indirect compliment since the paper was aware of Ohio's effortful win over Florida State.

Unlike some papers south of Tallahassee, the News' coverage was extremely fair and impartial.

FSU's recent loss to Houston rated one of the biggest, if not the biggest, basketball heads in the Constitution last week . . . biggest headline not counting Tech and Georgia, of course.

The University of Florida freshman cage team, which has been regarded as one of the best in the nation by its coach, has a 5-2 record this year. They fell the first time on their home court . . . to a former girls school. (Guess who?)

The luckless Rollins five, to whom nobody has shown any mercy (including FSU), has a perfect record — all losses. They fell for about the 20th time last week.

The Gainesville Daily Sun proposed that next year ROTC cadets of the University of Florida surround the playing area to keep "fans" from having an after-the-game gathering on the field at the FSU- Florida football game.

Considering this an interesting proposal, we would suggest that perhaps FSU cadets could line one side of the field and U ofF the other. The end zones, of course, would be manned by neutrals from the University of Miami and the University of Tampa. And Air Force cadets could fly in bombers overhead . . . .

We're told that the Tribe tankers have a wetback on the varsity squad with the name "Fix." We're also told that it's rather fortunate that he's not on the basketball team . . . the scandals, you know.

Varsity cager Bob Ek probably has the shortest name in collegiate basketball according to a recent report from the NCAA.

FSU Stomps Tampa In 91-71 Triumph

The University of Tampa Spartans, the team that upset the Miami Hurricanes, fell to the Florida State Seminoles, 91-71, Monday night in Tully Gymnasium.

Last night, the Seminoles met the University of Georgia Bulldogs in Athens, Ga., but results were not available at presstime. For complete coverage read Tuesday's Flambeau.

For about the first 10 minutes at the beginning, it appeared that the Tribesmen might meet an upset similar to two Clemson encounters, the lead changing eight times during the opening minutes.

Finally Charlie Long, a high scorer who dropped in 34 markers against Oklahoma, gave FSU a permanent lead by putting in a layup for a 24-22 score. When the Seminoles had built up a small margin, the exhausted Seminoles called a timeout from Tampa's fast running game, and Coach Bud Kennedy sent in the second squad.

The second squad, holding their own and occasionally outscoring Tampa, padded the margin to nine points at the half with a 48-39 tally. The same group started after the half, while Coach Kennedy eased the starters back in one by one.

The Spartans, however, were still shooting for a victory and fought both first and second squads in order to close the scoring gap. With 6:43 left in the game, they were trailing by only six points with 71-65 on the scoreboard.

But after that the Indians exploded, kept the Spartans from cutting the margin, and chalked up their 10th triumph against eight losses.

The Tampa five, which now have a 12-9 tally, were led by 6-0 John Pelligrini, who scored the night's high by looping 23 points. The Spartan guard canned 10 - of - 24 field goal attempts and 3 - of - 4 at the foul line. Tampa's George Shary tied Long for second place honors by hitting 17 markers. Shary hit 6-of 17 field shots and 5-of-8 charity line tosses.

Dale Rickets backed up Long in the statistics by canning 15 points. Rickets who played three - fourths of the game and worked with both the first and second string, copped the Seminole field goal percentage title. He dropped in 7-of-8 attempts.

Dave Fedor connected for 13 points hitting [illegible]-of-16 from the field and 3-of-5 at the line. Dan Prev[illegible]

Fedor, who dragged the ball from the boards 17 times, received three personal fouls in his efforts to help FSU to its 69-42 rebounding victory.

Ray Swain also hit for 13 points, meshing the nets five out of 13 times from the field and 3-of-3 at the line. Wally Dale, who connected for 10 points, received the highest number of Seminole personal fouls (4).

Coach Enderson Tampa's 6-1 forward was the only player to foul out, [illegible] scored two points. Other Tampa players to hit in double figures [illegible] Harvey Mallis (12) and 6-7 center [illegible] view, said that "It's not how smart you are, but how much you do . . . " that is important here.

At the request of Senator Jeannie Ferlita, Senator Jones will bring to the next Senate meeting a list of the Who's Who grade averages from other universities and a letter from Who's Who which lists the purposes of the organization. The list and letter will be considered by all the senators before they vote.

The bill was referred to the Judicial and Rules committee.

Senate also considered three other bills and three resolutions Wednesday. Senate action on these recommendations was as follows: The rules of procedure were waived and a bill limiting election campaign placards to one on each side of the provided boards was passed unanimously.

LUCKY STRIKE presents: LUCKY PUFFERS "THE FACULTY TEA"

THE PROFESSORIAL IMAGE. It used to be that professors, as soon as they were 28, took on a father image — rumpled tweeds, tousled hair, pipe. But these days, the truly "in" professor has the "buddy" look — Ivy suit, crew cut, Lucky Strikes. It seems that students learn more eagerly from someone with whom they can identify. Alert teachers quickly pounce on the fact that college students smoke more Luckies than any other regular. Have you pounced on the fact yet?

Sponsors Write 'Campus Sing Credo'

In hope of promoting more interest and participation in music at Florida State University, members of Sigma Alpha Iota and Phi Mu Alpha, music honoraries, the sponsors of Campus Sing, have written the following campus sing creed.

"We, the members of Phi Mu Alpha and Sigma Alpha Iota do hereby believe and proclaim the following creed:

"We Believe that through music, human nature will be uplifted, sweetened and refined.

"We Believe that music has myriads of voices and instruments, and is in the hearts of all men, on their tongues in all lands and among all people.

"We Believe that music speaks to all men in a language that all understand.

"We Believe music to be a necessary luxury to all mankind.

"We Believe that in all ages music has inspired men with hope, kindled their love, and soothed them in times of despair.

"We believe that music is the most delicate, subtle and most powerful medium for the expression of man's emotions."

3 Students Injured In Car Accidents

Three Florida State University students were injured in two separate accidents last weekend.

Two members of Pi Kappa Alpha, Eric Anderson and Ken McNulty suffered broken legs when a car driven by Peter Garvey ran into the lightless fraternity fire truck which they were pushing, police said.

The accident occurred on Woodward Avenue near Waldwood Friday night.

The driver of the car, Garvey, was charged with reckless driving by failing to have his vehicle under control, while the driver of the fire truck, Francis Scott Duff, was charged with operating a vehicle without lights.

A graduate student in the Government Dept., Miss Janice Snook, was hospitalized with fractures and lacerations after the car she was riding in over-turned early Sunday morning in Franklin county near St. James.

She was treated at the Carrabelle Hospital for a fractured right forearm, multiple cuts, and a possible broken nose and ribs, police said. She was transferred to Tallahassee Memorial Hospital.

The car, a 1960 Volkswagen, was judged a total loss after the driver, Daniel Voornes Coleman, lost control while rounding a curve, Highway Patrol Trooper C. W. Moore said.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the student body as a whole or the administration of Florida State University. Editorials represent only the opinions of staff members and the initials of the writer following the editorial.

'Official Hostesses'

Florida State University has seen many examples of boorish audience behavior and rudeness to performers, but the latest incident along this line bears special notice.

AT THE SEVEN o'clock "Highwaymen" performance, it was not the audience but the ushers, black-clad "official hostesses," who disturbed the show and irritated paying customers. To begin with, they [illegible] reserved one and one-half rows "for the ushers and their dates" at the front of the center section of Westcott. Gloves, purses, etcetera, were left in the [illegible] while two young men sat guard at either end of the full row, barring seats from customers.

Although the Village Vamps do not pay for tickets, over 30 paying guests were turned away from the best seats in the house to leave space for the escorts and members of the service group. Supposedly, it is an honor to be chosen for this group. As official hostesses and ushers, it seems reasonable to expect them to set a good example for other students. Their "honorary" status gives them the responsibility of seeing that patrons are not disturbed unnecessarily. It does not give them the privilege of being rude.

BEFORE ALL OF the audience was seated, seven of the young ladies trooped down to claim their places. After the lights were dimmed, another handful of ushers climbed over spectators to reach the choice "reserved" seats.

One "Vamp" took her seat after the singers began, got up and went to the back of the auditorium, and then returned to her front-and-center place; all while the performers were on stage.

IN ADDITION, those spectators who sat in the back of the room might be interested in knowing that six of the "reserved seats" were left vacant until intermission, when paying customers filtered down to take them. VV's not only reserved places for themshelves, but also for "dates" who never came. Of the entire "saved" row, only three places were taken by Village Vamps who were ushering.

THE ONLY FUNCTION of the "Vamps" is "to serve as official hostesses" for the university. If its members cannot perform their duties graciously and properly, the campus has little need for such an organization.

It is difficult to believe that Mrs. Kay Vernon, who has done such an excellent job in educating FSU students in proper audience etiquette, would sanction such behavior in these official representatives of the university. Perhaps she credited the "Vamps" with more common sense and consideration than they have. At any rate, we are counting on her to see to it that this does not happen again.

ALTHOUGH the necessity of providing free entertainment for "dates" is questionable, it seems reasonable to award complimentary tickets to ushers. However, since one of the duties of an usher is to prevent people from entering while the performers are on stage, they should be seated in the rear of the auditorium. They could then come and go as their duties require, without disturbing the audience. T. D.

The Search For Values

Religious Emphasis Week is being observed on the Florida State University campus as usual. And as usual, it is being greeted with the same sort of apathy that typically characterizes the college students attitude toward religion.

This is unfortunate. "The Search For Value", this year's topic, is a subject vital to the education-seeking college student. At this point in our lives, we are daily thrown into a whirlpool of conflicting facts and philosophies. We are constantly exposed to information which shakes our old notions to the core. We are continually forced to modify and revise ill-conceived views in light of new facts or new ideas. College years are [illegible] times for those of us who [illegible] knowledge.

THE ANSWER TO our bewilderment lies in seeking out answers to questions which, not facts and ideas prompt. Serious thinking is necessary if we are to ever come to our own private conclusions and consolidate our personal thoughts concerning the many religous and philosophical avenues open to us.

A thought provoking discussion as "The Search for Value" provides us with an opportunity for such serious thinking. The presence of the Godless creed Communism as a powerful world force emphasizes the need for sober contemplation.

TALKS BY DR. George Buttrick, Dr. Douglass Steere, a panal discussion by Dr. Anna Forbes Liddell, Dr. Jackson Ice, Dr. Gulner Bosch, and Dr. Allan Thompson, and other talks remain on the program. We feel that all of these presentations will be valuable experiences. The wise college student will not pass up this opportunity for serious thought. B.C.S.

Light Tennis Courts

Tennis enthusiasts at FSU are faced with a big dilemma as to how they are to play tennis at night on campus, when presently none of the courts are lighted.

Although the tennis courts behind the women's gym are encompassed with an adequate lighting system, someone has ordered that the power for these lights is to remain off. No one seems to know who ordered these lights to be turned off, or what procedure a student is to use to get the power turned on. All that is known, is that the lights do not work.

To many students who work in one capacity or another during the day, the only time available for them to participate in such an extra-curricular activity is in the evening. The university has just as great a responsibility to these students as it does to any other group on campus. By not giving them equal opportunity for playing tennis, the university is shirking its responsibility to these students.

We feel that the students are due an explanation as to why the lights on these courts have been turned off, and how long this situation can be expected to persist. Furthermore, we feel that those in authority should re-evaluate the situation and seek a remedy by which the lights will be turned on again shortly. J.S.

Interview With A Great Orchestra

By CHRIS CLARKE

EDITORS NOTE: Columnist Clarke, new and welcome addition to the Flambeau ranks, spent the major portion of two entire days with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra personnel while they were in Tallahassee.

For this reason the column today is less involved with the actual music performed than with short sketches of interesting individuals making up the talented basis of a big, professional symphony orchestra.

For two nights last week the Detroit Symphony Orchestra under Maestro Paul Paray played to delighted audiences in Westcott Auditorium. The quality of the music was superb, though Beethoven is not Mr. Paray's forte as is the music of the French composers. Nonetheless, his readings of Beethoven Seventh and Sibelius' Second symphonies the main works of the performances were very satisfying. In addition the Hebrides Overture was beautifully played and the aisle women by Franks Eros et Psyche speaks for itself.

BUT WHAT DID the audience see or know of the ninety musicians that produced this music under the guidance of Paray? Not very much. I am afraid. For the most part the audience saw only a group of men and women dressed in black. Let's take a look, though short and belated, at the people who make up one of this country's great symphony orchestras.

The top man is, of course, Paray. During our interview, he insisted on showing his agility. In addition to telling me that he takes a two hour walk each morning, he did exercises and gripped my hand with strength that would do justice to a man twenty years younger than his seventy - odd summers. That he has a good sense of the dramatic can easily be seen by the fact that he conducts without a score (this, incidentally also shows a terrific memory on his part and discipline on the part of the orchestra) and in the spritely way he receives applause.

IN ADDITION TO PARAY, there is one of those wonderful people whose efforts go unnoticed by all but a very few. And yet without Madame Paray and the influence of this charming and lovely lady, the Detroit Symphony would most certainly not be the same. Everyone loves her.

Let's look now at violinist Felz Resnick. He is not only a fine musician, but also an ex-school teacher whose knowledge of the classics in both music and literature is impressive.

CONSIDER TOO HIS roommate, Jack Boesen. His is a tremendous capacity . . . for many things. He not only plays a fine violin, but has a special interest in modern politics.

Lee (Larry) Wardrop, probably the finest English horn player in this country, dotes on his wife and young daughter. In fact, he sent her her first valentine while here for the concert.

MARIO DI FIORE LOOKS more like a young Macys' Santa Claus with a wide Italian grin than an enthusiastic young cellist.

Irez Hollinger, one might single out as a college cheerleader. Actually she is a pert young violinist with a liking for running about barefoot. Inez enjoys making her own clothes.

ARTHUR COOPER, PERCUSsionist, has played with the Detroit [illegible] for 48 years (that's longer than even Leslie Powell has been around). It is his excellent drumming you hear on the Detroit's version of Ravel's Bolero.

Irvin don't call me Irving! Gilman is a flutist who loves jazz. It is Irvin who has organized swing group within the orchestra, the only organized jazz group in any U. S. Orchestra. Herbie Mann fans might be interested to know that Irvin and Herbie went to music school together.

"TIPPY" TIPTON IS tremendously proud of his platinum flute. It was tall, handsome Tippy you heard doing the fluting in the Fantasia on Greensleeves by Vaughn Williams.

There are many others. Morris Hochberg . . . Taras Hubiki . . . Elmer Jones . . . Walter Evich . . . Eugenia Staszewski . . . it would take too much space to name them all but they are wonderful people.

DURING OUR INTERVIEW, Paray told me that he was especially proud of the "esprit de corps" of the orchestra. That feeling sums them up much more adequately than anything I could write. So we seem to have a formula that gives us a whole greater than the sum of its parts. Take a fine conductor, add a group of talented human beings and "esprit de corps," and you come out with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. To anyone who attended the concerts last week the meaning is clear.

Rambling Weather

By LESLIE POWELL

The weather, until yesterday at least, has been pleasant. Real rambling weather, the kind that lit the absenteeism fuse in high school.

So it being weather, I think I'll ramble. At FSU you have nothing to lose but your neck.

FIRSTLY, AND I'VE intended saying this for a long time. I like Dean Warren. Any friends I lose by that admission probably weren't worth having anyway. After a forever at FSU I finally met a real live Dean. Better, I met the lady reputed to be a dragon and I feel happy to report that it ain't necessarily so. However, don't take my word for it. Ask the female "veterans" you know; the ones that if they had a nickle for every trip they've made to Dean Warren's office, would be too loaded with loot to move. Some of them have been in to Dean Warren on less than laughing matters, and having taken such medicine as was meted out, still like the lady. And I think that word sums up the Dean of Women at FSU very accurately. I think she's a real lady. You hardly ever see one anymore.

If Tuesday afternoons catch you with something like an hour of leisure time around three o'clock or so, step over to Opperman Music Hall and take in a student recital. There often is a very very good program all for free. I don't know who will be performing this week, but I do know that such outstanding student musicians as Ethel Donaldson, Joy Davidson, Ruth Rice, Patty Sue McCarty and a host of others take an opportunity to perform with gusto.

If you like music other than the juke variety, try the free programs held in Opperman auditorium. Remember, you aren't getting only the effects of talented students, but are having a look at the effectiveness of the techniques and methods of such instructors as Nikolaidi, Grimm and others. It's very much worth your time.

And with that I think I had best ramble off to the math department. They love me over there. I'm a perennial. The biggest challenge to their lousy texts since the Russians launched the first sputnik.

Funnin'

The Finkness Of It All

By Jim Smith

There comes a time when all people should be acceptable in the light of human finkness. It becomes favorable to all those who have the conceivable right of discernable blindness to emaciate themselves from the clutches of inconquerable surmountables.

AS TO EXEMPLIFY perfection in the blindess to finkness it becomes more evident that this breeds an imperfect originality known only to those finer inner workings of individual inconclusiveness. To examine more closely those traits that are so pontifically given to those possessed, one must exterminate all outside interference that would coagulate good thoughts coming from the average individual. These are called "Clodisms."

The making of a clod leads us on to great apprehensions that not only bring disaster of indecision but indecision in the light of dark mis-apprehensions. To show finkness in its perfect truth aligned with clodism, it is necessary to subhead clodism into two categories: (1) Hoojackapiffies, (2) Bojangies.

HOOJACKAPIFFIES are those who give service to the ism of the clod by work of trifling nature that only leads to destruction of worthwhile nothings, while Bojangies, led on into the enlightened path of the clod of the isms, which by work of all the great exaggerated nothings breeds winding, unadulterated paths of mis-apprehensions.

Plausible consideration of the foregoing is nothing in itself to hold the bridge from under the water. However, if these considerations are taken seriously enough one may plainly see that his blindness is not due to someone elses stupidity but rather due to his own unqualified indecisions. Again, it must be pointed out that a fink is not a two categorical Hoopackapiffie—Bojangies but in reality his great service to humanity lies in the fact that his worth has absolutely nothing to do with humanity. If it did, he would bring the world to the fink of disaster.

Hoover's Remarks Deserve Repeating

J. Edgar Hoover, respected head of the Federal Bureau of Investigation and a leader in the fight against radical anti-communist groups, made some wise and vital points in a recent article appearing in the American Bar Association Journal.

Mr. Hoover explained simply the best way to fight Communism—have faith in the Bill of Rights and support law and order. This is a far cry from those who would hold mass witch-burning rallies to label dissenters from their narrow views as Communists.

Mr. Hoover's remarks deserve repeating.

"A major aim of the communists, in their assaults on law and order, is to convince noncommunists that the entire fabric of our constitutional government is rapidly deteriorating. The communists, as part of their tactics, proclaim that laws directed against the party are also aimed at noncommunist groups," . . . the attack against communists is but the prelude to destroying the liberty and freedom of all, said Hoover.

"Denunciation of American legal institutions, moreover, helps inculcate a fear, hatred and contempt of our government among party members. These individuals are taught that the FBI, local and state police, and other agencies of bourgeois society are 'enemies'. 'FBI agents', one party document stated, 'should be viewed with . . . hatred and contempt . . . People should refuse to have anything to do with the FBI or in any way to cooperate with it. They should refuse to talk to them, to answer their questions to voluntarily admit them to their homes, or to enter their cars or go to their headquarters'.

"Ananalysis of Communist tactics in undermining the laws of our land should give us an insight into how to cope with this danger.

"The answer must be an increased reliance on law, a renewed faith in the democratic processes of government. Just because the Communists have no respect for law and order does not mean we should retaliate in kind.

"Cries of legal shortcuts, vigilante methods and less reliance on legal processes, though based on the most patriotic of motives are most shortsighted. These would undermine our cause.

"Our fight against communism must be a sane, rational understanding of the facts. Emotional outbursts, extravagant name-calling, gross exaggerations hinder our efforts.

"We must remember that many non-Communists may legitimately on their own oppose the same laws or take positions on issues of the day which are also held by the Communists. Their opinions—though temporarily coinciding with the Party line—do not make the Communists. No indeed.

"We must be very careful with our facts and not brand as a Communist any individual whose opinion may be different from our own.

"Freedom of dissent is a great heritage of America which we must treasure.

"'Let the ruling classes tremble at the prospect of a Communist revolution,' proclaimed the Communist Manifesto. We tremble not. The ideas of Marx and Engels, though tipped with deceit and chicanery, shall not dislodge the goodness of justice—that eternal lady who rules our destiny as a Nation under God."

Opposes Project Awake

TO THE EDITOR:

I think I can explain to Reen Perkins the lack of student participation in Project Awake. According to Reen Perkins the project has three purposes: (1) to explain the international communist threat, (2) to revive interest in "our basic American documents . . . etc. and (3) to suggest methods of fighting communism.

The first program in the series was a film entitled Operation Abolition. This film was carefully edited and circulated by [illegible] House Un-American Activities Committee not with the purpose of dealing directly with the question of our system versus that of the Soviet Union, nor even of contrasting ideologies, but rather to smear as "communists" and "communist dupes" those students who objected (passively until provoked) to closed hearings in San Francisco, and to the HUAC itself as a threat to civil liberties.

Numerous groups, including the American Civil Liberties Union, and also a prominent Catholic publication, as well as national figures like the Anglican Bishop of California, the Right Rev. James Pike, have denounced Operation Abolition as inaccurate and deliberately misleading. And THIS was the film chosen to open Project Awake.

The "discussion period" led by the "honorable" Richard Mitchell was made as brief as possible, due to the obvious embarrassment produced by his inability to offer rational answers to the questions from the audience. These questions, incidentally, were not of a heckling nature, nor were they set forth [illegible] by known campus liberals. Typical of Mitchell's contribution to the evening was his statement that a loyal American should abandon any idea once he discovered it was tainted by similarity with a communist plan even though he had felt it to support it prior to such knowledge.

Dean of Students Ralph Ogleby, who doesn't want any trouble with the Board of Control, heartily assented to this remark, which implies that a true patriot will compromise his own conscience. It is noteworthy that no faculty member teaching or researching in a social science field has had anything to do with Project Awake.

Nightmare in Red and similar "scare" films can only cause panic, and, to use a much overworn phrase, witch-hunting. And what qualifies Malcolm Ogleby, who, it should be remembered, is a small town journalist not an expert in political science, to speak on "Subversion by Acquiescence," I cannot imagine.

Project Awake has little student support because it is an insult even to the average FSU student. Dean Oglesby should have known this. I am accepting the invitation of Reen Perkins to let my opinion of Project Awake be known, in hopes that in the future, FSU will sponsor programs more in keeping with assumed intellectual maturity of American college students.

Delts Still First

DEAR DELTS:

It is somewhat cowardly of me to write this to you, but with all sincerity, I cannot bring myself to look at your faces or hear you ask: "Sal, what happened to us."

Believe this Delts . . . nothing happened to you. I cannot put into words or describe your performance with justice. Your performance was sterling. I could never say that you didn't give everything. People, you have no idea what a feeling it was for me to see your faces while you sang. It was like a million pins sticking me all at once. I was numb with happiness and gratitude.

I must have had thousands of phone calls and remarks from people of all sorts that heard you sing. Some said they could feel the goosebumps rise as you performed. Some said that they saw more heart in your group than they had ever experienced before. This is a first place feeling, Delts . . . and for me it was better than first place.

Everybody likes to be first place, Delts, in everything. I guess that's just the way people are made. Yet, most people can accept defeat with honor . . . they can do this because deep down they know their performance was not first place. I never will accept second place in Campus Sing 1962, and neither will you, Delts, your performance was first place . . . musically, showmanshipwise and in every conceivable aspect that the Credo of Campus Sing stated at the beginning and end of the performance.

Sunday, the true purpose of Campus Sing was defeated . . . not Delta Tau Delta.

SAL LANZA

Judges Want Burlesque

TO THE EDITOR:

After hearing the creed of Phi Mu Alpha and the purpose of campus sing read to the audience this past Sunday, it makes one wonder if the judges were as attentive to this part of the program. The final results of the contest seem to suggest they were not.

However, we hope future campus sing contests do not turn into burlesque shows, regardless of the appeal it apparently has to the judges and keep it in the same trend with the rest of the organization's selections.

FSU Faces Gators, Socks 'Dogs

RAY SWAIN
... No. 2 scorer

DAVE FEDOR
... has shootin' feud

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Spors Editor

After downing the Georgia Bulldogs last Saturday, the FSU Seminoles are prepared to meet their arch rivals from the University of Florida tomorrow night.

The game will start at 7:45 p.m. after a preliminary bout between the FSU and UofF freshmen. Students will be seated in north seats and the end zones, according to Neil LaBar of Sports Publicity. But students will be allowed to fill in empty seats in the reserve section once the game begins.

Besides being a tense event, the game will also continue the match between the top guns of the two schools. "Dave Fedor and Cliff Luyk have been having something of a personal duel," Coach Bud Kennedy said on a recent WFSU-TV show.

Luyk, the 6-8 center from Florida, is still pacing the Gator's 8-10 campaign. Luyk was recently held to 14 points by Alabama, but looped 26 in the loss to Auburn. The big senior is averaging about 21 points per game, which is close to the top spot in the Southeastern Conference.

Luyk, the Gator stalwart, has set all the Florida highs this season. Against Tennessee, the center tallied 40 points, 15 of them field goals. He dropped in 12 free throws against Navy. In the loss to Kentucky, he dragged down 26 rebounds.

Fedor (6-6) previously held the season high scoring record when he poured in 12 field goals against the Oklahoma City University quint. But in the second encounter between the two schools, Charlie Long captured the title by dropping in 34 points. Fedor leads the Seminole scoring attack with a 19 - point average. He got 21 rebounds against Rice.

Backing up Luyk on the Gator team is guard Lou Merchant, who is the number two scorer with an 11 point average. Merchant, who was recovering from injuries when the squad went on its road trip, copped All-SEC honors last season.

Fedor, who will not be relied upon the crore the bulk of his team's points as Luyk is, will be backed up by Ray Swain, Long, and Ricketts. The three are averaging 14.9, 13.1, and 8.2 points respectively.

The Gators, hoping to break the 500 mark, faced Mississippi State Saturday night and fell, 67-45, to the Maroons. The Mississippians previously downed top ranked Kentucky to knot the first place in the SEC.

Last night, the Gators risked their 8-10 record against the University of Mississippi but the results were not available at press-time.

TRIPLE TRUST

The Gators have a triple stake in tomorrow's game, the second between the two schools this season.

First of all, Florida State has not lost a single intercollegiate match to Florida in any sport so far this season -- unprecedented since the beginning of the all-sport rivalry between the universities four years ago.

In basketball, the Gators were downed 85-71.

Secondly, the Gators might attempt a variation of the shuffle against the Seminoles. They used the offense to upset Wake Forest, which was ranked third in the nation at the time.

And third, the Seminoles regained the No. 2 position they held earlier in the season for team field goal accuracy. The Tribe is shooting 49.5 per cent and trail Ohio State by a single percentage point.

GEORGIA FALLS

Fedor and Swain cracked 21 and 20 points respectively in the 71-62 victory over the Georgia Bulldogs last week to give FSU its fourth triumph over an SEC team.

The lead changed hands five times in the first period, but the Tribes padded the margin by 13 points with 5:02 left in the first session.

At the half, Florida State led by 10 points, 46-36.

Hitting 50 per cent of its field goal attempts, FSU moved ahead by 20 points at three times in the second half, but Georgia cut the margin to four points with 1:44 left in the contest. The score was 82-62 and Georgia didn't [illegible] the end of the game.

A charity toss by Swain who had put FSU ahead 71-62 early in the last half, quickly increased FSU's margin and then Fedor sank a field goal and a free throw for the final points.

[illegible] Georgia [illegible] Florida State as Ken Dees of the Tribe [illegible] Georgia [illegible] 34 points from the field was also spaced by Charles Adamek, 14, and Harold Morris with 12.

Seminoles Dunk UF

By VICTOR COMOLLI
Asst. Sports Editor

An inspired Florida State swimming team that "couldn't be beaten" upset the previously undefeated University of Florida Gators, 61-34, here Saturday night.

The Seminoles, taking eight out of 11 events, were sparked by the triple winning performance of Paul Thompson and Lee Bransford.

Leading the way to a series of catastrophic events, which spelled defeat for the Gators, was a little diver by the name of Don Montgomery.

With unusual poise for a sophomore and to the roaring approval of the partisan crowd, Montgomery took first place in the diving by beating Florida's All-American Steve McBride. [illegible] had been beaten this year.

DICK ACOSTA
... record breaker

Montgomery's teammate, Mark Owen, did likewise and came in second.

From that point on, the Tribe took complete command in the meet event the 220 butterfly. Thompson upset Florida's highly-regarded Jerry Livingston by setting a new pool and meet record at 2:07.6.

Bransford followed by winning the 100 freestyle in 50.2 to also set a new pool and meet record. FSU's Dick Acosta came next with a 2:12.4 in the 200 backstroke, which was good enough for a new pool, meet, and school mark.

Acosta was supported by Pete Davis, who grabbed second place.

After Thompson won the 440 freestyle in 4:44.7 and Bill Dant nailed a suprising second, the Tribesmen were on [illegible] home.

Tommy Metz, Mac Boles, Dale Smith, and Bransford combined to capture the 400 freestyle relay in 3:31.2.

PAUL THOMPSON
... triple winner

Another first place for the Seminoles came in the 220 freestyle, which Thompson took in 2:07.0 — a new meet record.

Bransford exploded with a 22:.7 performance in the 50 freestyle to set a new pool, meet, and school mark.

Managing to take only three first places, the Gators were led by Eddie Reese, who grabbed the 200 individual medley in 2:11.7, and Jeff Oromaner, who captured the 200 breatstroke in 2:32.8.

Un of Fla's 400 medley relay team won the event in 3:52.3, a new meet and pool record.

The victory, considered by Coach Bim Stults as "a dandy," continued FSU's swimming supremacy in the state.

The crowd of about 800, which filled every available nook around the pool was perhaps the largest ever to assemble there. It resembled a typical Kellum Hall room jam.

At least 300 people were turned away because of the limited space of the outdated indoor pool. Many faithful Seminoles stood outside, looking in the windows or standing near the doors to listen.

At 4 p. m. tomorrow, the Seminoles' perfect record will be challenged by the well regarded Texas A&M team. The meet could possibly be FSU's toughest contest this season, since the Texans perennially have a powerful squad.

The Baby Seminoles remained unbeaten by handing the Gator yearlings their first defeat of the season, 61-34, the same score as the varsity, in a preliminary encounter.

FSU standouts were Jim Mullally, who toured the 100 backstroke in 1:01.1, and Gene Dayton, who negotiated the 200 freestyle in 1:59.1 and the 400 freestyle in 5:20.0.

Mullally also came in second in the 200 individual medley and anchored the winning 200 medley team. Other members of the medley relay were Sherman Henderson, Ted Roth, and Charles Tandy.

Roth won the 100 butterfly in 58.9, and Tandy the 100 freestyle in 53.2.

Neal Allen and James Payne came up with a tremendous performance to take first and second respectively in the springboard diving event.

The Little Seminoles have a 6-0 record.

FIRST PROGRAM

In the first program of the series, Arthur Kopit, who wrote the off-Broadway hit Oh Dad, Poor Dad, Mamma's Hung You in the Closet and I'm Feeling So Sad, will describe his method of writing. He feels that the theme, characters, or situation should govern the outcome of the play. He will discuss his lack of interest in naturalism since implications inherent in its surface qualities determine what will happen.

Wednesday's program will include a scene from his work-in-progress Christmas with the Cannibals, directed by Frank Corsaro, who directed A Hatful of Rain on Broadway.

Kopit says that he is not certain of the play's theme at the moment. The scene was written as a study of character and the problem of identity comes as close to being the theme as anything can.

Corsaro will discuss the director's problems, including that of imagining the scenes to follow and what the audience would need to know from this scene.

New 'Playwright' T-V Show Starts Wednesday

"Playwright at Work," a new National Educational Television series, premiers tomorrow over WFSU-TV at 7:30 p.m.

The ten program series demonstrates the transition from script to stage and the working relationship between dramatist and director. The programs include discussions between ten featured playwrights and host Frank Perry. A scene from the playwright's current work is presented and is followed by a discussion of the scene by the playwright, the director of the scene and Perry.

COMPREHENSIVE LOOK

The playwright has the privilege of choosing the director and actors and actresses with whom he wishes to work. "Playwright at Work" will attempt to provide a comprehensive look at the future of the American Theater and a close analysis of the most brilliant young minds working within the framework of the theatrical medium.

The program will present to audiences such young playwrights as Edward Albee, an American [illegible] Jack Richardson who has been lauded by critics for his skillful combination of philosophy and [illegible].

HOST FRANK PERRY, PLAYWRIGHT EDWARD ALBEE, AND the director, Alan Schneider, discuss a scene from Albee's "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?," a future program on the new National Educational series, PLAYWRIGHT AT WORK.

Girl Watcher's Guide

Presented by Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes

Bare-Backed Beachbomb

LESSON 2 - What about standards?

Advanced students of girl watching never waste eyeball effort watching girls who are not beautiful. Standards must be kept high.

But how do we judge whether a girl is worth watching? Although many strict academicians will shudder at our aesthetics, we must insist that a girl is beautiful if she is beautiful to you. (That's the beauty of girl watching. Every girl is beautiful to someone!) For example, many observers have pointed out that the Bare-Backed Beachbomb (see above) has a weak chin.

Yet none of these keen-eyed experts would deny that she is indeed an attractive specimen. And, speaking of standards, don't forget to keep your smoking standards high. Smoke Pall Mall!

Buttrick Speaks To FSU Senate

Dr. George A. Buttrick, one of the special featured speakers for Religious Emphasis Week, was guest speaker at the Student Senate session, Wednesday.

The British traveler, scholar and preacher spoke to the Senate in response to their individual and pertinent questions. After hearing the introduction by Ken Assenderp of the professor's many honors and experiences, the senators were eager to know of practical applications to the interests and needs of Florida State University students.

Buttrick's first statement was, "Somebody's been reading Robert's Rules of Order!" He added that it was his wish that every place he has visited had the quality of leadership he has observed here.

BIBLICAL RESEARCH

He stressed the fact that advances in Biblical research and knowledge were progressing as rapidly as those in the field of science, medicine and technology. His duty or role in all of this, he said was merely to advise others by saying, "Look, boys, put that stuff on the low shelf where I (the public) can reach it." The speaker who in his travels has acquired such skills as curried rice with his fingers devoted most of his discussion to the world situation today.

WORLD COMMUNISM

"In a time when nationalism is rampant, our greatest concern is, of course, the threat of world communism, "which in most areas is running rings around us if you want me to be quite frank," said Dr. Buttrick.

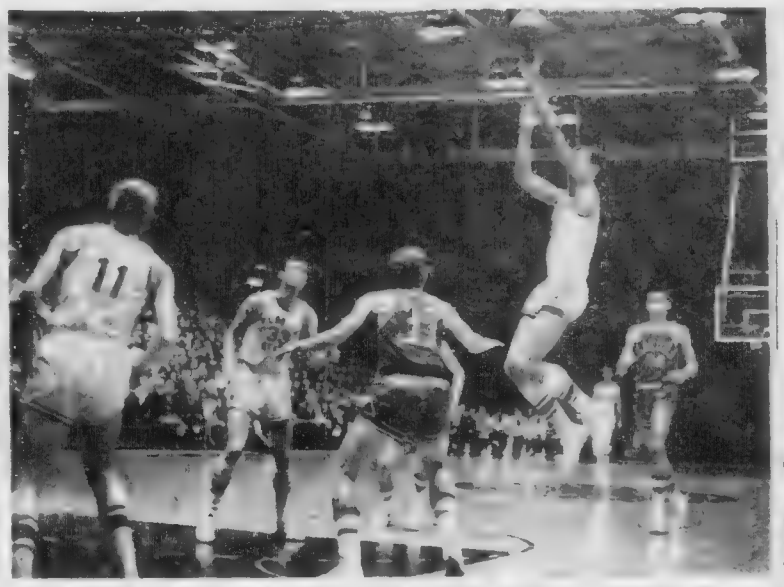
He added "It isn't possible for human beings to guess history. We don't know what is going to come over the horizon." Both the U.S and Russia are vying for friendship of peoples who are aware of that very fact, he said.

The speaker commented that right now everything hinges on which of us makes the most blunders in the near future; both nations are certainly susceptible to mistakes

Dr. Buttrick added that our future depends upon the question, "Are we going to throw our weight around, or are we going to act wisely?"

America is on her way to doing better in the area of foreign interest he commented, but it is true that "So long as appalling poverty exists, the . . . people will be tempted to fall for the Communist line." Their whole temptation is to give it a try for they have absolutely nothing to lose, he remarked.

PEACE CORPS



Part of America's move forward according to Dr Buttrick is the Peace Corps. Through this he said, our youth will be able to do a good job for us and for the people in foreign lands, and they will also be emissaries for change when they return here.

But, at the same time that the Peace Corps is doing good, the movie companies and business firms are giving the people a definite impression of American immorality he stated.

Student opinion would allow our government to take needed steps, but public opinion would not, Dr. Buttrick added. In spite of this, programs are being undertaken, and "saving face has become quite a business," he said.

Concluding the period of discussion, Dr. Buttrick stated that it is our duty right now to understand the people, otter them genuine friendship, and help them; later on we can worry about ironing out our individual differences.

At the end of the discussion two bills were presented by the Organizations and Finance Committee and passed. A third bill introduced by the Trimester Committee amending Student Body statutes, was passed unanimously.

DAVE FEDOR (43) PUTS IN A JUMPER FOR FLORIDA STATE IN WEDNESDAY'S 79-56 victory over the University of Florida Gators to give FSU its third win over the Gainesville squad. The 6-6 senior chalked to 21 points to tie for first place scoring honors with FSU's Charlie Long. Gainesville's Cliff Luyk scored 20 points before the record-breaking crowd of 5,000 fans. (See story page five.)

Do Classes Conflict With Night Events?'

The question of conflict between evening classes and special events was the main object of discussion at the meeting of the Florida State University Council of Deans Jan. 23.

The discussion arose as a result of the complaints received from students who were forced to choose between their scheduled classes and special evening events, such as planned meetings or activities.

The final agreement reached by the Council urged the University to re-emphasize the fact that scheduled classes are to take precedence over all special events.

It further agreed that the president should appoint a committee to adjust the calendar and if elimmate the conflict. Students would be represented on the committee.

The Council of Deans is composed of Dean Charles Rovetta of the School of Business; Dean Mode of the School of Education; Dean Ruth K. Folger, Graduate School; Dean Hortense Glenn, School of Home Economics; Dean Lewis Library School Dean Karl Hirsteiner, School of Music; Dean Vivian Duxbury, School of Nursing; Dean Coyle Moore, School of Social Welfare; Dean Paul Reynolds, School of Arts and Sciences; Dr. Orwin Rush Director of Libraries; and Dean Ralph Oglesby, Dean of Students.

Campus Movie

"The Court Martial of Billy Mitchell", starring Gary Cooper, Charles Bickford, Ralph Bellamy, Rod Steiger, and Elizabeth Montgomery, will be shown tonight and tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

This campus movie is the account of the career of General Billy Mitchell, who risked dishonor in a court martial to bring before the public the inadequacy of the national air force in the 1920's.

Menotti's Opera, 'Consul,' To Open Here March 13

A Pulitzer Prize winning opera, The Consul, by Gain-Carlo Menotti will be presented at Florida State University by the University Theatre and the Opera Guild, March 13 through 17.

The Consul which was first presented on Broadway March 1, 1950, won theh Pulitzer Prize for Music for 1949-50 and the New York Drama Critics' Circle Award for 1950.

The Consul is more of a musical drama than in the opera tradition. The story, which is of topical interest, concerns the problems of refugees in an unnamed Iron Curtain country who are trying to obtain visas to freedom. The failure of the "free country" to look upon these people as human souls instead of numbers is the tragedy of the play.

MAGIC TRICKS

Chandler Cowles, who is now a resident of Tallahassee, originally produced the work in New York as well as other works of Menotti and will act as a technical adviser for the FSU production. He will assist with the original magic tricks used in theh play. Cowles will also speak on Menotti at a later date.

Richard Fallon, associate director of theatre at FSU, is directing the play, with Richard Collins, director of the Opera Guild, directing the music.

Hedi Svendson, a student of Mrs. Elena Nikolaidi, will sing leading role of Magda, which will be her first major appearance at FSU. Joy Davidson, who sang the role of Orpheus, in Orpheus and Euradice earlier this year will sing the part of the mother.

Thomas S. Teague, who has been featured in many Opera Guild uroductions, will sing the part of John. Others featured in the cast are Virgil Austin, Nash Noble, Pat Exeans, Barbara Collins, Thomas Cavendish, Lorraine Nelson, Lonnie Kean Douglas Therrell and Norris Angel.

Women's Senate Asks New Typing Rules For Dorms

Typing regulations in dormitories will be liberalized if a bill passed unanimously by Women's Senate Tuesday is approved by the administration.

"This bill has been in the process for two years and we hope it will be approved," Sen. Nancy Sindon, author of the bill said.

Policemen Limited In Arrest According To Their Race

A new survey shows about one-third of the Negro policemen employed in the South are allowed to arrest any lawbreaker, white or Negro, but that two-thirds of them are limited in their arresting authority.

This was reported to the Southern Conference on Corrrections at Florida State University last night by Dr. Elliott M. Rudwick, associate professor of sociology at Southern Illinois University. Rudwick said he surveyed police departments and sheriff's offices in a dozen southern states hiring Negro policemen. His questionnaires went to departments listed earlier by the Southern Regional Council as having Negro policemen.

"Once employed, Southern Negro police in nearly 90 per cent of the cities patrol colored neighborhoods exclhsively. Ordinarily, these patrolmen come in contact with few white offenders, but when that does happen, what is the departmental policy regarding the usual arrest procedure? In about one - third of the cities studied, the Negro officer may arrest any lawbreaker, regardless of color: however, the most prevalent procedure is to restrict the arrest authority of Negro officers who on occasion deal with white offenders," he explained.

MANY PATTERNS

"In the South such limitations involve many possible patterns. At one extreme may be considered the city of Houston, which employs over 30 Negro officers who do not patrol colored neighborhoods exclusively. This Texas community prefers Negro police to have white lawmen 'assist' in the arrest of white offenders. A second restricting pattern involves a differential procedure based upon the felony - misdemeanor classification. In several cities, white misdemeanants are not arrested by Negro policemen, while white felons are, for example, Clearwater, Gainesville and Jacksonville, Fla. and Marion, S. C.). In Beaumont, Texas, the reverse practice is found.

"In well over one-half of the Southern cities, the Negro officer usually arrests no whites for any crime. He 'holds' them until the white lawmen come. Curiously, some Southern police officials permit their Negro policemen neither to arrest nor to 'hold' whites. In this policy, the Negro patrolman is obliged to keep the offender under surveillance while summoning the white police (for example, Sheriff's Office of Harris County and Travis County, Texas; Gulfport, Miss., and Panama City, Fla." he concluded.

New Graduate Language Rules Effective Now

New regulations regarding the Graduate Reading Knowledge certification in Foreign Languages go into effect this semester.

According to Dr. Victor R. B. Oelschlager, head of the Modern Languages Dept., the actions are a result of the Graduate Council and implementation by the Modern Languages Dept.

Languages included are French, German, Russian and Spanish 551-552 courses from 0-0 credits to 3-3 credits. Graduate students who desire instruction in class for Foreign Language Reading Knowledge are required to enroll for credit in the languages listed above.

"Audits" are not allowed and credits may be taken in excess of normal graduate student load limitations but may not be counted toward any graduate degree.

Examinations will be graded "Exempt," "Satisfactory," or "No Credit." The grade "Exempt" entitles the examinee to immediate reading knowledge certification. The grade, "satisfactory" earned successively in both 551 and 552 also entitles the examinee to certification.

Examinations will be given twice each term and candiates may register 10 days prior to exam time. The Graduate School Office will administer the application roster at the beginning or end of any given school term.

FSU Lauded By Arts Mag

A theatrical experiment pioneered at Florida State University has drawn the praise of Theatre Arts magazine, which tells about it in an article entitled "A Rare Experiment" in the February issue.

The article on the Eddie Dowling University Theatre foundation, a non-profit organization headed by producer - director Eddie Dowling, hails FSU productions of Mark Van Doren's The Last Days of Lincoln and Patrick Welch's Assignment in Judea as the first two steps toward bridging the gap of misunderstanding between the professional and academic theatre."

Following the lead set at FSU the University of South Florida in Tampa presented A Trumpet Calling, a new musical based on Hawthorne's Scarlet Letter.

Dr. Gentry Newly Named To Head Health Services

Dr. Russ Gentry, who came to Florida State University from New Orleans in September, will assume the position of Director of Student Health Services beginning March 1.

"The administration has assured the Health Service of its complete co-operation in helping us to establish not only one of the best, but what we hope will be the best Health Service in the South," Dr Gentry said, following the announcement of his appointment.

For the future Dr. Gentry plans to build a new hospital with more adequate facilities for out-patient and in-patient care. He also plans to enlarge the medical staff and provide better coverage; to establish a much-needed Mental Health Clinic with adequate personnel; help correct existing health problems, and educate students to know the best program for their personal health care.

Dr. Gentry received his B.A. and M.A. degrees in clinical psychology. He has also worked in a vocational counseling program with a Veteran's Administration Guidance Center and was the assistant dean of men and instructor of the Psychology Dept., at Baylor University. He was in charge of the Men's Hospital and did counseling and psychotherapy in the Mental Health Clinic.

He left Baylor to complete his medical training at Louisiana State University Medical School in New Orleans, Louisiana. He interned at Southern Baptist Hospital, New Orleans. He and his wife, Jean, who is also a doctor, now live in Tallahassee with their two children.

The lecture, which is free and open to the public, will be at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

Dr. Tillich has been at Harvard since 1955, when he retired as professor of philosophical theology at Union Theological Seminary, a post which he had held since 1933. The title of "University Professor" at Harvard is reserved for a small number of scholars who are free to work "on the frontiers of knowledge" without restriction as to field.

FILM SUNDAY

A series of films on the life and thought of Dr. Tillich are being shown at Florida State University prior to the lecture. One of the films, Man's Cosmic Status: Is Human Life Purposeful?, is being shown Sunday at 7 p. m. in Longmire Auditorium. The film will be followed by a panel and general discussion.

Tillich was born in Prussia in 1886. He studied at several

Paul Tillich

European universities and received his Ph.D. from the University of Breslau in 1911. Professor Tillich taught at several leading universities in Germany before coming to the United States at the age of 47. He was privatdozent of theology at the University of Berlin from 1919 - 24; professor of theology at the University of Marburg, 1924 - 25; full professor of philosophy of religion at Dresden and Leipzig, 1925 - 29; and full professor of philosophy at the University of Frankfurt-am-Main 1929 - 33.

However, as an outspoken critic of Nazism he was compelled to leave Germany after the rise of Hitler to power [illegible] America at the invitation of Union Theological Seminary. He became a U. S. citizen in 1940.

RETURNED TO TEACH

Since the end of World War II, Dr. Tillich has returned several summers to teach in Germany.

'Tall Timbers' Meet Here March 1&2

The place of fire in control of the habitat of animals and plant life will be the subject of a two-day conference, first of the sort to be held at Florida State University, March 1 and 2.

To be called the Tall Timbers Conference on Fire Ecology, the meeting, jointly sponsored by the FSU Research Council and Tall Timbers Research Station near Tallahassee, will bring together foresters, game management people, scientists and others from numerous agencies, universities and research groups through the country.

FIRST OF SERIES

E. V. Komarek of Tall Timbers Research Station, the conference chairman, said the conference is the first of a series he expects will be held annually which will explore some of the effects of controlled woods burning, a once controversial but presently widely used practice.

The Southeastern United States is one of several areas through the world where controlled burning is widely used — in this case to encourage longleaf pine and as a game managment technique to encourage quail, Komarek said.

Other such areas are parts of India, Australia and the Southwestern United States, and in every case the use of fire followed a period when European forestry methods (where fire was not used) were tried unsuccessfully first.

The Tall Timbers Research operated on a 2,800-acre plantation near Tallahassee, is conducting a series of experiments on the effect of fire on trees, small plants, wildlife and insects. Its president, H. L. Beadel, will be among the speakers and so was H. L. Stoddard, who pioneered in use of fire in quail management.

IN LECTURE HALL

Sessions will be held in the Longmire Lecture Hall beginning at 9 a.m. Thursday, with Dr. John K. Folger, dean of the Graduate School, welcoming those attending. Among speakers will be Dr. Walter S. Phillips, head of the Botany Dept. of the University of Arizona; Dr. William Robertson, biologist for Everglades National Park, Homestead; Komarek; and Dr. Roland Harper, botanist for the Alabama Geological Survey.

The conference will be divided into three interest sessions with the following co - chairmen: environmental fire ecology, Dr. Charles H. Fairbanks, associate professor of anthropology and archaeology at FSU; historical fire ecology, State Forester C. H. Coulter; applied fire ecology, Glenn Thompson of Atlanta, assistant regional forester for the U. S. Forest Service.

Plays By Sartre, Ionesco To Be Given Here In French March 6; No Charge

Huis - Clos by Jean - Paul Sartre and La Cantatrice Chauve, by Eugene Ionesco will be presented, in French, by the French Touring company, Le Treteau De Paris, at Florida State University in March.

The one - act productions are sponsored by the Modern Language Speech and Philosophy Departments and are to be presented in Opperman Music Hall, March, 6, at 8:15 p. m.

Sartre's Huis-Clos, (No Exit), deals with a group of characters who have recently died and are trying to figure out why they have been sent to Hell.

Ionesco's Le Cantatrice Chauve, The Bald Soprano, is according to the author "a completely unserious play in which some people have seen a satire on bourgeois society." Ionesco further says that "If it is a criticism of anything it must be of all societies, of language, of cliches, a parody of human behavior, and therefore a parody of the theatre too."

Le Treteau de Paris, which will perform the plays is a company of professional French actors who are touring to major universities of the United States.

Dr. Jean Charron, associate professor of modern languages said admission will be limited to help defray some expenses of the production. However, seats will be held for those contributing.

Paperbacks of the plays are available at Bill's Book Store.

Here's a scene from The Bald Soprano by Ionesco, one of two one-act plays which will be presented by the touring French company, Le Treteau de Paris, at Florida State University March 6. This and No Exit by Sartre will be presented in French under auspices of the Departments of Modern Languages, Philosophy and Speech. Left to right are Daniele Lebrun as Mrs. Martin; Francis Lax as Mr. Smith; Negro Verdie as Mr. Martin and Jacqueline Staup as Mrs. Smith. The French company will present the plays before one other Florida audience on the current tour, at the University of Miami on March 5.

Loosen Typing Rules

The wheels of progress usually turn very slowly, stopping, reversing and then eventually starting to move again. Tuesday, Women's Senate took action to get the wheel in motion again on an issue that has been stationary for about two years—typing regulations.

In the past, Women's Senate has repeatedly attempted to get the dormitory typing regulations liberalized, but their efforts have been to little or no avail. Women students have been allowed to type after closing hours only until midnight on week nights in a specially designated area. This means that many times women by necessity were forced to break the rule or else receive an automatic zero for failing to turn in a paper on time.

IF THE NEW regulations that Women's Senate passed are approved, women students will be allowed to type until 1:30 on week nights in the special areas and all night if they receive special permission from their residence counselors.

More lenient regulations have been needed for a long time, and as Sen. Ginny Boyd pointed out, "under the trimester system with a much tighter class system schedule more typing leniency will be essential."

WE DO NOT KNOW WHY the typing rules have not been liberalized long ago. Perhaps the powers-that-be are still laboring under the illusion that college women are not old enough to decide for themselves how late they need to stay up working. If so, this is unfortunate.

However, we do not believe so. Furthermore, we do not believe that the existence of this rule actually keeps anyone from putting a paper off to the last minute; students still do and they break the rule, hoping that they will not get caught. At other times papers are not even assigned until two days before they are due or in the press of other activities and studies it is impossible to do assignments in advance.

THEREFORE, WE strongly urge that the appropriate authorities recognize the need for liberalizing the typing rules and approve the revisions made by Women's Senate. If the authorities will recognize that the need exists, on no other basis than the persistent efforts of Women's Senate on this issue, they cannot help but remove the cog and allow the wheel of progress to turn.

Less Pub Pandemonium

Apparently there are factions on this campus who grew up in barns or worse. We speak of those young "gentlemen" encased in fraternal T-shirts and plaid bermudas who go out to paint the town.

IF THEY ARE OLD enough to come to college, are old enough to be drinking beer or whatever, then they are old enough to be expected to behave with something like a sense of responsibility toward the proprietors of the businesses they frequent.

Stacked beer cans reaching heights of two feet and more make a pretty bold clatter when they're tumbled to the floor from taple tops. And somebody should tell them that the more foul-mouthed four letter words can be cause enough for an interlude with the law. Especially when that language is shouted in volume that carries into the streets.

FURTHER, THIS PARTICULAR breed seems incapable of ordering even a packet of peanuts from any bartender, male or female, without a barrage of verbal filth.

We know the licensed establishments near the campus would appreciate something less than pandemonium. They're trying to keep orderly quarters. They aren't looking for trouble. Unfortunately some of their younger clientele appear to be. Our campus pubs should be reminded that young friends that frequent the near the few outlets available to them can be curtailed abruptly if complaints begin.

It's "normal" to be loud, unkempt and vulgar beyond expression. Go on thinking that, and watch the Psychology Dept. snicker.

A Lesson For Marx And Engels

Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels proclaimed in the Communist Manifesto that the scourge of capitalism would become so great that nations would dessolve after tumultous class struggles. The philosophers felt that "decandent" capitalistic nations, like America, would topple as their people fought among themselves.

A trip through the United States of America on Tuesday would have shot their falacious premis.

For on Tuesday the United States was one body, unified and indivisable, waiting with held breath and silent prayers to see their freckle-faced hero, John Glenn, probe the wonders of God's creation further than any American has done before.

The Space flight was a spectacular feat and its enhancement came in the sight of boss and employee, professor and student, officer and enlisted man, rich and poor, powerful and weak huddled before a television set on in front of a radio side by side rooting their hero into the stratosphere and home again.

This would have been beyond the comprehension of the Communist masterminds.

Yet here it was, millions and millions of Americans from Olympia, Wash., to Key West, Fla., from Augusta, Maine, to San Diego, Calif. sitting hunch backed before electronic devices crying go, go, go like a mass of exhuberant football fans cheering team on.

Communist propragandists who thrive on division and hate among the American people were dealt a severe blow.

A white-shirted executive in a big industrial plant hollered "How's he doing" to a cluster of blue-shirted union men "He's riding pretty," came the reply and executive and worker strained for words of Glenn's flight.

Conservatives and liberals paused from their running battle to urge Glenn on. Democrats and Republicans forgot their party affiliation, long enough to remember that they are Americans first.

Racial, religious, and ancestrial differences were swept away by the magnitude of the space achievement. Americans rose above the pettiness of creed, scorn, and selfishness as Glenn rose towards the celestrial bodies.

There is drama in the merger of a diversity of people into one. This preformance could tell Marx and Engles one thing.

Thus united, The United States of America will never fall to Communism.

Let's Get Serious

Defends 'Project Awake'

By GERRY DOBSON

In a letter to the FLAMBEAU last Tuesday Claire Arment Kemper purported to give the reason why there is such a lack of student participation in PROJECT AWAKE. She claimed with the assurance of an oracle that the depths of her vast knowledge, gave us not P. A. was not intellectually mature, and from her opinion of the film "Operation Abolition", but the actual facts, so called.

P. A. HAS, in my opinion, met with little success precisely because unthinking people in this country take at face value such unsubstantiated, even false liberal pronouncements as Miss Kemper's.

According to Mrs. Kemper, for example, the film "Operation Abolition" . . . smear (s) as 'communists' and 'communist dupes' those students who objected passively until provoked) to close hearings in San Francisco, and to the HUAC itself as a threat to civil liberties. Numerous groups . . . as well as the Anglican Bishop of California, the Right Rev. James Pike have denounced "Operation Abolition" as inaccurate and deliberately misleading. And this was the film chosen to open "Project Awake."

MRS. KEMPER, I challenge you to show or prove that a single word of what I am about to write concerning "Operation Abolition" is not true. First, the hearings at San Francisco were not closed hearings, but were open to to the public to the limit of the capacity of the courtroom in which they were held; a further increase in the crowd in the hearing room was forbidden by the San Francisco Fire Department. Secondly, in reference to your charge concerning "smear (s) as 'communists' and 'communist dupes' ", Mayor George Christopher of San Francisco, who attended the hearings, was quoted in the San Francisco Examiner of May 13, 1960. "The mayor said that in his opinion last Friday's riot was Communist directed and that for the most part, unknowning and misguided students were innocent pawns of trained Communist agitators skilled in crowd control tactics." Mayor Christopher was there. Were you? Or, for that matter, was Bishop Pike? Seven other ministers were there and they were quoted as follows. Inasmuch as the Communist conspiracy has launched a massive attempt to discredit this film, we ministers who were eye-witnesses to the horrifying developments locally wish to certify that this film is a true and accurate representation of the activities of the hearings. The soundtrack is not distorted . . . Nothing was eliminated which would show the rioters in any better light . . ."

The reason Project Awake was started is the very same reason it has met with apathetic response on this campus. Liberal propagandists, those who reserve to themselves the title "intellectual" and the "who gives a damn attitude" on the part of the average American have lulled us into the false notion that there is no internal danger to this country from the left, it is all from the right. Go ahead, students—let people like Mrs. Kemper appeal to your intellectual vanity by saying that we need programs of "intellectual maturity." Don't bother to find out if there really is such a thing as a Communist menace. For after all, Mrs. Kemper may be right. But may God help us all if she is not.

Highwaymen Delight FSU

By CHRIS CLARK

Last Friday night Westcott Auditorium was the scene of two performances by a group of five young men from Connecticutt's Wesleyan University. For twenty songs and about two hours, the Highwaymen sang on and joked with an audience that can best be described as most receptive.

THE QUALITY OF the singing and the evening in general ranged from witty and well done to near crude. A French-Canadian number ended with the boys flying over into a short rendition of Dixie. This was of course an instant hit and a nice twist (no pun intended). A South American [illegible] arguing violently in Spanish.

One song was not worthy of the [illegible] professional polish this group promises. It might have been better had Black-Eyed Susie, the song in question (in case you missed the show) remained in the basement of the fraternity house in which the Highwaymen got their start. It [illegible] the [illegible] audiences of the states [illegible] who lived in the hall." Anyone who has not heard this gem can do so by standing inside or outside any fraternity house on campus on a weekend night around twelve o'clock when things begin to sing. There is nothing [illegible] with a requiring [illegible] done in good taste. Black-Eyed Susie [illegible]. We can hope that the Highwaymen gain needed [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] Black-Eyed Susie? Audience participation was another [illegible] that the group could [illegible] on. They made several unsuccessful attempts at involving the students with them, but I [illegible] at the fact that leading many [illegible] frequently more dirtiest than expected.

As a matter of fact [illegible] the Highwaymen have more than [illegible] talent. [illegible] during a recording session they [illegible] musical. Despite this last performance however, the thirteenth song was Gypsy Rover, one of the best [illegible] of the evening. It featured one of the five singing the words while the other four sang softly in the background. Rendition such as this one left no doubt as to the talent the highwaymen possess. Although they cannot be regarded as relaxed professionals as yet there is every indication that in the future they will improve and give better executions if their material.

Salesmen

After The Fat Man

By JIM SMITH

A little fat man with a shiny head stepped onto a hotel balcony in New York City. As bulbs popped and cameras rolled, the crowd pressed close to look at him.

"WHERE ARE HIS FANGS, and the blood on his hands?" they asked.

"He can't be a murderer," they said, "he looks too neat and clean, like a kind uncle."

THE LITTLE FAT MAN was trying to sell himself to America and America was trying to sell itself to the little fat man. Cleverly he barnstormed the country like a seasoned politician with an excellent knowledge of American ideals. His plump wife came with him and while he shook his scolding finger at luncheons and civic meetings, she visited hospitals and clinics. "How nice, the people said, "just like we do when we visit other countries."

After the little fat man and his affectionate companion of togetherness left for home, the American Government felt it had failed to "sell" him. "If we are to avoid world catastrophe," it said, "we must learn to live in harmony. If we could know him better, he would like us."

IN THE NAME OF CULTURE, boatloads of artists, writers and musicians went to sell the little fat man. Boatloads of talent returned to help sell the little fat man. Back and forth they came and went. The people said, "There is no reason why we can't work and live side by side. He is so much like us."

Someone shouted, "Work and live side by side for what?" "Why for peace and understanding between peoples," they yelled. "What kind of peace?" he asked. "OOh, why just . . . peace . . .," they answered, "don't you know?"

Yes," he answered, "I know, do you?"

"WHY, OF COURSE," they said, "Peace is for our children and ourselves to work and live in freedom."

Tell me," he said, "tell me more about freedon."

"Well," they said, "what is there to tell, everyone knows all about it." "Yea," said another voice. "Everyone knows all about it. What are you a dirty communist." "Yea," they all voted. "He's a dirty Communist."

THE LITTLE FAT MAN watched America splinter into small groups and factions, each [illegible] the country in [illegible] way. When fatso started bellowing for his rights after some one had flown over his house and taken pictures of his back yard, Americans became frightened. Fatty screamed he couldn't live [illegible] with a world he couldn't trust and a world that didn't trust him. And, after pounding many tables with his shoe, he stomped out of peace conferences, tripping over his lower lip.

The lid [illegible] on the words "Peace Everlasting [illegible] and Americans elected a new President to start winning friends again. The new President started the boats coming and going once more and had decided on new talks with Uncle Chubby.

"THESE TALKS," said the new President, "will be seen throughout the nation. We must convince him that peace and understanding between peoples can only be obtained by a just and lasting friendship between nations."

"NO! STOP!" someone yelled, "you are trying to change the face of [illegible] into [illegible] of the little fat man." "Don't be silly," they said. "We just want him to trust us." The new President added, "we have been considering sending 'em [illegible] and to encourage the spirit of living to all underprivileged nations of the world."

Alabama String Quartet

By CHARLES THREATTE

This writer would like to express thanks on behalf of those who attended the Alabama String Quartet recital of Feb. 17 to Pi Kappa Lambda which was responsible for bringing the String Quartet to FSU.

THE ENSEMBLE CONSISTED of Emil Raab, violin; Frank Spinosa, violin; Henry Barrett, viola; and Margaret Christy, cello. Each musician was excellent as a member of the ensemble and as a soloist. There were only minor intonation and ensemble problems and these did not distract from the very musicianly way in which they played.

The size of the audience was disappointingly small, possibly because of the lack of interest in chamber music. Music audiences seem to be too accustomed to the large masses of [illegible] orchestras and bands to appreciate the subtleties of [illegible] ensembles. A string quartet for example, can provide an excellent view into the workings of music in a way not achieved by a larger ensemble.

IT IS SAD, TOO, to think the vast amount of great music that is not being heard. There are many excellent recordings available, but these [illegible] substitute for live performances.

In the vicinity there are numerous chamber groups that would gladly come to FSU if enough interest is shown. We are doing injustice to ourselves by neglecting fine things so easily available.

The Many-Handed Advertising Designer

By LESLIE POWELL

The Florida State University Art Department cordially invites you to attend the preview of The Many-Handed Advertising Designer in the University Gallery Monday evening, February 26, from 7:30 until 9 o'clock."

SO READS THE invitation to attend what promises to be one of the most interesting gallery attractions yet sponsored by the FSU Dept. of Art.

The title derives from the many art techniques demanded of those who design and paint for industry. The show should bring into strong focus a unique feature of contemporary life in America, or for that matter, most parts of the world.

AMONG THE EXHIBITS: magazine cover paintings, story illustrations for McCall's and Esquire, 24 sheet billboards, newspaper cartoons, advertising layouts and TV story boards. Also included in the exhibit is a one man showing of paintings of Vincente Rojo, an outstanding contemporary Mexican painter.

Try to see the Many-Handed Advertising Designer. Look for the specially designed emblem executed by Mr. Rudy Jegart. It appears at the bottom of this column.

THIS EXHIBIT IS FREE; certainly it will be worth your while if only because you may come away with a better idea of the work that goes into the barrage of advertising design that meets your eye everywhere. Let's face it. Half of living is gawking, so come on over to the gallery Monday eve and gawk to your heart's content.

Football Is Big Business

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

It is most unfortunate that FSU has been prompted by the economics of bigtime athletics to schedule only four home football games for the coming season. Although there are probably several Greek shipwrecks who can jump into their Impalas and cars for a wild weekend with their brothers in Miami or Lexington, the net effect of the schedule is that fewer FSU students will be able to attend the games of the team they support.

FURTHERMORE, NOT only is the number of home games smaller, but the quality of the home game opponents leaves something to be desired as well. Away FSU plays Kentucky, Georgia, Georgia Tech, Auburn, Miami, and Florida, which will apparently be a "away" game until the year 2000. Here in Tallahassee the opponents are The Citadel, Furman, VPI and Houston. It would, of course, be reduciously naive to expect a reduction in our soaring admission fees in compensation for the reduced football schedule. The result therefore is that students are as usual, receiving less and less for more and more money.

The fact that no students have protested this injustice is in itself interesting. Perhaps it is the result of the general apathy of a student body which would apparently be unmoved by the outbreak of nuclear war. On the other hand, it is possible that it is a sign of a general—lack of interest in football, or of a general realization that a better brand of college football is played by the [illegible] coached Rattlers of Jake Gaither. If that is true, then the university and the Student Government's Budget Committee, should perhaps re-examine the amount of money and emphasis given to the sport.

MORE THAN LIKELY, however, students have merely been unaware of what was being done to them, being as uniformed about sports as they are about everything else. In September they will be surprised, even indignant, but that will be too late. Now is the time not only for attention to next fall's football schedule, but for consideration of exactly where FSU is going in the field of athletics.

It appeared that such a discussion might emerge last week on a television panel show called "Focus." Unfortunately it did not. The panel was so mamby-pamby in its treatment of the question "Is college football big business?" that it would have been embarrassing, if there were any reason to suspect that the program actually had an audience.

IN REALITY, however, the topic was silly. Of course college football is big business, and FSU's brand is no exception. Although it is true that there are places where it is bigger, that does not change the fact that it looms large here, and that it is likely to become even larger unless someone succeeds in controlling it. This fall's schedule is undoubtedly only the first of a series of moves which will eventually make it apparent even to the most naive that bigtime football is not played for the benefit of either the players, the students, or the universities.

But the empire builders who do benefit from the sport can display what is for them unusual eloquence when defending their actions. At FSU the current justication for all sorts of little outrages is the desire to become a member of the Southeastern Conference. The SEC gleams like some great towering castle in the distance, inhabited by such noble "educational" institutions as Alabama, Mississippi and Mississippi State. What those in charge of FSU's atheletic destiny should know is the fact that the castle has seen its better days. Cracks are appearing in the walls; it is beginning to crumble. By the time FSU gets there, the once-mighty SEC is likely to be nothing but a pile or rubble.

TWO THINGS WILL eventually cause the SEC to fold. Racism in Mississippi, Alabama and Louisana will not permit the myth of white supremacy to be tested on the athletic field, although better schools in the conference have already acknowledged the prospects of desegregating athletics. Secondly, institutions such as Vanderbilt, Georgia Tech and Tulane, who value their academic reputations, are becoming more and more appalled by the free wheeling overemphasis on football in the Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana schools. FSU should be too. Unfortunately the policy of FSU seems to be pursuit of bigtime football at all costs.

He then explained how faith exists in one of its strongest forms in the scientific world. According to Dr. Buttrick, when a scientist states that matter is precious or that mind and the outer cosmos possess a unity, he is basing his claims on assumptions of faith. He then firmly asserted that "science is rooted in faith and proceeds in investigation."

should not be deceived by the new "flocking" to churches. However he stated that he is not worried about the "present tumultuous tide" because students are now beginning to doubt their doubts. Perhaps soon he added, they will begin to believe their beliefs."

Monday night, Dr. Buttrick spoke on "The Nature of Truth." Discussing what he called "The cult of facts," Dr. Buttrick stated that all modern universities put too much stress on truth merely as an academic and rote matter.

According to the speaker, the modern university actually may be frustrating man's "quest for truth." To Dr. Buttrick, this quest is a matter of "doing" and experiencing, historically channeled through events and not necessarily through people's thoughts.

On this quest, man may find that one truth nullifies another and unveils a mystery. Dr. Buttrick declared. Man's longing for this unveiling of mysteries must never be frustrated by collections of facts which in themselves may be obstacles of truth, he added.

A renowned Biblical authority, Dr. Buttrick said that examples of the 'doing' of truth and the answers to man's questions of 'Who am I?' and 'What am I' may be revealed through reading the Bible. He pointed out that behind the literal translation of the Bible, and sometimes behind the facts themselves, is the truth to which man must commit himself.

This commitment is not always evident, he said, as in the case of an atheist. However, as Dr Buttrick explained, ". . . even an atheist cannot define himself without saying 'God'."

Wednesday night, Dr. Buttrick discussed the relationship between "Prayer and the Modern Mind." He dealt primarily with faith, and communication of that faith, as they affect man in the modern world.

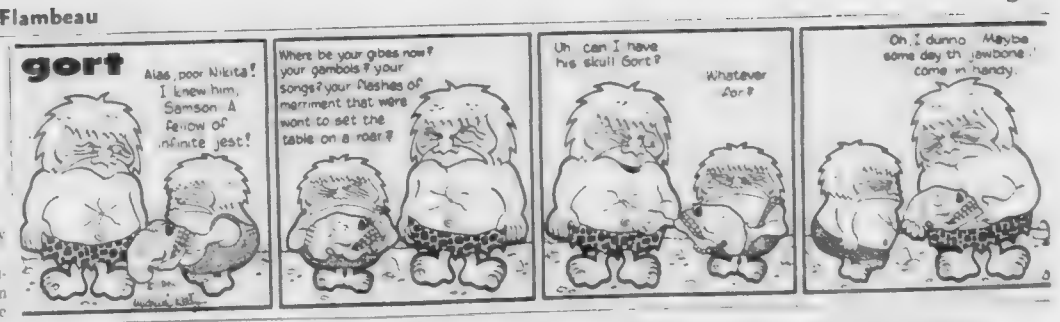
Describing prayer as "a conversation between 'Thou, and 'thou,' Dr. Buttrick declared that God's intimate relationship to man is evident from the fact that each individual has a unique life, entirely different from that of any other person.

"There is no mass production in God's universe, he asserted. "There is only individual craftsmanship."

Dr. Buttrick said that man prays not only to a personal God but to a concerned God. He pointed out that any of a man s desires that go beyond time and space are in themselves prayers.

Commenting on man's present preoccupation with space exploration and conquest, the speaker declared. "There is no solution for planetary strife in interplanetary strife, and quoted a modern writer: "Prayer is the only form of revolt that remains upright."

SIN AND CODES



Sin can't be measured according to a moral or ethical code, Dr. Buttrick declared, because such a code can be broken from above or below, i.e., in order to "do good" or to "do evil"

Sin, the speaker asserted, is the pretense of man that he is not mortal, not transient, not sinful.

Dr. Buttrick said that many prayers are not answered "yes," but that "no" is a very precious answer, since it shows man that there is another will in the universe besides his own.

"God isn't something to be scientifically demonstrated or logically proved but rather God is something man must know personally," he said. "What makes us persons is not our bodies or minds but the confrontation of the mystery 'Thou,'" — the personal God.

"Humanly speaking, the world is never better unless somebody in it is better," he declared. "And no human being can be better except he shall grow on the resources of all goodness."

Alumni Association Starts Fund Drive For $25,000 To Be Used For Student Scholarships And Loans

The alumni fund drive for $25,000 for scholarships and loans was kicked - off Saturday by a contribution of $3,098.63 from Mrs. Frank D. Moor.

A member of the 1918 class at Florida State College for Women, Mrs. Moor, long one of FSU's most active alumni, presented the check to Philip Fleming, state president of the Alumni Association. Fleming turned the check over to Dr. Gordon W Blackwell, FSU president and president of the FSU Foundation.

Loans from the funds raised during the Greater FSU Fund Drive for 1962 may become available this fall.

TWICE PRESIDENT

Mrs. Moor, a Tallahassee woman, twice has been president of the Alumni Association and she is permanent chairman for Longmire Bldg. She also is president of the Friends of the FSU Library. The Beth Walton Moor Lectureship established in 1960 by her husband, regularly brings an outstanding speaker to the campus in the fall. Her previous gifts to the university have been numerous.

She is credited more than any individual with being instrumental in the building and also the furnishing of Longmire Bldg. which is headquarters for alumni, and she has headed numerous drives, both for the university and the community.

"I confidently expect that our alumni response will push us over this goal in 1962, because our 1962 annual receipts will go to student loan and scholarships," Fleming said.

Some of the funds this year will be used to match Federal dollars under the National Defense Education Act. For each of these dollars we contribute, the Federal Government will lend $9. Thus the alumni giver can have the satisfaction of knowing that his dollar is being stretched nine times in the interest of critically needed scholarship monies," he added.

'Development—For What' Is REW Talk By Missionary

By MILA ARNOLD
Flambeau Staff Writer

Dr. Douglas B. Steere, one of the special speakers for Religious Emphasis Week, spoke Tuesday night on the subject "Development — For What?"

Dr Steere has worked extensively with missions in many different countries, but took much of his topic material from his knowledge of the present situation in the now not-so-dark Africa.

The essence of his speech was on the U. S. government's development programs and our responsibilities. His own opinion, he said, was that Americans knew little about either.

ON BRINK

"We are on the brink of learning to communicate for the first time," he said. However, this cannot be accomplished until people's basic needs are met. "True peace isn't only the absence of war, but vital interaction," he said.

There ought to come a great richness as the result of it (this development), but it isn't simple, he stressed.

In analogy Dr. Steere cited the many instances of persons being cured by miracle drugs, but dying from side-effects. People like to have the help you want to give them, but they don't want all the little stipulations that go with it, he explained.

SIDE EFFECTS

The side effects of our policy of development as mentioned by Dr. Steere were as follows:

1. According to our system there has to be developed within the people an endless greed. Some people have only simple wants, and once these have been supplied, they are not interested in working for anything else. If we develop more needs, we develop more greed. If we develop more greed, we are faced with additional problems.
2. These people in their awareness of our system and of Communism feel that in some ways Americans are hypocrites. We tell them of love for Christ and fellow men and then slaughter each other. They are afraid to accept our type of government and economy if they will be involved in war, whether cold or violent.
3. It may well be impossible for us to pass on to these countries the technological advances they need without also passing on the envolved moral diseases and agonies. Provisions haven't been made to keep things like this in line. Are we to send electric chairs and jails along with food and factories? Is this the gift of our culture?
4. Can we have American-planned development without making these people give up their close affinity and collectivism and turning to a new individualism they may not be able to handle?
5. Are we going to force upon these people a secularization and materialistic attitude which will eat away their native and devoutly - observed religions? In short, can we give them anything good and at the same time prevent serious side-effects?

SOLUTION

Dr. Steere offered no solution in concrete terms. He stated that this development must be transmitted, but the dignity and collectivism of the people must be retained.

He stated that a whole army of International Civil Service workers is needed. He added that he thinks the Peace Corps may very well be "the call of our times."

"DEVELOPMENT — For Wath" — why only to benefit everyone from an exciting international interchange,he exclaimed. "This is the great possibility for our generations to share with the rest of the world," he concluded.

MRS. VERNON, SURROUNDED BY PICTURES OF SOME OF THE GUEST ARTISTS WHO have visited FSU, works on the schedule for next semester. Mrs. Vernon is Director of Student Activities and is in charge of the artist and lecture series. FLAMBEAU photo by Del Kittendorf.

FSU Guest Artists Line Director's Office Walls

Coming from room 15 Longmire, is the strong aroma of coffee and the clatter of constant activity.

The room is the office of Katheryn Vernon, director of student activities, and the coffeepot boiling in the corner is as much a part of scenery as the pictures of guest artists lining the walls.

Mrs. Vernon has been with Florida State University since 1951. At that time, she was working with the Artist Series and her office was located in the Music Bldg.

ACQUIRED RESPONSIBILITY

Since then, she has moved to Longmire and acquired two more responsibilities, the Lecture and the Student Artist Series. These additions she rumored make the job much more stimulating. Most directly, her work consists of reserving all non - academic space for the various functions. Presently, Mrs. Vernon is working on the schedule of reservations for next semester's activities.

Mrs. Vernon considers the meeting of the entertainers, visitors and town people of particular interest. She works through the booking agents of the guest artists and is able to meet them and the performers they represent.

The National Ballet of Canada was especially mentioned by Mrs. Vernon as well as Louis Armstrong, Dave Garner, Roberta Peters and Bennett Cerf.

PRACTICES YOGI

When Dave Garner appeared she recalled he "outdid himself." After his performance, he went out with several students for coffee and stayed for hours, carrying on as he had on stage. Mrs. Vernon remarked with a smile that he had said the reason for his energy was that he practices yogi and that he had tried to persuade her to try it.

Another instance Mrs. Vernon recalled was the time the Kingston Trio was scheduled to perform. At that time they were relatively unknown and she was not sure they would be well received by the students.

According to Mrs. Vernon her job is a "catch - all;" anything that doesn't fit into another field comes to her. She often receives questions from people asking her what to wear to a certain occasion and her office is constantly busy with phone calls and with students who drop in to "chat," ask a favor or explain a problem.

VIEWED AS WHOLE

Mrs. Vernon stated that the best way to view the university was as a whole and not as separate departments. She gains this perspective for herself from her knowledge of what is happening on campus.

She also mentioned that the college student of today is more sophisticated and mature then the one of several years ago. In her work, she comes in contact with most college campus and remarked that she has much praise and regard for them.

THE MANY LOVES OF THORWALD DOCKSTADER

When Thorwald Dockstader, sophomore, epicure, and [illegible] man, first took up smoking, he did not simply choose [illegible] brand of cigarettes that came to hand. He did what any sophomore, epicure, and sportsman would do: he sampled several brands until he found the very best. And, indeed, the [illegible] smoke—an endless source of comfort and satisfaction—a smoke that never palled, never failed to please, a smoke that [illegible] could not wither nor custom stale—a filter cigarette with an unfiltered taste: Marlboro, of course.

Similarly, when Thorwald took up girls, he did not simply select the first one who came along. He sampled. He dated an English literature major named Elizabeth Barrett Schwartz, a wisp of a girl with large luminous eyes and a voice that shimmered with a pale, unearthly beauty. Trippingly, trippingly, she walked with Thorwald upon the beach, at with him behind a windward dune and listened to a conch shell and sighed sweetly and took out a little gold pencil and a little morocco notebook and wrote a little poem:

I will lie upon the shore,
I will be a dreamer,
I will feel the sea once more,
Pounding on my femur.

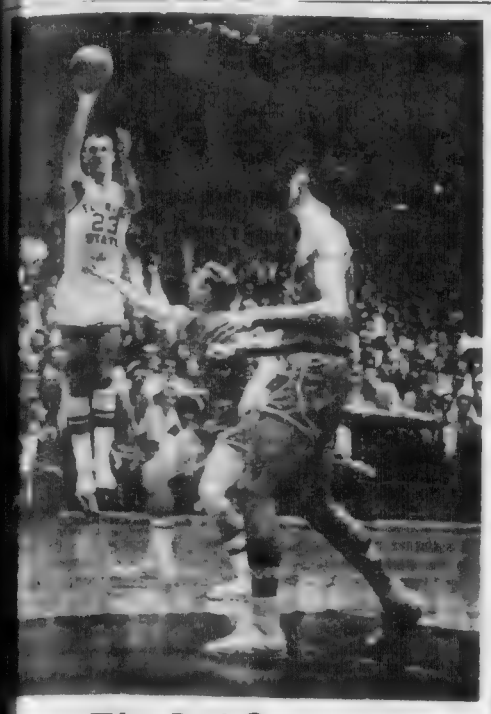
Thorwald's second date was with a physical education major

He did not simply select the first one who came along...

named Peaches Glendower, a broth of a girl with a ready smile and a size 18 neck. She took Thorwald down to the cinder track where they did 100 laps to open the pores. Then they played four games of squash, six sets of tennis, 36 holes of golf, nine innings of one o'cat, six chukkers of lacrosse, and a mile and a quarter of leapfrog. Then they went ten rounds with eight ounce gloves and had heaping bowls of whey and exchanged a firm handshake and went home to their respective whirlpool baths.

Thorwald's final date was with a golden-haired, creamy-browed, green-eyed, red-lipped, full-calved girl named Totsi Sigafoos. Totsi was not majoring in anything. As she often said, "Gee whillikers, what's college for anyhow—to fill your head full of icky old facts, or to discover the shining essence that is YOU?"

Totsi started the evening with Thorwald at a luxurious restaurant where she consumed her own weight in Cornish rock hen. From there they went to a deluxe movie palace where Totsi had popcorn with butter. Then she had a bag of chocolate covered raisins—also with butter. Then they went to a costly ballroom and did the Twist till dawn, tipping the band every eight bars. Then they went to a Chinese restaurant where Totsi, unable to translate the menu, solved her problem by ordering one of everything. Then Thorwald took her to the women's dorm, boosted her in the window, and went downtown to wait for the employment office to open.



While waiting, Thorwald thought over all of his girls and came to a sensible decision. "I think," he said to himself, "that I will stick with Marlboros. I am not rich enough for girls."

Marlboro, however, is rich enough for anybody. It takes mighty good makin's to give you unfiltered taste in a filter cigarette. That's the flavor you get in the famous Marlboro recipe from Richmond, Virginia. You get a lot to like.

Gator 5 Suffers Biggest Spanking

The high soaring—high scoring Dave Fedor and Charlie (The Gun) Long, looped 21 points each Wednesday night to lead Florida State in its second victory over the University of Florida Gators this season.

The Gators fell, 79-56, before a record crowd of 5,000 fans in the worst defeat the Norman Sloan-led Gators have suffered in his two-year tenure at U. of F.

FSU's Fedor also pulled down 12 rebounds for the night's best board work. He meshed the nets for 5-of-7 free throws and 8-of-16 field goals.

Long, who scored 34 points against Oklahoma City University for a season high, had a 75 per cent accuracy at the foul line, dropping in 3-of-4, and a 56.3 percent effort from the field as he hit for 9-of-16.

Three other Seminoles scored in double figures.

Ray Swain, who owns the No. 2 scoring average per game, dropped in 5-of-6 field goals and 1-of-3 free throws. He also pulled down six reboounds.

Jack Davis, who plays his best game against Florida, hit for 12 points. He also bagged five out of six field goal attempts, in addition to hitting 2-of-4 free throws.

Rufus Ashworth tallied four of nine field goals and 2-of-2 field goal attempts.

The Gators, led by 6-8 senior Cliff Luyk, moved ahead in the opening minutes of play, but lost their lead when FSU erased their 9-8 tally with a jumper by Ashworth. By the end of the half, FSU was ahead, 38-26.

In the second session, the Seminoles burned the nets and built up a 30-point amrgin when Long hit a layup for a 66-36 score FSU had started gunning the ball with a 38-29 tally and did not permit the Gators to score until they had reached a 53-26 score.

The Gators were led by Luyk, who scored 20 points for third place scoring honors, and Carlos Morrison, who looped 19 markers.

Luyk hit for seven out of 11 field goals and six of nine free throw attempts. In addition, he pulled down six rebounds.

Guard Lou Merchant, who had a 17.6 average per game last seadon, was held to four points as he hit two out of three field goal tries.

Saturday night, the Seminoles will pit their 12-8 record against the University of Miami Hurricanes in a return bout in Miami. Previously, the 'Canes fell in a squeaker in Tallahassee.

The next home game will be held March 2 against the University of Georgia.

Florida Fans Are Like Seminoles'

It was sweet revenge watching the University of Florida meet its defeat at the hands of Florida State Wednesday night, not that FSU had been beaten earlier in the year . . .

Well, at least, not on the court, because the Seminoles' record was far more respectable than the Gators. But the fact remains that all season Florida State has been taking a back seat to the Gators in one area

According to a local sports writer, the University of Florida leads the nation in two categories, while the Seminoles have only been able to cop the national field goal percentage title off and on.

"Florida has to be ranked No. 1 nationally in . . . publicity per game won and wait-until-next-year talk." So says, Bill McGrotha, president of the Florida Sports Writers Association and Tallahassee Democrat sports editor.

Down there in Gator Land in the first contest this year, the fabulous Florida fans greeted their upstate brothers in much the same fashion Grunting after the freshman squad of FSU brapped their Baby Gators, the fans shouted, "Yea, Semi-holes!"

A handful of FSU fans retorted, "FSU one time, et cetera etc."

Those Indians who had been shocked by the cheers when they went gigging had tears of reminiscense in their eyes Wednesday. When Cliff Luyk was introduced at Florida, the fans filled the gymnasium with chants of "Luyk, Luyk, Luyk." (However, they used a different attitude than the FSU fans Wednesday.)

When a Tribesman at G-ville first heard the "Luky" cheer, he mumbled to a friend, "Wha' zat?"

His friend, equally unaware, replied, "I dunno."

"Mebbe perhaps, they don't like like him . . . Mebbe they're booing him like they do Libertore at the football games," he said.

"Naw," an enlightened one said, "look at the program . . . that's his name."

Florida fans showed the same amiable feelings toward FSU as the Seminoles did toward U of F this week.

"Stomp those girls," various groups shouted. Meanwhile, FSU dropped another through the basket.

The gymnasium in Gainesville rocked with school spirit, just as FSU did in its cram—pack sardine can With vicious deafening cries, they bombarded the Florida State few with "Gator Bait, Gator Bait, Gator Bait."

Then, like a needle being lifted from a phonograph record, the sound would die as FSU swiped the ball, charged down the court, and served the two-point honors. At times Wednesday night, FSU fans also lifted the phonograph needle, but mostly they just turned down the volume when the Gators scored.

At U of F, the refs heard references to their parentage and Jack Davis, in particular, was booed as he limped away from a fall. In Gator Land, Davis was once again booed by the Gators when he replaced a shoe during the game.

"Whazza matter?" a Gator shouted, "you girls play basketball barefooted?"

"Davis can play better barefooted than your players can with shoes," a brave Brave told the Gator.

Another Gator fan leaned forward with an earnest expression on his serious face and spoke to the outspoken Seminole in the crowd of 7,000.

"Listen, son," the Gator said, "your're in the wrong crowd to be saying that . . . if I was you I'd keep my mouth shut."

He did.

Both schools had a special interest in Wednesday's game and it wasn't necessarily one of revenge.

For instance, it was the last time Seminoles would get to see the "personal feud" (as Coach Bud Kennedy says) between seniors Dave Fedor and Cliff Luyk. Many Seminoles noticed a similar feud going on between seniors Lou Merchant and Jack Davis.

Both FSU players won their duel: Fedor outscored and rebounded his counterpart, while Davis hit double figures to Merchant's mere four points.

When the shooting contest cleared, FSU stood undefeated in any sport which they have played against Florida this year.

UF Frosh Fall To Li'l Indians

The Florida State freshman basketball team, after a slow start bounced back for a hot second half and handed the University of Florida Baby Gators their third defeat of the season, 68-53. This second FSU victory over U of F was played in Tully Gym before the varsity game last Wednesday.

The slippery Gators crawled to a 29-23 halftime lead, but fell behind as the Injuns scored 45 points to their 24 in the second half.

Aggies Tumble To Seminoles

The Texas A&M Aggies became the ninth team to fall to Florida State's rolling swimmers Wednesday afternoon as they were dunked, 57-38. The Seminoles now have won 17 meets in a row over two year period.

Lee Bransford led the Tribe by winning the 100 freestyle in :50.7, a meet record, and the 50 freestyle in 22.7, also a meet record. In the 50 freestyle, Bransford edged Texas A&M's Bob Baker, who holds the Southwest conference mark.

Others swimmers coming in first for FSU were Paul Thompson, whose 2:09.0 in the 200 butterfly set a new meet record, and Bill Dahl, who won the 440 in 4:56.0.

Lee Langston of Lexington, Ky., captured the 200 backstroke title in 2:24.3 and Mark Owen took first place in diving.

FSU's 400 medley relay team, comprised of Pete Davis, Bill Lawrence, Pete Combes, and Dale Smith, won the event in 3:75.4 to establish a new meet mark.

The Aggies now hold a 2-4 season record

Tomorrow, also in Athens, the Seminoles will take part in the Georgia AAU championships

Gymkana Hits Tech

By VICKI WARDEN
Flambeau Sports Writer

The double - winning effort of Rick Miller and Bob Christians keyed Florida State's Gymkana to a 72½-54½ victory over Georgia Tech last week.

Before a capacity audience, FSU acted as a host team for the first time in two years.

The Seminoles' Miller, the 1961 free exercise champion in the USA invitational meet, copped the free ex and tumbling events, while Christians, a former Georgia AAU high bar champ, captured first in his specialty and on the trampoline.

The revengeful Jackets coached by Lyle Welson, were led by Ray Kulig and Rick Asamoto. Kulig took top honors in the still rings and parallel bars, and Asamoto came in first in the rope climb with a time of 5.3 seconds.

FSU's team captain, Mitch Weinstock, was awarded first place in the side horse event. He also placed second for his performance on the parallel bars and third in the free exercise.

Other Seminoles placing were Joe (Sammy Seminole) Greene, Warren Dicker, Nobie Stone, and Milton McGowan.Greene won second in tumbling and trampoling; Dicker finished second on the horizontal bars, third on the still rings, and third in the 20 feet rope climb; Stone came in second on the side horse and third on the parallel bars; and McGowan finished third on the trampoline.

Jim Hampton, Weinstock, and Greene exhibited working on the long horse as a special feature.

The memoirs of D. I. Arbrikosov are the subject of research in a forthcoming book by Dr. George A. Lensen, Florida State University professor of Far Eastern history.

Dr. Lensen found the dusty memoirs in the Russian and East European History Archive at Columbia University. "Arbrikosov," says Dr. Lensen, "was second secretary in the Russian Embassy in China during the Revolution of 1911-12 and later became first secretary of the Russian Embassy in Japan.

AFTER REVOLUTION

Dr. Lensen went on to explain how after the Russian Revolution of 1917, Japan, until 1925, refused to recognize the new government but still recognized those members of the foreign service in Japan as representatives of Russia. Arbrikosov stayed on in Japan [illegible] as a private citizen and felt free to record the comings and goings of the ambassadors and ministers in China and Japan that would generally escape historians who did not have first and observations from an insider's viewpoint.

The memoirs include many humorous and enlightening undercurrents of the important figures in public and private life of the Russian Foreign service and the Japanese Government.

In one incident that Arbrikosov observed, the Russian minister in Peking battered the Russian cause by publishing a newspaper in the French Language. The newspaper was supposed to be an independent private venture completely devoid from politics.

Each morning the minister and his French editor would meet and the minister would dictate editorial policy from confidential Russian diplomatic dispatches. The two would compose reports from what they called, "special correspondents," of [illegible]. When the editor went that the French editor was in the [illegible] but the French editor challanged the Chinese editor to [illegible] and the Frenchman promptly as[illegible] the Chinese editor's news [illegible] that he felt sorry [illegible] having to work for such a coward. Dr. Lensen explained [illegible] became president of the Republic of China after the Chinese Revolution of 1911-12 and Western Histories have often been tainted [illegible] the new president favored [illegible] Lensen [illegible].

TRAPPED IN SEOUL

The memoirs explain [illegible] ing the Chinese - Japanese War [illegible] 1894 - 95 Yuan was trapped in Seoul and he approached the Russian Military attache asking the attache to smuggle him out of the country as one of his servants. The Russian did this and Yuan never forgot his debt to the Russians, he said.

Western Historians were puzzled over another incident concerning the mysterious replacement of a Russian minister in China, Dr. Lensen said. The memoirs report that the minister eloped with a 16 - year - old French girl whose father was in a very high position. On their way to Russia, the girl was taken off the train and returned to China.

The minister's wife, trying to avoid a scandal, rejoined her husband in Russia, waited for the whispers to doe diwn, then divorced her husband. Dr. Lensen said. After the divorce, the minister married the French girl he added.

TEACHING IN SUMMER

Dr. Lensen will be teaching at Columbia University this summer which will enable him to use research facilities that are available in larger cities.

Research of this nature encounters monumental problems that only large research libraries can solve, he said. "If a professor teaches full time," said Dr. Lensen, "most of his research is done late at night, weekends and holidays." "He has to have a topic that is so interesting that he would rather do that than play golf or go fishing," he added.

One of the most difficult tasks is the checking of military and embassy personnel records for the proper names and spellings of the many people mentioned in the memoirs. The memoirs are written in poor English and Dr. Lensen is translating passages into Russian to ascertain more clearly what the author may have had in mind.

'An Age Of Kings' Aired Each Friday At 8 P.M.

By JIM SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

"An Age of Kings," presented by National Educational Television, is the title of Shakespeare's cycle of eight history plays, which are being aired each Friday at 8 p.m. over WFSU-TV.

Covering a period of 86 years of English history, the fifteen performances take the viewers from the deposition of Richard II to the coronation of Henry VII.

The plays will continue through May 11, and include Richard II, in two parts; Henry IV, in four parts; Henry V, in two parts; Henry VI, in five parts; and Richard III, in two parts.

TONIGHT'S PROGRAM

Part I, acts three, four and five of Henry IV will be shown tonight. Part II of Henry IV will begin March 2 and conclude March 9. Henry V, which begins March 16 and concludes March 23, will be followed by Part I of Henry VI.

Dr. Frank Baxter, professor of English at the University of Southern California, provides opening and closing commentary on each program. Dr. Baxter uses dramatic charts, maps and provides animated information with commentary on the historical, geographical and genealogical backgrounds of the various plays.

Producer Peter Dews assembled a permanent company of about fifteen players for the series and contracted separately with leading young actors of the British theatre for the major roles. For his work, Dews received the top award for dramatic production from the British Guild of Television Producers, which is the equivalent of the American National Academy of Television Arts and Sciences.

WHAT IS A KING?

History fascinated Shakespeare and he attempted to explain the problems of the present through investigation of the past. Kingship also fascinated him, and he asked, What is a king? Is he so [illegible] a flesh and blood man who happens to be born of a king, simply a mortal man who wears a [illegible] Is he truly God [illegible] about a king? Is he truly God-anointed? What is the difference between a good king and a bad one?

Perhaps none of the eight plays rank among the best of Shakespearian drama, but in each there are outstanding elements. The character of Richard II is a masterpiece. Hotspur in "Henry IV" is a wild raving character, and Falstaff is considered to be the greatest comic character ever conceived.

As in all filming of large productions, incidents happen that remain unseen by the audience. While filming the "Deposing of a King," the cast included several live mice which had to be cared for and placed on the set by a male assistant floor manager because the woman assistant floor manager refused to touch them.

BATTLE SCENE

In the fourth program, "The Road to Shrewsbury," background for the Battle of Shrewsbury was filmed in a farmfield filled with smoke bombs. During the battle, Frank Pettingell, [illegible] staff had to be [illegible] under a pile [illegible] emerging and covered with [illegible] he stopped the [illegible] claiming, "In every packet [illegible] cereal corn you'll find a plot [illegible] Falstaff."

During the production [illegible] Bard of Bretonne, Terry [illegible] Lodge, a member of the repertory company, became the father of a boy and had to be restrained by his wife from calling the baby Crispin, after the Battle of Agincourt.

In program nine [illegible] and the White," Jo[illegible]leen Atkins was [illegible] by her husband [illegible] playing a warder. [illegible] program, off-stage [illegible] for sound effects, [illegible] reading an article [illegible] Ness Monster from [illegible] Times.

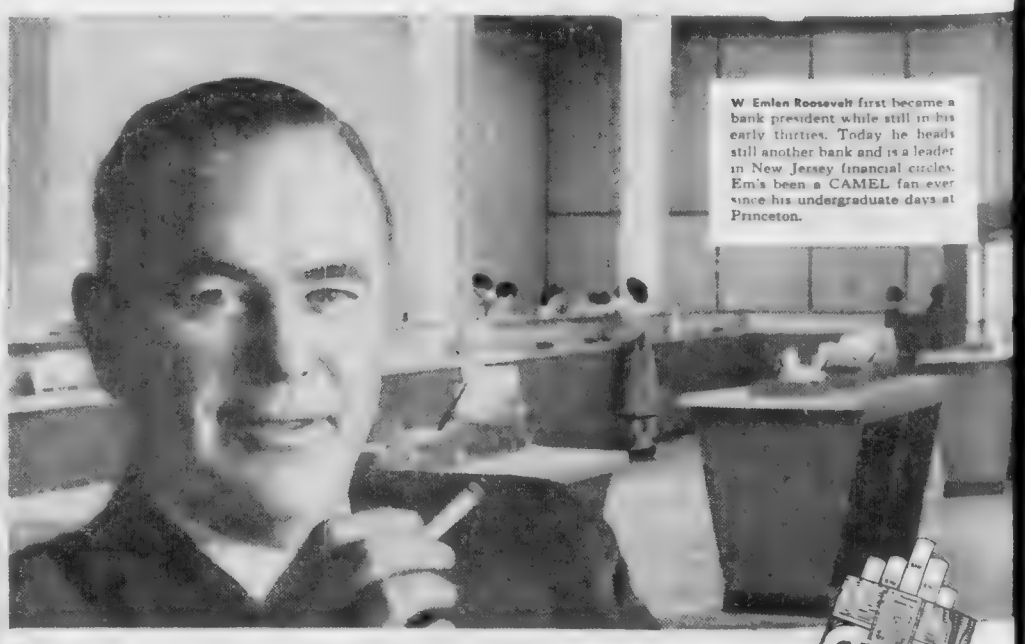
Career Cues:

"Whatever your major, make sure to include a course in 'people'!"



W Emlen Roosevelt, President
National State Bank, Elizabeth, N.J.

"If my college adviser had prophesied that studying psychology would some day help promote my career in banking, I'd have scoffed. Yet that is exactly what has happened. And when I think about it now the reason seems obvious. The facts and figures of banking, or of any other field, are mechanical devices. They take on real meaning only when related to people.

"Good psychology is also the basis of all teamwork. And, since most of today's business and scientific problems are too complicated for 'one man' solutions, teamwork is essential. If you want to be a valuable team player, and a likely candidate for captain, be the person who understands people. Learn what it takes for people to work together in harmony. Learn how to win trust and confidence. Learn basic human psychology.

"Bear this in mind, too. World tension, community tension, business tension, even family tension are the facts of everyday life. The more you know of human behavior, the better prepared you will be to deal with these problems.

"So, if you have the chance, take a course devoted to 'people.' Your class adviser can probably help you fit a psychology elective into your schedule. I don't think you'll regret it . . . I know I didn't."

W Emlen Roosevelt first became a bank president while still in his early thirties. Today he heads still another bank and is a leader in New Jersey financial circles. Emil's been a CAMEL fan ever since his undergraduate days at Princeton.

... Constitution of the Young ...ans of FSU gives the purposes of the Club as follows: 1) "To provide the student body the means for getting practical political education; 2) "To provide through its organization a means to encourage participation in the activities of the Republican Party. 3) "To promote in every honorable way the platform and candidates of the Republican Party. 4) "To develop all Young Republicans on this campus into an informed, intelligent, aggressive and co-operative Republican Group."

Membership is open to any registered student of FSU who intends to abide with the stated purposes of the Club, Jones said. During the school year meetings are held at least once a month. Dues are between $1.25 and $5; a member is classified active or associate, according to payment of dues. Dues will be set by the Executive Board at the beginning of each trimester.

Douglas Midgley, Chairman of the Florida Federation of the Young Republicans, enumerated, in a recent letter to the FSU chapter, the future plans for the club. He hopes to see the organization of more college Young Republican Clubs. "Obviously the college organization can and I hope will in the future, play an important role in furthering the aims and goals of the Republican Party in Florida," Midgley said.

DIVIDE STATE

He plans to divide the state into three districts, with a vice-chairman in charge of each. The reasons for this division are: 1) to free Midgley from local area problems; 2) to make possible an opportunity for colleges "to have closer supervision and aid through the medium of the specific vice-chairman in charge"; 3) to enable Midgley to make trips throughout the State, giving attention to particularly troublesome areas. He also hopes to have periodic meetings of the College Committee when Florida State University and Rollins College are active enough to warrant the meetings.

Although the editor of the Pow Wow, the student handbook, is scheduled to be elected at the Board of Student Publications meeting tomorrow, no one had filed for the post as of yesterday morning.

Application forms are still available at the Main Desk in Longmire and must be turned in at the Student Activities Office in the basement of Longmire.

On a panel closing the two-day conference which also included U.S. prisons Director James V. Bennett; Dr. Stephen Schafer, a European criminologist for many years who joined the FSU faculty last fall as professor of criminology and corrections, said southern corrections are way behind the times when compared with corrections in other countries.

"In many parts of the world it would be desirable to understand that John Howard cannot be considered as a modern penal reformer any longer," said Schafer. "One cannot escape from the feeling that wherever a correctional administration seems to believe in the exclusive validity of the two centuries old and at that time so progressive statement, according to which 'make men diligent and they will be honest'—their treatment method seems to be at a stage from where only development is possible," he said.

"It is true at the moment no infallible answer to the problem of method is available. However, no correctional administration can afford to be too negative: with the only 'treatment' emphasis on cleanliness, discipline, and some work of inmates, and with an isolated disinterest in exploring eventually instructive experiments, Dr. Schafer stressed.

He said "a fundamental re- examination of southern penal methods would not be without any result."

THE 1962 BLANCHE KINGERY CARROLL MEMORIAL AWARD FOR RELIGIOUS SERVICE to Florida State University has been given to Jan Dougherty. Above, Miss Dougherty and Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby look at the bronze and walnut plaque on which her name will be engraved as the third recipient of the award set up in 1960 by Judge Donald K. Carroll.

Dougherty Receives '62 Religious Award

Jan Dougherty, student chairman of Religious Emphasis Week, has received the 1962 Blanche Kingery Carroll award for outstanding leadership in religious affairs at Florida State University.

The award was presented by Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby at the final convocation of Religious Emphasis Week, Wednesday.

Miss Dougherty is the third recipient of the award set up in 1960 by Judge K. Carroll in memory of his mother, the late Blanche Kingery Carroll of Jacksonville. A check for $100 is annually given to the award winner.

In addition the name of each year's winner is inscribed on a bronze and walnut plaque, also given by Judge Carroll. The plaque, inscribed "For outstanding moral or spiritual leadership in the campus of Florida State University," is on permanent display in the Longmire lobby.

PRESENTATION

In making the presentation of the award Dean Oglesby said:

"The recipient of the Carroll Award for 1962 more than meets all of the criteria established for this award. She is a person who has rendered significant service to the campus through the leadership of various organizations.

"As a Junior Counselor she served as president of a freshman dormitory, she has served as secretary of Garnet Key, as a member of Women's Judiciary and Mortar Board. She has served as president of her sorority and has participated in the Westminster Fellowship.

"Her record of scholarship has been likewise distinguished. She was one of two members of the Junior Class named to Phi Beta Kappa and she has been selected for such other honoraries as Phi Kappa Phi, Sigma Tau Delta, Sigma Delta Pi and Alpha Lambda Delta. Her over - all grade point average is slightly higher than 3.9 (A).

"In addition to her contribution to the campus through leadership and scholarship the 1962 recipient of the award personally exemplified the highest ideals of the religious life. As a person of deep integrity, personal warmth and selflessness, she has been an inspiration to all of the students and faculty who have known her."

Students Arrested In Theft Of Restaurant Cash, Safe

Two Florida State University students were arrested Sunday and charged with stealing over $2,600 from the "Corner Restaurant" at Copeland St. and Park Ave.

They were charged with breaking and entering in order to commit grand larceny of a cash register, safe, and its contents. Police said they crawled through an exhaust fan vent to enter the restaurant.

They were arrested when they returned to pick up a lug wrench which they used in the theft, police said. All of the stolen property was recovered. The students made an unsuccessful attempt to break open the stolen cash register at the restaurant, police said.

The two students arrested were Charles Joseph Hester Jr., 18, 547 West Park Ave., and Robert Vance Garvin, 18, 415 Walker St. James Marvin Pate, 19, Hester's roommate, was also charged with theft. Police said Pate was a former employee of the "Corner."

The cases were transferred to the circuit court, and the students' bonds were set yesterday. Before presstime, police said the bonds would probably be $2,500 each.

In another weekend incident, the Florida State Campus Police stopped a disturbance by several male students in the back of Magnolia Hall.

The students, who were pledges from fraternities at the University of Florida, had been sent to Tallahassee "to cause a disturbance" on the campus.

Campus Police said the students were loud and boisterous, possibly broke a light bulb over the dormitory's back door, kicked over a trash can, moved ladders which painters had left, and "made a general muisance of themselves."

Senate Committee Acts On Trimester

Bills Concerning Cabinet Changes, Publications, Editorships Are Slated

Student Senate action on changes in the Constitution and ... under the trimester is expected to get into full swing ... uled to be introduced concerning the Cabinet and ...

Action began on the Cabinet revisions last Wednesday when Senate passed a bill that would strengthen the position of secretary of state.

Previously, the position of secretary of state was generally held by a woman studen: who acted as official hostess, according to Vice President Ken van Assenderp However as amended the position will be more comparable to that of the United States Secretary of State, he said.

ASSIST WITH POLICY

The main duties of the secretary will be to assist the student body president in the coordination of Student Government policy and action. The secretary will be assisted by undersecretaries in charge of University promotion, Speaker's Bureau and educational analysis

Other bills scheduled to come out of the Senate Trimester Committee, headed by Sen Ted De La Vergne include bills creating of a secretary for internal affairs and revising the duties of the secretary of student welfare and the attorney general.

The new secretary of internal affairs would work with undersecretaries in charge of the Rally Committee and of working with the cheerleaders.

HOMECOMING

A third undersecretary would serve as student chairman of Homecoming and would appoint the chairmen of the various homecoming events

The secretary of student welfare would be in charge of working with both students and University officials concerning student employment problems, working with the Office of Vocational Guidance and Placement concerning student employment opportunities and supervising the Student Travel Service. These duties were formerly handled by an undersecretary.

In addition, undersecretaries would be in charge of day student, married student and C.L.O. student affairs, international student affairs, and the student insurance program

ATTORNEY GENERAL

The post of attorney general would also be strengthened under the proposed changes. As in the case of the secretary of stat, he will work with the student body president in an advisory capacity to help coordinate Student Government policy

These changes would all be statutrox and would take effect upon the installation of the new student body president. A constitutional change concerning the approval of Cabinet members as well as their assistants who are appointed by the student body president, is also scheduled to be introduced Now only the final cabinet members must be approved by Senate

If the bill is passed by Senate it will be among the constitutional revisions up for student body approval in a referendum election this spring

PUBLICATIONS

Revisions concerning student publications, which may come before Senate Wednesday are also constitutional.

Among these are revisions necessary under the trimester system in the term of office of members of the Board of Publications and ... of compensation.

Three student board members ... to replace on the ... and ... full year's term, beginning ...

The Board of Publications would have the power to designate both the procedure and the terms of office ... Now ... Constitution designates the election date and terms

"The revision will give the board more flexibility under the trimester system," board member Toni Di Carlo said

"Under the trimester system it may not be possible to elect all of the editors at the same time, or even for the same length of terms," she explained

Wald Speaks On 'Origin Of Death'

By BONNIE FREEDMAN
Flambeau Staff Writer

"Almost no textbook in biology lists "death" in its index," said Dr. George Wald, speaking at the Florida High School Auditorium

Dr. Wald, Harvard biologist famous for his work with vitamins A and B, spoke before a mire than capacity audience Thursday night

"We should have no quarrel with death," he said. "Death has its purpose: death has its function," he added. For that reason, Dr. Wald chose as his topic, The Origins of Death."

DEATH ARISES

"Death arises in the scale of evolution at the same time as sexual reproduction: after the germ plasm delivers the cells of reproduction, the body which houses the germ plasm can be discarded," suggested Dr. Wald.

"That idea maybe repugnant to man; but the thought would never bother a salmon," he continued. He described the various physiological metamorphoses that take place in a salmon after it has reached maturity and is ready for reproduction; the flesh becomes pink, the neuromuscular system is at a peak, and the digestive system collapses. During the salmon's whole race up rivers into fresh water to breed, it does not eat. "The salmon has only one thought in mind," said Dr. Wald. After the fish spawns, it dies.

Dr. Wald explained the somewhat similar circumstances surrounding the true American and European eels. For years, the birthplace of these fish could not be determined and then it was discovered that to spawn, these animals all journey to the Sargasso Sea. The trip back for the European eels may take as long as three years.

PRAYING MANTIS

In the case of the praying mantis, the biologist explained that these insects are so voracious that a female will eat a male mantis just as soon as anything else. For this reason, the male often dies while attempting copitulation. The male can get away, if the female has just had a heavy meal. "You may take your moral lesson from that," Dr. Wald said.s

Another biological function that ... in death comm... the ... reaction to hunger. "Hunger has as its universal response increased activity, "Dr. Wald said. "A hungry animal begins to run in search of food,, and will run itself to death if it cannot secure it."

In this, he suggested that we have the reason for the lemming migrations. When there is not sufficient food for the whole population, many hungry members begin to migrate in search of food. "The end of a migration is never colonization, though, for where these is food, there are already animals. The end of a migration is death," he stressed.

Dr. Wald suggested that this solution to the problem of overpopulation was perhaps much more humanitarian than the human way. Men overtake other lands where there are already people. Instead of killing, the lemmings die. But there is no destruction of land or property, only a minumum of dying, and those that die are the older, weaker ones, not the healthiest and most promising of the population

IMMORTALITY

Dr. Wald said that man has pursued a dream of immortality for ages. He suggested that we already had immortality, "but we have it in the wrong place. We have it in the germ plasm, but we want it in the body. We have fallen in love with the body, but the germ plasm is the precious thing; evolution is the evolution of the germ plasm."

"Perpetual life is a swindle," he said, "it is not only unattainable, it is meaningless." He illustrated this point as has been done before, with an analogy of animated test tubes. "Test tubes are potentially immortal, "he said. "But anyone who has ever worked in a lab knows what happens to test tubes that are used constantly. They are lost, broken; they die"

In labs which constantly replace the broken test tubes, there is a stable population. But if we were to try to determine the average age of these test tubes, we would probably find it to be only four or five months, he said. "Test tubes in the prime of life," he added. "In fact, given everything we could ask for in physical immortality, we would probably find everything as it is now," he said

Returning to his original suggestion, that after the body has delivered the means to recreate itself it has no use, Dr. Wald added that in any organized society, there is a contribution to ... [illegible]

Then what is the meaning of life? "I think it is an endless question," he said, "and the search for its answer, the endless quest."

Thanks For Keyettes

The campus movie, the free flickering institution that draws approximately 3,000 viewers each week, has come very close to being a thing of the past because you have been uncooperative about such things as smoking and slopping food and drink about the Westcott theater.

YOU KNOW WHAT saved the free movies? The Kiwanis girl's affiliate, the Keyettes. Of the numerous "service" and so-called "honoraries" that deploy themselves about the campus, not one that was asked would undertake the ushering that has become necessary if you want to keep the free films.

It was necessary for the local girls club to be brought out here to do what amounts to courteous policing of the campus movie. They aren't college students. That speaks pretty highly for us, doesn't it?

FLORIDA STATE UNIVERSITY students that enjoy the free films in Westcott owe the local Keyette chapter a big thank you. The young women have done a fine job thus far, according to responsible persons managing the film showings.

If you are one of those people who complain regularly and avidly about the machinery in use at the movie, stop and think about the money involved . . . particularly the cost of fire damages should someone get careless with a cigarette in the auditorium. A new projector costs upwards of $17,000. A new auditorium is out of the question.

So if an usherette asks you to step outside with your cigarettes, do so with courtesy. The university does not have to provide the free movies. It will have explanations to make if there is serious fire damage following one of those showings. We joke about Sophia Loren burning up the screen; more likely of her stupefied fans will burn down the entire building if some control isn't exercised.

BE HAPPY THE Keyettes made themselves available. FSU free-film goers were on their last lap if the young women had not volunteered their services. This university still isn't great enough to provide ushers for the free films; let's hope it's great enough to appreciate any efforts non-students make. L. P.

Stop Stealing Papers

It is quite obvious that many of the students on this campus do not realize that stealing is an Honor Court offense, and that this definitely includes the stealing of local and out-of-town newspapers from their racks.

NINETY PER CENT of all the out-of-town newspapers that are delivered on campus are being distributed by FSU students. These students purchase these papers at wholesale price and distribute them to the stands throughout the campus.

At first, these students were using the common "honest john" type machine for distribution purposes. This is the open rack with the container for the money. However, it was found that the students were taking their papers from the racks without paying for them. Thus, it was found necessary for them to install the new box-type distribution stand, which requires money to be inserted before the paper can be removed. These new machines are costing the student distributers $57 a machine.

IT HAS BEEN REALIZED that even the installation of these new machines has not solved the problem. At many distribution points, the students will deposit the price of one newsaper and take five or six extra copies for their friends. Another big problem has been the destruction of these new machines. Students have, in some cases, literally torn the door off these machines after the machine had become jammed by a bent coin.

We suggest that if you have put money into one of these machines, and the machine gets jammed, that you leave a note on the machine. This way you will have your money refunded to you, and these student distributors will not have the added expense of repairing the machine.

IT HAS ALSO been pointed out that the machines will be watched from now on, and the next person caught stealing papers will be sent to Honor Court for the offense.

Since fellow FSU students, not the newspapers themselves, are the ones that are losing the money on this deal, we are especially in favor of any and all action that the Honor Court and student distributors of the newspapers may take against the students responsible for these actions. Furthermore, we urge the students to be more considerate of student distributors and their effort to pay their way through college.

Story To Tell

Florida State University has a story to tell.

Its own.

And there is a definite need for a film which would graphically tell this living, progressive story of this university to the masses of prospective students that would like to attend FSU.

The needs for such a film are manifold. Florida State has been beseiged with requests for films from many of the high schools throughout the state. Television stations have asked for picture coverage of the university.

The Speakers Bureau, Alumni Office, Honors Program recruiters, and Athletic Recruiting staff need the film to illustrate their presentations. Many of these groups have been embarrassed upon appearing on programs with other universities which have had elaborate films with which to sell their school.

The lack seems even more senseless since FSU is fortunate to have the services of Werner Vagt. Vagt, who works with WFSU-TV, has received numerous prizes for his outstanding documentary films in the past.

Senator Gene Brown will introduce a resolution into Student Senate tomorrow to remedy the situation. Brown's resolution would set up a committee to investigate the situation and come up with a workable plan for getting the film.

With the talent for producing the film available and with the need clearly defined, there seems to be no good reason for not making every effort to secure the money for such a film. We urge that this be done immediately. B.C.S.

Dead Horse

More About Food, Or See What Sanchez Started

By ALLAN DERMOTT

"But Nancy, why do you want to eat here at the Seminole Club?" asked Him. "We always eat off campus."

"HONEY, I HAVE to make an analysis of some newspaper article for speech class," she answered. "And what better column is there to use than Bob Sanchez's. Don't ask. I plan to use his article in the February sixth issue of the Flambeau entitled 'The Illusion of Food Service.'"

"Oh, brother!"

"Come on," she said. "Look! There's the pool of water Bob mentions. But I don't see any pickles around. All I see on the trays are dried - up egg and spinach. That's one check against you Bob ol' boy. And look! There's no 37 pints of water on my tray — just one or two."

"I WOULDN'T BET on it," said Jim, taking off his right shoe and pouring water out of it. "Look at how much you dumped into just one of my shoes."

As you can well imagine, our two friends went through the line trying to figure what they should not get. When they finally made their way to the cashier and the prices were rung up, Nancy suddenly dropped her lower jaw and quickly put a large check on her list in favor of Mr. Sanchez.

AS OUR TWO friends sat down Jim picked one up and filled it. Nancy, however, looked over seven or eight before making up her mind. She even found a butter wapper in one.

"Sanchez didn't mention glasses, she said. "However, I think I'll give him credit for it anyway. After all, he couldn't have possibly included everything."

A SOUR TWO friends sat down for a quiet peaceful meal. Jim suddenly noticed something floating in his water. "What's that?" he said pointing to the water.

"Soap suds, silly," she said.

"Soap suds?!! Good heavens! Oh, I'll be back in a minute. I want to get a bottle of ketchup and some clean silverware."

FIVE MINUTES LATER he returned. "I'm sorry I took so long. I had to go over to the south wing to find a bottle."

"Did you hear all that shouting a minute ago?" she asked.

"Yea. Some girl named Sherry was shouting that the boy sitting across from her had stepped on her shoes. I think her salisbury didn't agree with her or something. Perhaps, on the other hand, her face just was red because she noticed several people looking at her."

"Poor girl. How's your salisbury anyway?" she asked.

"The ketchup is delicious," he said.

"HOW'S YOUR SALISBURY?" she asked again.

"You know," he said, "I bet the reason why there are so few bottles of ketchup around is because this ketchup is so good."

"How's your salisbury?" she asked again.

"Yes sir, you have to give Morrison's Service some credit."

"NEVER MIND THEN," she said. "Oh, by the way, I'm having trouble with my math course. How do you solve for x when x equals a fraction and the bottom number is also a fraction?"

"Simple," he said, smiling and taking out a pencil and piece of paper from his pocket. "You take the reciprocal of the denominator and multiply it by the numerator and . . ."

Cling! Clang! Cling!

JIM AND NANCY looked up. Their pies were turned upside down upon a tray of dirty dishes, glasses and in the middle of some half - eaten spinach and jello.

"We weren't finished," said Jim.

Two big, white innocent eyes looked down at them. "You's was," I guess they thought you was dest a second — I's get you all some more."

YES, IT WAS A wonderful, delicious, quiet, peaceful meal. Nancy studied the situation carefully and turned in her report. Mr. Sanchez was tops in her book. Five days later, however, Jim asked her how she did on the report.

"I received an 'F' and an 'A'," she replied.

"HOW IN THE DEVIL did that happen?"

MY TEACHER SAID that it was full of hasty generalizations and false analogies."

"Well, how then did you also get an 'A'?" he asked.

"I'm not sure," she said, "but I think the teacher didn't get finished grading it and gave it to some student to complete, because at the end, whoever it was wrote, 'Good ol' Sanchez' and signed 'Food Plan Number 0474'."

"May the heavens have mercy on 0474 an the rest of the poor souls."

"Amen."

Letters

'Pernicious Consequences'

TO THE EDITOR:

It appears that Mr. Allan Dermott is completely overcome by the role expectations of the "intellectual," even to the point of prudishness and snobbery. In his windowless tower of scholastic purity, Mr. Dermott castigates those immature wastrals at Kellum Hall who watch Mighty Mouse on Saturday mornings. But Mr. Dermott's insipid elucidations (". . . I, for some reason, begin to wonder about the maturity of some college 'men'"), reflect, not the feelings of a truly interested fellow student, but those of a hyper-moral teenager. One might ask Mr. Dermott how he spends his leisure moments. Does he chuckle at Charlie Brown's dilemmas or feel empathy for Pfeifer's characters? Perhaps it is rash to assume that Mr. Dermott relaxes at all.

The point is clear, however, to those students who enjoy a few moments of release from constant tensions; whether Mighty Mouse, Nietzsche, Jimmy Reed, or Bartok, such seconds of escape are essential if one is to maintain a balanced personality. Mr. Dermott's personal distaste for the "less subtle" types of entertainment is not offensive in itself and certainly overindulgence might result in pernicious consequences. It is objectionable, though when Mr. Dermott raises himself above his fellows by assuming the role of campus coralizer and intellectual castigator.

In addition to his mention of Mighty Mouse, certainly a worthy subject, Mr. Dermott has cited a much criticized activity at Kellum Hall, firecracker throwing. He is certainly to be commended for relating and showing concern for the complete disregard shown by some truly infantile students for limb and property. Mr. Dermott has accurately analyzed the situation. However, the miasma of passivism might be noticed in his letter. If Mr. Dermott is genuinely interested in eliminating such a dangerous situation, he will do more than write letters to the university newspaper.

Got An Extra Buck?

By LESLIE POWELL

Lovers of Charlie Brown and the entire Peanuts crew will be more than merely delighted with It's A Dog's Life, Charlie Brown.

THE PUBLISHERS, Holt, Rinehart and Winston, Inc., say "We take pleasure in sending you this book to review." They should. It takes one's mind off the vicious variety of nuts loose hereabouts and sets you off in everything from snickers to low, side-paining roars of delight.

Lucy, of course, is still instructing Linus in the glories of this earth with superb aplomb. "Cows," she tells him, "come in at night to escape being pasturized." That makes beautiful sense considering some of the nonsense he's subjected to daily.

LINUS, NATURALLY having a great deal of trouble holding onto his blanket-type stability, also runs head on into romantic involvement with Sally Brown.

Snoopy braves progress and develops a case of nerves. Seems the road department or somebody wants to run a superhiway through his happy home. As if that weren't typical enough (can't you see him sleeping atop another greasy gas station a la Tallahassee:), he also has cat fatigue.

SCHROEDER IS STILL plumping for Beethoven. Violet, Pigpen, and the others are present and busily accounting for it, and Frieda, the kid with the naturally curly hair, joins the crowd. Happily enough, Frieda seems to have managed to escape the bouffant craze. Will it last?

And the entire carefree (?) crew tackles such knotty problems as library cards, baseball losses, dinosauers, prayer, and interfering grandmothers.

IF YOU HAVE AN extra buck, spend it wisely. Buy the new Peanuts and maybe you will learn to grin again. It's A Dog's Life was published Feb. 5, so it should be available at area bookstores by now, if second-hand, second-rate texts haven't usurped the space.

Uh Oh. Before I forget. To Kill A Mockingbird, a very absorbing, quietly beautiful Pulitzer prize winning novel is available now at Bill's. The price is a reasonable sixty cents. Try it.

Committee Slates International Concert

A new, imaginative concept of international relations will be tested in Washington, D. C., this summer by the President's Music Committee. This committee will present a series of eleven programs for the First International Jass Festival May 31-June 1.

The festival has exciting cultural possibilities. It will include eight concerts exploring various facets of jazz, a specifically planned exhibit of paintings, instruments, manuscripts, [illegible] and other graphic arts; a jazz film documentary and an illustrated lecture on the history of jazz.

The President's Music Committee, headed by Mrs. Jouett Shouse with President John Kennedy as honorary chairman and former President Dwight D. Eisenhower as Chairman of the Board of Trustees, is scheduling some of the top artists in the world for the symposia of sound.

"We are currently negotiating for the appearance of jazz artists who have won acclaim in our country and abroad," Mrs. Shouse said in announcing the schedule.

"Among these are Louis Armstrong, Duke Ellington, Count Basie, Lionel Hampton, Chris Barber and his English Sextet and Martial Solal of Paris. Members of our Embassy staff in Poland are financing the appearance of the outstanding Polish Jazz Quartet. Jazz greats have also been invited from France, Germany, Sweden and Belgium."

The cultural exchange program has become significant prominent in recent years. Russian ballets have performed in the United States. Van Cliburn and others have taken the U.S.S.R. in a storm of applause. "Satchmo" Armstrong swept Europe as decisively as Hitler's troops had done many years before, and had the continentals swinging with his New Orleans tones.

The exchanges graphically pointed out that there is a binding quality of good music that wipes out differences among people.

Germans, their frothy beer mugs held high, and the French, brandishing their wine glasses, rocked with the pulsing sounds of "The Saints Go Marching In."

The throbbing tones of "Night Train" climbed the Soviet mountains and plunged through the Iron Curtain over the Voice of America.

The success of these songs is understandable.

Music is written from the heart. And the hearts of men, when the facade has been stripped off, have the same pains and joys the world over. Music lifts these hearts simultaneously and raises them to a plane above the bickering that so often characterizes international relations.

The President's Music Committee has hit upon an excellent idea in promoting mutual understanding among the peoples of many nations through good music. Music soothes the temper, and there are many international tempers that could use some cooling in these troubled times.

Meet Morgenthau

By BOB FOSS

The alarm rang, and with the speed of an angered housefellow he bolted out the door, forgetting to take off his snowshoes and to clean his fingernails.

RIGHT OFF, I imagine you are thinking that Morgenthau is kind of strange, well not at all, you see ole Morge is in love? There is this girl, Dockery, in his theories of hopscotch class who I mean is sharp. She has the most beautiful coal black hair, a tatoo of Gene Autry on her fore head and paints her toenails vermillion, Morge's favorite color.

If this is not enough this amazing and wonderful campus queen has more, it is rumored that she is the best slingshot shot on the entire campus and maybe even the entire world. Just how could anyone pass up a girl like that, like how could they?

AS MORGE FLEW THROUGH the door of the classroom he tripped over one of his mexican handmade snowshoes and hit the floor with a resounding thud. With this, Dockery came vaulting down from the thirty - seventh row, dropped to her knee and hollered "Hey! You hurt?". With an ecstatic feeling of ecstasy Morge assured her that he was, and suggested that she rush him post haste to the campus internery. With an extemporaneous, sympathetic "Hey!" she asked him to her awaiting sedan chair with Florida State written across the back, and they were off to obtain medical aid.

ONCE AT THE INTERNERY, Dock assisted Morge out of the sedan chair, with Florida State across the back, and carried him through the front door, threw some dazed attendant a credit card, hollered "Hey!" and gently laid Morge in the nearest jungle hammock.

TO DIGRESS, just between us, ole Morge really isn't the least bit or pain but figures that this is a keen way to get to know Dockery. Pretty cool thinker this Morgenthau, an idea one wouldn't pick up in logic class or read on the back of some breakfast cereal package.

As things went, Morge stayed in the internery for two weeks groaning at the appropriate time taking pills and other medications and periodically having his stomach pumped for you see the food just didn't seem to agree with him. To look on the brighter side, as we all were warned the note Morge found in a salisbury steak he ate for lunch, Dockery came to see him each and every day, during visiting hours of course. She would write letters home for him, play old maid with him, crack pecans for him and once in a while she even smuggled in some Chinese rice. Like I said that Dockery's some great girl.

Might Modify

DEAR CLAIRE A. KEMPER:

I read with interest your recent (Feb. 20.) letter to the editor condemning Operation Abolition and in a very secondary manner, Project Awake.

I presume that you and others are familiar with the film in question, but I somehow think that you have missed some rather obvious points, not the least of which is the well - authenticated manner in which the protests were organized, and their easily magnified to riot. Fledgled communists (please note — not in quotes) expertly did this by primarily using one student body (U of C., Berkeley) which I think most educators would rank equal to or above the "assumed intellectual maturity" of American college students. Like you, these students were duped.

But also like you, these students have opportunities to erase clouds of doubt and ignorance. One way might be by intelligently supporting, and constructively modifying if you feel necessary, movements such as Project Awake.

Seminoles Sock Miami, 83-80

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Sports Editor

It's a strange way to win a game.

Standing in a corner, that is. But that's what it took Saturday night for the Florida State Seminoles to be sure they wouldn't throw away their 83-80 victory over the University of Miami by fouling the 'Canes.

Not only was it a strange victory, it was also one that most Seminole fans didn't expect themselves. Florida State, which now has a 13-8 record, had won only one cage contest on Hurricane soil.

In a game that was tied 23 times, Florida State squeaked out a victory when the trailing 'Canes fouled them again and again in the last few minutes of play.

With 3:15 left in the contest Dave Fedor dropped in a jumper from 10 feet to untie the 23rd knot. The 6-6 senior from Zephyrhills put FSU ahead to stay, 76 - 74.

Moments later, Mike McCoy missed a one - and - one effort from the foul line in one of Miami's last chances to win the game. The 7 - 1 McCoy, who tallied 16 points from the field, was 0-for-three at the foul line.

With the clock reading 2:05 Miami's flashy Julie Cohen darted in, swiped the ball from Faurest Coogle, and charged down the court for what should have been an easy layup.

But a second chance for Miami to score died when the ball failed to go in.

Then Florida State stuck the ball in the icebox, and Miami had no choice but to try to get the ball . . . and foul in the process.

And foul they did.

The fouled Dale Ricketts hit 2 - of 2 at the charity line. Then Coogle, who substituted for

CHARLIE LONG
. . . hits 23 markers

Charlie Long, also dropped in two.

Miami having the ball, Cohen tallied his 17th point with a layup. The score was 80-76.

Another Miami foul

With the clock at 42 seconds, Fedor put in two free throws.

Twenty - five seconds later, Miami score dagain when Jack Spisak hit . . . Coogle blitzed him with a layup for Miami's last points.

With only one second on the clock, Spisak fouled Coogle, which gave FSU two chances to score at the line. The Kentuckian missed the first shot, but dropped in the second. . . and Miami had had it.

The score, 83 to 80, FSU called time out. When the game resumed, the Seminoles stood aside and let Miami try for their field goal.

Lou Alix tried a jumper. No good. And then tried another, but the clock had run out.

Florida State was led by Fedor and Long, who bagged 23 points each. Alix of Miami also did). Fedor hit 7-of-14 field goals and 9-of-11 free throws.

Long sparkled in the Seminole attack during the first half when he looped eight from the floor. Before he was taken out in the second half he bagegd three more field goals for a 11-of-20 effort, which was good for 55 per cent.

The two Seminole high scorers also led FSU in rebounding. Each pulled down nine rebounds while Ray Swain dragged down eight. Miami's Alix got 17 rebounds to McCoy's 14 .

Swain was also third in scoring for FSU, hitting 15 points. He dropped in 7 - of - 12 field goal tries for a 58 per cent effort.

FSU ended up with a 484 field goal accuracy, hitting 30 of 62 from the field. The Seminoles were ranked second in the nation with 497 going into the contest. They were a percentage point behind top ranked Ohio State.

Tankers Edged; Frosh Win

By VICTOR COMOLLI
Asst. Sports Editor

Florida State's swimming teams were out of town taking part in important competitions this weekend.

The varsity swimming team captured second place in the Georgia AAU, as they were edged by the University of Florida. Earlier last week in a dual meet here, FSU had upset the powerful Gators with the advantage of the home pool.

Florida piled up 116 points to FSU's 98. Georgia trailed with mere 24 markers.

FSU's Paul Thompson was the star of the two - day meet as he won three events with new record times in everyone. He swam the 200 butterfly in 2:08, the 220 freestyle in 2:05.2, and the 440 freestyle in 4:36.2.

Lee Bransford, the Seminoles' other multiple winner, toured the 100 freestyle in 50.2 and the 50 freestyle in 22.4, a new pool, school, and AAU record.

The only other Seminole to come in first in an event was Dick Acosta, who won the 200 backstroke.

Tom Lasanta rewrote a FSU school record at 2:30 in the 200 breaststroke, but his effort was only good for a third place.

The Seminoles' next and last dual home meet will be at 8 p.m. Thursday against East Carolina College.

BABY SEMINOLES ROLL

The powerful Baby Seminoles swept top honors in the Southeastern AAU swimming championship in Tuscaloosa, Ala.

The FSU frosh piled up a total of 115 points to win first place over 13 other teams. The opposition included the University of Miami's varsity, which came in second with 99, and the University of Alabama's varsity, which came in third with 93.

Ironically, the frosh's strength came in the relay events and diving, while these proved to be the events that cost the varsity a triumph at the Georgia AAU.

The 400 medley relay team (Jim Mullally, Sherman Henderson, Charles Tandy, and Ted Roth) set a new meet and FSU freshman record in their victory.

Mullally, as usual, starred for the Seminoles by coming in first in the 100 backstroke with a new freshman record time of 59.6. He also placed second in the 200 individual medley, while Mark Cohen was fourth.

FSU's promising freshman divers, Neal Allen and Jimmy Payne, swept both diving events. Allen was first in the 1 - meter competition and second in the 3-meter. Payne won the 3-meter and took second in the 1 - meter.

Last Friday, the FSU varsity team defeated the University of Georgia, 47-37, in a dual meet at Athens. The victory gives the Seminoles a perfect 10-0 mark for the season. FSU's varsity and frosh swimmers are undefeated in dual competition for the year.

In the Georgia meet, Bransford negotiated the 50 freestyle in 22.9 and Lasanta the 200 individual medley in 2:21.5.

Other Seminoles taking first were Mark Owen in the 3-meter diving and Risto Pyykko in the 200 butterfly.

FSU's 400 freestyle relay team, comprised of Thompson, Bransford, Dale Smith, and Alan Roles, won the event in 3:32.2.

FSU Cops Memphis Meet

Florida State's relay teams, anchored by Quentin Till, captured two first places in the Memphis Indoor Carnival track competition Saturday night.

The 8-lap and 12-lap relay teams were the squads that sparked FSU. The 8-lap team toured the course in 2:38.8 to set a new meet record, and the 12-lap team also set a record when it ran the course in . . 49.8.

The 12-lap team consisted of Till, Craig Johnson, Dave Ellis, and Bill Davis; Terry Long replaced Ellis on the 8-lap team.

Till, Brock Smith, Dick Roberts, and Davis came in third in the 20-lap event.

Florida State tied for another first place when George Smith leaped 6-0 in the high jump. Teammate Tommy Bourne came in third.

The Seminoles led the field of 10 teams with 59½ points. Alabama was a few points behind with 51 markers, while Mississippi State was held to 41½.

Jeff Clark and Al Williams came in second and fourth respectively in the shot put. Johnson finished fourth in the 60-yard dash. Ed Hayes took third in the pole vault, while Herb Kraft was fourth in the broad jump.

FSU Netters To Face Three Tough Foes At Season's State

By JOHN WOOD
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State tennis team will be facing a rougher schedule this season, as their slate opens with three of the most highly touted court groups in the land: the Fort Eustis (Va.) squad Lamar Tech, the Georgia Bulldogs.

And, of course, they will battle Florida.

The team is as follows: Paul Scarpa (No. 1 singles), Gordy Smith (No. 2 singles), Ed Fusula, No. 3 singles), Rusty Hamilton. Scarpa and Smith form the No. 1 doubles team, and Hamilton and Fusula make up the No. 2 doubles team.

Three other members are contesting for the No. 3 doubles spot. They are Bob Berry, Floyd Jihn, and Mike Dire. Out of this contest should come their rankings in the singles berth.

The Seminoles will open against the Virginia Army transportation unit netters March 2-3 in Tallahassee. The Virginians claim several former collegiate players.

Even bigger fireworks are expected at the March 8 home meet when they battle Lamar Tech College and its four former Davis Cup members.

The Georgia Bulldogs invade FSU March 15 - 16. Other teams to be faced are Georgia Tech, Presbyterian, Miami, Florida, Clemson, Furman, and Jacksonville Navy.

The Tribesmen will have a head coach to direct them at only the last two meets. Head coach Edward Cubbon, away on sea duty for the Navy, will miss the first clash of the season. While he is away, Roger Nichols, a graduate student, willl be in charge of the team.

Cubbon said of the schedule. "This is perhaps the most difficult schedule ever encountered here in tennis. We also lost some of our best men of last year ,but we feel we have a pretty good tennis team."

The freshman team is in the process of tryouts.

Grapplers Bop Jacksonville

The Florida State Wrestling Club pinned five opponents and captured a decision to win the 28-6 grappling contest with the Jacksonville YMCA Saturday.

Before 350 spectators, FSU team captain Joe Wilder recorded the best timing with a 34-second pin.

The two squads will meet again in Jacksonville March 10 in the Jacksonville Open Invitational Wrestling Tournament.

FSU's next meet is March 2-3 in the Southeastern Intercollegiate Tournament in Auburn, Ala.

The summary:

123 lb. Class—Jerry Haver, Jax, decisioned Erron Green, FSU, 5-2.
130 lb. Class—Steve Bain, FSU, pinned Bruce Brown, Jax, 3:43.
137 lb. Class—J. Wilder, FSU, pinner; Bill Criswell, Jax, :34.
147 lb. Class—John McCotter, FSU, decisioned Leon Reed, Jax, 17-6.
157 lb. Class—Bill Yeomans, FSU, decisioned Ron Yeomans, FSU, 4-0.
167 lb. Class—Gus Neal, FSU, pinned Dave McEnulty, Jax, 3:56.
177 lb. Class—Mike Strayhorn, FSU, pinned Sam Sawyer, Jax, 1:48.

Racqs Play Frosh

The Racquettes will open their fall schedule Thursday against the freshmen men's tennis team. They will go against Daytona Beach Junior College Friday and Rollins Saturday. On March 8, they will face the Valdosta State team.

HOW TO BE A BWOC

Ladies, let us talk frankly. The days of the college year dwindle down to a few. And some of you, let's face it, have not yet become BWOC's. Yes, I know, you've been busy with [illegible] and studying, but really, ladies, becoming a BWOC is easy if you'll only follow a few simple rules.

The first and most important step on the road to being a BWOC is [illegible]. But be very, very careful not to overdo it. I mean, any old girl is apt to [illegible] with a placard that says, 'HEY! LOOKIT ME!' But if you make such a horrid gaffe as [illegible] 'ZOWIE! LOOKIT ME!' This is as you can see, lends a whole new dimension of tone and dignity.

Once you have been noticed, it is no longer necessary to carry [illegible] you can make distinctive noises. If, for instance, every three or four minutes you say, 'Whippersnapper!' you cannot but stay fresh in the minds of onlookers.

Wardrobe, of course, is a vital accessory to the BWOC—[illegible] girl who wishes to remain out of jail. But to the BWOC clothes are not that just a decent cover they are, it is not too much to say, a way of life.

This spring the "little boy look" is all the rage on campus. [illegible] is wearing short pants, knee socks and [illegible]. But the BWOC is doing more. She has gone the whole hog in achieving little boyhood. She has frogs in her pockets, scabs on her knees, down on her upper lip, and is followed everywhere by a dog named Spot.

All this is a source of [illegible]. When evening falls and her date comes calling, the BWOC is the very picture of chic femininity in [illegible] basic black, relieved only by [illegible]. Her hair is expensively coiffed, with a [illegible] around the pony tail. Her [illegible] have been replaced by fashionable high [illegible], and she does not remove them until she gets to the movies.

Don't you make such a horrid gaffe.

After the movies, at the campus cafe, the BWOC undergoes her [illegible] test. To prove BWOC will never, never, never, order the entire menu. This is gluttony and can only cause one's date to plant. The true BWOC will [illegible] six or seven good entrees and then have nothing more till dessert. This is class and is the hallmark of the true BWOC.

Finally, the BWOC, upon being asked by the cigarette vendor which is the brand of her choice, will always reply, "Marlboro, of course!" For any girl knows that a Marlboro in one's hand stamps one instantly as a person of taste and discernment, as the [illegible] connoisseur of the finer, loftier pleasures. The Marlboro this vantage of unsurpassed, comes to you in [illegible] flip-top box or in soft packs that are soft, with a filter that filters and a flavor that is flavorful, in all fifty states of the United States. Truth.

Phi Mu's 'Adopt' Phillipine Boy Through Foster Parents' Plan, Inc.

Rodrigo ("Rudy") M. De Guzman, a 10 - year - old Philippine boy who wants to become a doctor, has been financially adopted by Phi Mu sorority through the Foster Parents' Plan, Inc.

In addition to contributing $15 monthly toward Rudy's support the Phi Mu's sent him toys and clothes at Christmas, explained Penny Hunter, who handles the group's correspondence with their new ward.

The boy has several brothers and sisters, including one 12-year-old sister who is the family bread-winner. All the children live with their bed-ridden grandmother.

The exchange of correspondence between Rodrigo and Phi Mu bridges the gap between the sorority and the children and gives the youngster the feeling of security and love he needs," said a sorority spokesman.

Foster Parent's Plan, which has helped to rehabilitate more than 76,000 children on this personal basis since its founding in 1937, is a non-sectarian, non-profit, independent, government-approved relief organization which provides financial assistance to children who are orphaned or otherwise made destitute for care and education.

"Adoption" through the plan is [illegible] but many donors, such as the Phi Mu's, show a personal interest in the child by establishing a regular correspondence.

Contributors must pledge to contribute $15 monthly for at least one year. The child receives $8 each month as an outright grant. The remainder goes for periodic food and new clothing packages, translation [illegible] medical services and [illegible]

Girl Watcher's Guide
Presented by Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes

The nudge is permitted when a beautiful girl is sighted in an unusual place or at an unusual time.

LESSON 3 - Concerning self-control

Although we believe that girl watching has it all over bird watching, we feel that these two hobbies do share one important characteristic. They are both genteel. They both respect the rights of the watched. A girl watcher who asks a beautiful stranger for her name and phone number is like a bird watcher who steals eggs. (If the stranger happens to have a pack of Pall Mall Famous Cigarettes, and you're dying for a good, natural smoke, you may break this rule.) Normally, the girl watcher's pleasure is warm, quiet and internal. However, there are cases when a discovery is so dazzling it must be shared. Such a case is illustrated above.

THE CLEVELAND PLAY HOUSE TOURING REPERTORY COMPANY WILL PRESENT "Hedda Gabler" in Westcott Auditorium next week. Shown above are Adale O'Brien and Richard Oberlin in a scene from the play.

Cleveland Players Present 'Gabler'

By LANA MURRAY
Flambeau Staff Writer

Florida State University audiences will get a chance to see actors of the oldest professional theatre in the United States perform next week, when the Cleveland Play House Touring Repertory Company plays in Westcott Auditorium.

Wednesday night, the troupe will present Henrik Ibsen's psychological drama, Hedda Gabler. Thursday night, they will perform George Bernard Shaw's romantic comedy Arms and the Man.

TICKETS

Tickets may be obtained today and next week at Westcott Ticket Office. Tickets for the public are $3.50 each. Students may get tickets by filling out IBM cards and presenting their ID cards.

Curtain time for the artist Series attractions will be 8:15 p.m. The side doors will be open for admission to this performance to diminish the congestion in the main lobby, Mrs. Kathryn Vernon, director of special events, said. She urged those students holding tickets for front seats to use these entrances.

At the Wednesday performance, Adale O'Brien will be cast in the role as Hedda Gabler, an aggressive woman who feels shackled by nineteenth - century morality. Bored with her kind but melegant husband (played by Richard Oberlin) she longs for a former admirer, a poetic young man named Eilert Lovborg (Alan Lindgren).

Testing her ability to maneuver the fate of another, she gets Lovborg drunk and sends him to a gay party. When he returns bewailing the loss of a priceless manuscript, she suggests suicide and gives him one of her pistols. Then the unscrupulous Hedda burns the manuscript which her husband has found.

However, the damaging evi - dence of the pistol implicates her in Lovborg's death, and there is no way out but to submit to a blackmailing judge, a solution so repulsive to the unyielding Hedda that she commits suicide.

The story is one of selfish individuality carried through to its better and tragic end. Ibsen, in his probings of emotions and destinies, revolutionized the world theatre and ushered in the twentieth Century drama of realism.

Thursday night, the company will present Shaw's gay comedy, Arms and the Man, forerunner of Oscar Strauss' musical, The Chocolate Soldier. The play is a satire attacking the romanticism of love and the glamour of war.

The 'hero' of the story is Captain Bluntschli, a soldier who prefers chocolates to bullets and believes that a soldier's first duty is to save his own skin. The only battle depicted is the battle of the boudoir.

BLURTS TRUTH

Capt Bluntschli's distinguished peculiarity is his habit of blurting out the truth, needless of its effect on himself or his companions.

After a rout in battle he seeks refuge in the boudoir of a beautiful young lady who is the daughter of an enemy officer. Touched by his plight, she feeds him chocolates, hides him from a searching party and helps him escape.

The gushing heroine is be - trothed to a pompous soldier who has just won a war by leading a cavalry charge against the enemy's machine guns. The truth is that his horse ran away with him and the foe had no ammunition. His lady love, however, is clouded by her proper, romantic illusions and she pictures him as being valiant.

Fake heroism and romanticisms give way at last to the realities of love, but not until many ro - rosanct illusions have been shattered.

Irish-born Shaw, winner of the Nobel Prize for literature, wrote such plays as Candida, Saint Joan, Major Barbara, The Devil's Disciple, Man and Superman, and Back to Methuselah. Repertory records of the Play House show a total of 19 Shaw plays in 42 sep... ...made productions ... more Shavian plays than have been produced by any other U. S. theatre.

THREE THEATRES

The Cleveland Play House is now in its 46th season of operation. In its three theatres operating simultaneously, it produces each season some 20 plays both classic and modern. A salaried staff of 70, half of them acting personnel, is in continuous activity from September through mid-May. There are, in addition, a selected group of apprentices and an Children's Theatre students.

This is the second season on the road for the touring company which last year toured 38 states. This year's tour of the Cleveland Play House will cover 46 states from coast to coast.

Drama critic Howard Taub - man of the New York Times said of the Cleveland Players: "They are sorcerers who know the simple timeless magic of greasepaint, costumes and the soaring imagination of the creative mind."

The students are Bob DeLack, Rowland Eves, Bonnie Freedman, Jane Hoagland, Claire Kemper, Tom Houston, Tom Crook,, Ann Kendall, Steve Whealton, John Riggins, Lynn Witherspoon and Leonard Himes.

Dr. Preu Discusses 'Progress' Concept

The concept of "progress" from the 18th century to the present time will be discussed by Dr. James Preu of the Florida State University English Dept. at the English Coffee Hour today.

"Quo Imusk." or Where Are We Going?" will be his topic at the 4 p.m. Coffee Hour in West- Dept. at the English Coffee Hour, is open to the public.

The Greeks and Romans did not believe in progress, according to Dr. Preu. Instead, he said, they saw history as a series of cycles in which a golden age was followed by a period of degeneration in endless succession.

"The idea of progress evolved very slowly," he said, "and was first clearly and unequivocally stated by Abbe de Saint-Pierre in 1737."

Dr. Preu will trace the modifications that have taken place in the concept of progress and discuss possible future changes in the concept.

Ethics And Morals Is Topic Of Tillich's Speech Tonight

By JIM SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

"Ethical Principles of Moral Action," will be Dr. Paul J. Tillich's subject for the University Lecture Series tonight at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium.

Dr. Tillich is one of the outstanding theologians of modern times and is known as a synthesizer of theology and religion. His publications include Love, Power and Justice, The New Being, The Courage to Be and The Theology of Culture. His works also include eight books in German and his latest work, Systematic Theology.

"Faith," says Dr. Tillich, "is the state of being ultimately concerned and religion is that which is of ultimate concern. The task of theology is mediation, mediation between the criterion of truth as it is manifest in the picture of Jesus as the Christ and the changing experiences of individuals and groups, their varying questions and their catagories of perceiving reality."

CREATIVE THINKING

Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr wrote that Dr. Tillich, is "by general consent the most creative thinker, whether he is dealing with the relation of religion to art, to psychoanalysis, to politics, and to education. He reveals in considering every subject the breadth and depth of his erudition and the wisdom of his judgments."

In one of his early works, The Religious Situation (1929), Dr. Tillich states that his concern is not with religion of the churches but with the faith they contain and witness in every aspect of the work and products of culture.

Dr. Tillich is compared with Karl Barth as one of the two greatest theologians in contemporary thought. Barth, it is said, belongs solidly in Orthodox tradition of Luther and Calvin and with Kant philosophically. Tillich stands clearly in the liberal theological tradition of Schleiermacher and Otto and with such idealists as Schelling and Hegel.

"Existentialism," says Dr. Tillich, "Is the desperate struggle to find a new meaning in a cultural situation in which two great traditions, the Christian and the Humanistic, have their comprehensive character and convincing power."

ABSOLUTE FAITH

In his book, Courage to Be, Dr. Tillich states the content of absolute faith is the "God above God." He rejects the God of theological theism, who remains bound to the subject - object structure of reality. A God who is understood as an object becomes an invincible tyrant who divests man of his subjectivity and freedom. Dr. Tillich says. He explains that courage in a man is a sign of his caring for something enough to decide and act despite opposition.

In his latest work, Systematic Theology, Dr. Tillich states that "man was created to be oriented by an ultimate concern; such a concern may be either for God or for some finite object." Dr. Tillich also concerns himself with philosophy in the contemporary approach to reality in which reality is the object; and theology as being concerned with the meaning of being for men.

"The sources of systematic theology are threefold," said Dr. Tillich. The first is the basic source, interpreted not infallibly but as [illegible] to historical events. The second is tradition. The third is the history of religion and culture, for herein are the means of expression and the formulations of the existential questions."

A Little Is Dangerous

TO THE EDITOR:

In reference to Mr. Robert [illegible] — last week's idea that the sun revolves about the earth is not a product of Einsteinian relativity. I guess from the center of mass coordinate system, an offshoot of quantum mechanics — or maybe Einstein never said that a motion is relative—he said that we can detect only relative motion. Thirdly, any current day astronomer will tell you that we are on a planet in a solar system which is located at the fringe of "the Milky Way" galaxy, which is member of an ever expanding finite and unbounded universe—that our planet is at the center of this is extremely improbable.

It is obvious that not only did Mr. Loftin miss the entire point of Mr. Sanchez's article on Teilich, but that it is he, and not Mr. Sanchez who is ignorant of the subject of physics.

A little knowledge is a dangerous thing Mr. Loftin.

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to say a few words in defense of the Phi Delts. I feel that the Phi Delts did an excellent job for the type of songs they used.

As for Campus Sing being turned into a Burlesque show and not keeping up to the standards of Phi Mu Alpha, I don't believe there is anything stated in that creed which says a group can't be orginal and amusing. For isn't the main purpose of Campus Sing enjoyment, whether serious or amusing.

Congratulations Phi Delts and Delts! In my opinion you both rate first place.

A Tribute

TO THE EDITOR:

This letter is written as a tribute to two women who have [illegible]

The many of us who know and admire Mrs. [illegible] the student Center, and Mrs. Bateman, the Social Director of the same establishment will never forget their kindness or their advice.

Mrs. Collins with her contin[illegible] smile and cheery remarks has been considered by all who know her — this writer included —as a close friend a problem solver, and a source of incentive. No matter how dreary the day or dismal the future her cheerful "good morning. Sugar how's the world treating you?" always makes things seem just a bit brighter—the future just a bit more promising. This writer couldn't begin to count the number of times she's acted as Cupid in bringing together two persons she thought well suited for one another.

Then there's Mrs. Bateman with her perpetual youth. With her warm personality and understanding outlook she makes all who come to her a little less homesick, a little less discontented and a lot more appreciative of the sometimes depressing surroundings.

I know I speak for the rest of the School of Business Graduate students as well as for countless other students, in saying that to you Mrs. Collins, and to you Mrs. Bateman thanks for making FSU more meaningful and enjoyable.

At Last, A Nat'l Norm For Squat-Thrusts

TO THE EDITOR:

Your recent article on Physical Fitness tests has brought great joy to my heart. For what can be more important than being able to [illegible] twenty pushups or one hundred situps? Give me a man who can do squat - thrusts any day. If he can do five squat - thrusts in five seconds, it proves something.

After all has not the entire human progress been a result of such? Did not Einstein develop his theory of relativity while squat - thrusting? It is a well-known fact that Beethoven wrote his symphonies while running the four - minute mile. The fact that such masters as Newton, Aristotle, Shakespeare, Goethe, Ghandi, Lincoln, and Bach were not expert football players should cause us to strike their names from history and assume such Physical Fitness proponents as Hitler and Mussolini.

It is thrilling to know that someone is at last developing a national norm for the squat-thrust. It has long been my contention that a National Squat - thrust norm is essential to the national well - being, more important even than defense, foreign aid, or spitton polishing.

Also it is necessary that we explore Physical Fitness as this has been decreed a segment of the Brave New Frontier, and unless we all start pushing our ups and thrusting our squats, Johnny is likely to get angry and send us drill instructors from the Marines to help us while he supervises by closed - circuit television from his rocking chair.

Editorial Policy

The editorial policy of the Flambeau is that any student can write and submit for publication editorials and columns. Guest columns are particularly welcome. Guest editorials of worthwhile merit are welcome. The editors must of course edit all such materials as may be necessary since final responsibility for all printed statements rests on them.

We particularly invite faculty and staff members to send us guest columns. We feel that it is as important that they participate in campus publications as it is that students participate.

Review

The Beloved Bjoerling

By CHRIS CLARKE

For many people the month of September, 1960, had no special significance. But for those of us who love song it marked a day of sadness that must have equalled the feeling of the music world when it was announced that Caruso would never sing again. Last September the greatest living lyric tenor, Jussi Bjoerling, died of a heart attack.

FORTUNATELY HE RECORDED often and through his records has left a legacy that will serve as a monument to his voice and art so long as men are able to listen. His recordings cover the years from 1936 until just before his death when he did Puccini's Madam Butterfly.

For almost twenty - five years his disks made him known all over the world as one of the greatest in his field. Now he is gone.

RECENTLY CAPITOL RECORDS issued a three record set of his work entitled The Beloved Bjoerling.

Those who wish to follow his vocal development can easily do by checking the dates of each cut. The control and economy of this man are (so long as there are his records) unsurpassed and rarely equaled. His lyric accomplishment is beyond question.

Volumes One and Three of the set are devoted to operatic with profound readings from Puccini, Verdi, Donizetti, and others. It is interesting to compare these to the same arias as sung by Caruso. The similarities are striking.

IT IS THE SECOND volume, however, that I feel contains the best surprise of all. [illegible] is all folk songs. Of the [illegible] songs in volume two, [illegible] are Italian, five are English, and the remaining eight are [illegible] Those who believe opera [illegible] to be "guys who wear [illegible] with cow horns sticking out of them and sing to fat [illegible] are in for a change of attitude when they hear these selections.

The Italian songs are [illegible] to many Americans. The Swedish numbers probably will be unfamiliar to others [illegible] were to this listener [illegible] them in this series. [illegible] a favorite. Every song [illegible] of the art. Not only are [illegible] excellently sung but the [illegible] have been made with [illegible] tion for the merit of the [illegible] self. The resulting [illegible] melody in composition and execution must be heard to be appreciated. If this is not [illegible] be grateful to anyone who [illegible] me how best to describe the [illegible] est lyric voice on wax.

Certainly there are variations in interpretation between Bjoerling and other tenors. This is always the case. But [illegible] mains that he is an artist of the highest caliber. It is hard not to feel that Shelley had [illegible] ing specifically in mind when he wrote:

"Music, when soft voices die, Vibrates in the memory."

"K" Ettes

They Did Not

TO THE EDITOR:

For those of you who read the article about the Egyptians and are wondering why a local club had to come in and usher at the campus movies, I would like to say they did not. This project was taken on by the Circle "K" Ettes, a service club open to coeds of Florida State University.

Ushering at the campus movies is only one of the many activities the Circle "K" Ettes have lined up for this semester. Some of their future projects are making Easter place mats for the hospital, taking a couple of underprivileged children to circus and helping out wherever [illegible] can.

Most students are not acquainted with Circle "K" Ettes. This might be due to the fact that we are relatively new on campus and are still in the process of being passed through senate.

You might have noticed Circle "K" Ettes last year when they helped usher at circus. Also among our list of past service projects were the selling of Senior B LAC KBooks during first semester registration, the distribution of the Pow Wow to the students, the making of christmas place mats for the patients at Tallahassee Memorial Hospital, and giving food to a needy Tallahassee family at Thanksgiving and Christmas. These are a few of the activities Circle "K" Ettes has taken part in and we hope only a short list of the many services we will be able to perform on campus and in Tallahassee.

Campus Chest Begins Spring Fund Drive For Contributions To Charitable Grops

The Campus Chest will begin its Spring Fund Drive in April for student contributions to charitable organizations.

Plans are being made to have this drive be a major means of collecting donations.

Undersecretary of Student Events, Betty Ann Eastridge, explained that "the Campus Chest operates just as the Community Chest or United Fund does on a larger scale." It is the coordinator of all charitable functions. Its purpose is to protect the student body from numerous fund drives of several charities by having one from which all donations to such organizations are made, she added.

Contributions to the Campus Chest are made by students by their attendance at fund - raising functions. Miss Eastridge explained that contributions from all fund - raising projects are required by Student Body Statues.

The Kappa Delta-Pi Kappa Phi Faculty Auction, the Kappa Sigma "carsmash" and the Alpha Gamma Delta - Phi Delta Theta Soapbox Derby are among the special projects sponsored by student organizations for the campus fund. The Sigma Kappa Variety Show, to be given March 9, will also be for the Campus Chest.

The Campus Chest Committee has raised money for charitable purposes in the past by providing entertainment for the students. The Dave Gardner show last year and the "Name That Tune" show presented this past Fall were both campus chest projects. "But there is a big cost in putting on shows of this size," Miss Eastridge said. She said there was some missunderstanding of the Campus Chest, and that if the planned solicitation drive receives enough student support, just one drive could be given a year and it would be simpler and less costly.

One half of the proceeds from student organization fund - raising projects are to be turned over to Campus Chest. This year the ruling will be enforced, she said.

Secretary of Finance Wayne Edwards requests student organizations to turn in financial statement forms of fund - raising projects to Sandy Hancock as soon as possible in order that their contribution may be determined. So far no organizations have done so Forms may be obtained from either Edwards or Miss Hancock.

The Campus Chest Committee, at the end of the year, determines the distribution of the collected funds. Donations are made on - campus and off - campus "Through the year, Campus Chest receives various appeals for donations from such organizations as the Heart Fund the International Student Organizations, Helen Keller Foundation for the Blind and the World University Service." Miss Eastridge explained. "We have heard a representative from the World University Service already and we will probably donate some to it," she added

Proceeds are also kept in the Campus Chest Emergency Fund. This money is appropriated by Dean of Students R R Oglesby with the consent of the Chairman of Campus Chest to give students assistance in emergency situations.

The Campus Fund Committee consists of sixteen members including the student body president and the undersecretary of student events, and must be approved by Dean Oglesby and the Senate. The faculty advisor is Acting Associate Dean of Students John J. Carey.

Le Treteau de Paris Presents Two French Plays Tuesday

By JOYCELYN WORD
Flambeau Feature Writer

Tuesday, Le Treteau de Paris will present two French plays at 8:15 p. m. in Opperman Hall. This is the first time a French acting troup has performed in Tallahassee

The troupe was brought here through the efforts of Dr. Jean Charron of the Modern Language Dept. with the help of members of the departments of speech, philosophy and humanities. Dr. Charron has known Jean De Rigault, the troup manager, for several years.

NO ADMISSION

The production is being financed by the Humanities Dept. There will be no admission charged.

The plays will be of interest to patrons of philosophy, literature and theater, as well as language. Both plays are excellent one hour dramas. An explanation of the plays in English, and the high quality of the acting will help make the plays meaningful even to those who do not understand French, according to Dr. Charron

The first play HUIS - CLOS, (No Exit) is by Jean - Paul Santre, the foremost existentialist of our time. It was first produced in Paris after World War II as a vehicle for the existentialist philosophy.

WORD GAMES

The second play La Cantatrice Chauve (The Bald Soprano) is an "anti - play" by Eugene Ionesco. He was inspired to write this satire on languages after he tried to learn "English in Seven Easy Lessons." Through "word games" in the conversation of the actors, he is able to show the number of things today that are accepted as absolute without argument or even discussion, leaving very little value in the language used to express oneself. The charactors are hilarious and diverting from the serious plot.

Reservation

The Florida State University Reservation will be open on weekends this month for those who wish to go canoeing or sailing and who have previously passed their tests. Hours will be from 1 to 5 p.m.

Tribe Misses Bid; It's Hard To Take

The Florida State Seminoles just received an "A" ... School of Nasty Breaks. This is, of course, a reference to the chance they had of getting a bid to the ...nal Invitational Tournament. A chance that fell ...ugh.

The Seminoles gave the impression at the season's beginning ...t and that they were, as they are, good NIT material. Some ...o hoped for an NCAA bid.

But nothing came of it. And that's bad, because FSU was good ...s year.

...ow good? Fancy the loss to top-ranked Ohio State with a ... margin than Florida's loss to Kentucky. Then consider the ... to Wisconsin, in a game that closed with a controversial ...t margin.

...e Wisconsin coach said FSU deserved to win that one, because ... as the Tribesmen do) that FSU's last field goal left the teams' ...ds before the buzzer.

Then Florida fell . . . on their home court for the first time ...5 games. Miami also bit the dust, but at Tallahassee in the first ... The Seminoles also split with Auburn.

Then followed a dry period, interrupted by occasional wins. ... Seminoles fell twice to Clemson—first in a double overtime ...e in which a deliberate Clemson foul sent injured Dave Fedor ...n the game.

Mid-Season Dry Period

...e Tribe fell to Furman in South Carolina, to Alabama in ...sa, and to Houston in Texas. Two of the losses were perhaps ...ondable, but few people try to alibi for the Alabama victory.

...t it's the season's close that makes it so hard to take, be... the Seminoles went on a can't-lose rampage, beating Florida ...and dropping Miami in Miami . . . they'd done this only once ...

Even Gov. C. Farris Bryant (a Florida grad) felt the Tribe ...ved a bid. After stoically watching his alma mater get ...ped up for the second time this season (third in the series), he ...t a telegram to the NIT officials, pointing out FSU's merits.

And then only last Monday night the Tribes gave a SRO perform... when they downed the University of Tampa.

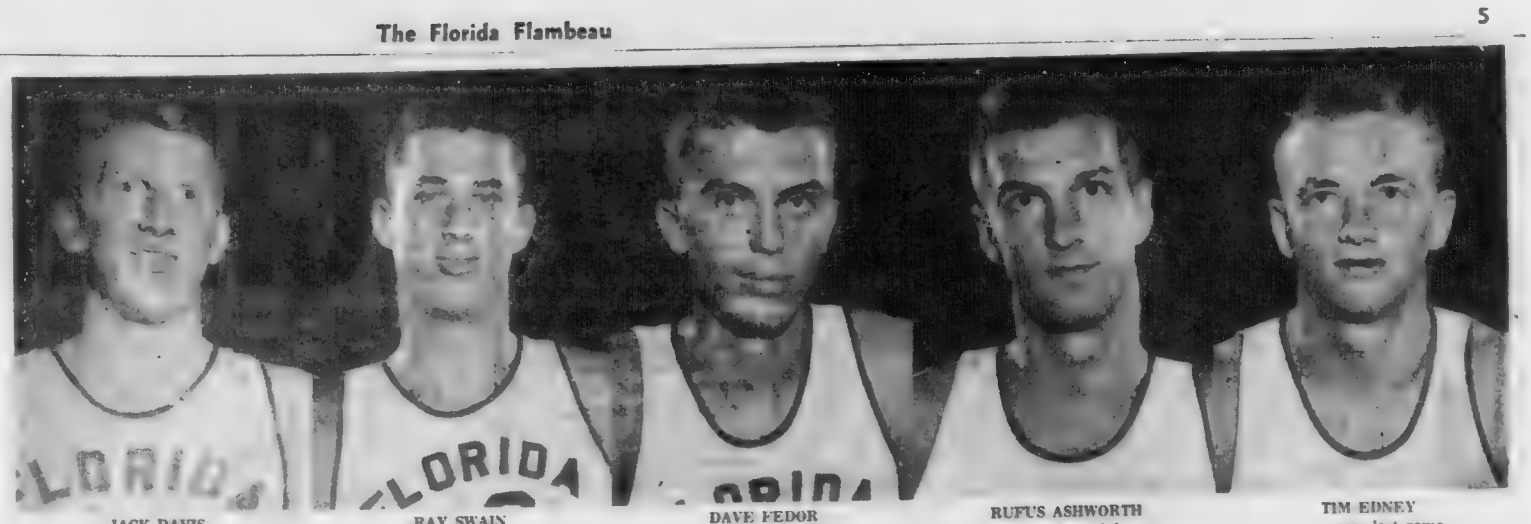
Things are unofficial at this time, but they may have:

–Captured the national field goal percentage title, an honor ...h they have held off and on this season.

–Set a NCAA record in field goal percentage. The Indians ...hed the nets for a 72.2 percentage during the game.

...d FSU broke its old scoring record of 116. They did ... tallying 123 markers.

...at's more, two players scored several points. Dave Fedor, the ...phyrhills product, was hitting 75 percent of his shots, while ... (The Swisher) Swain had to be satisfied with a mere 83 ...nt. The Swisher only hit 100 percent at the foul line.



...pessimist might say, "We shouldn't have blown a couple of ...ames."

...anna would say, "Well, we're still the best in the state . . . ... that, we fought Ohio State all the way for the field goal title."

...optimist has one thought, "If one of the runnersup in the ...ucks out, FSU will probably get called."

Tribe Loses Bid

The Crusaders of Holy Cross were given a berth in the National Invitational Tournament Wednesday, nearly killing FSU's hopes of playing in a post season tourney.

The bid came after the Holy Cross unit defeated Boston, 86-75, Tuesday night. If Boston College had won, Florida State would have been in a better position in the choosing, NIT officials told Neil Labar, FSU sports publicist.

Labar said the officials told him FSU had had more than a remote chance in the bidding. He added that there is still a slight possibility, almost nil, that FSU could play in the tournament. This would happen if a team dropped out.

Three more positions are open to the meet, but they will probably go to second place teams in three conferences. If one of those teams refuses a bid, FSU could get into the NIT.

The Holy Cross squad has had two advantages this season; the school has had a fairly easy schedule and it has had a friendly New York press.

Last year, the only southern college to attend the cage contests was the University of Miami.

Florida State became the undisputed 1961-62 King of Basketball of the state Monday night when it stomped the University of Tampa Spartans, 123-92.

The Seminoles, at first bothered by Tampa's full court press, turned the battle into a statistical game, cracking field goal and scoring marks.

The Tribesmen possibly set a NCAA record in the game by hitting a phenomenal 72-2 field goal percentage. They also dropped in a whopping 90 percent average during the second half, hitting 26 of 29 field goals.

The effort brought FSU' average from 49.7 to 50.9, which may be good enough to take the field goal title away from top ranked Ohio State.

On a winning binge, the Tribesmen captured their sixth straight game, a game in which they held a 33 point lead four times in the first half.

They also cracked their old scoring high of 115 points when Dale Reeves sank two free throws.

Two Seminoles, Dave Fedor (38) and Ray Swain (35), were yanked before they had a chance to break the Fedor-Durham record of 43 points in a game.

"We were not aware that they had scored so much," Assistant Coach Hugh Durham said, "when we found out how much they had, we stuck them back in. When it became evident they wouldn't break the record, we took them out again."

Fedor sent 15 of his 20 field goal attempts through the nets and eight out of nine of his free throws. Although Tampa won the rebounding battle, 46-33, Fedore topped the Spartans' best rebounders by taking 15 from the boards.

Swain hit 15 of 18 field goal attempts for a top-notch 83 percent average. He also sank five out of five at the charity line.

Allan Johnson, selected to the Associated Press All-SEC second team at guard this week, leads the University of Georgia's currently-hot basketball team against the Seminoles at 7:45 pm. in Tully Gymnasium.

The Bulldogs' little captain is averaging 17 points per game with 375 in 22 appearances (third best in Georgia annals).

Only Georgia season averages higher are 23.6 by Zippy Morroco in 1952-53 and 20.1 by Murphy McManus in 1954-55. Last year, Johnson averaged 14.9 with 388 points in 26 games.

Coach Red Lawson's men are now 8-13 overall, 3-10 in SEC play. They have won their last three games in a row: Mercer at Macon, Georgia Tech in Athens, and Vanderbilt in Athens.

The Bulldogs previously fell to FSU in Athens, 71-62.

THE FLORIDA STATE TENNIS TEAM WILL OPEN THEIR SEASON TODAY AGAINST NETters from Fort Eustis' (Va.) transportation unit. The two teams will also vie tomorrow on the FSU courts. The FSU team is as follows: (left to right) Mike Dyer, Bobby Berry, Coach Edward Cubbon, Assistant Coach Roger Nichols, Russ Hamilton, Paul Scarpa, Gordy Smith, Ed Fusula, and John Akir. Play Tryouts Begin Sunday

Tryouts for the final University Theatre production of the year, George Bernard Shaw's Too True to Be Good, will be held Sunday and Monday.

The tryouts will be in 301 History Bldg., Sunday at 2 p. m. and Monday at 7:30 p. m.

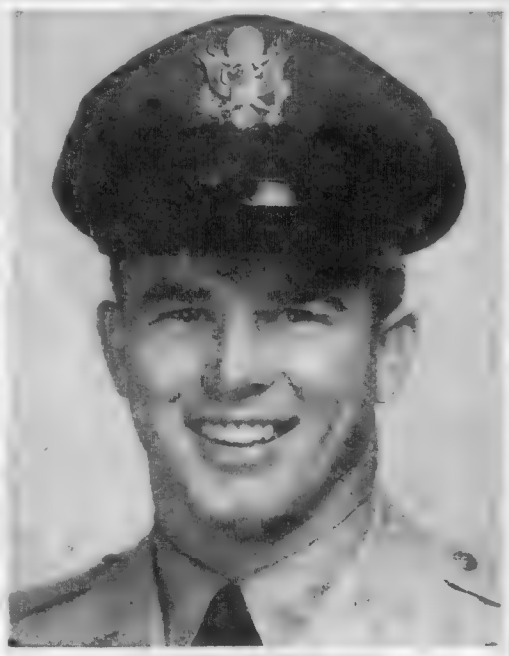
Ten characters, seven men and three women, are needed for the production, including one microbe. One beach scene requires actresses who can be "bathing beauties," although no knowledge of swimming is required, Director Arthur Dorlag said.

The play is one of Shaw's later and lesser known plays, Dr. Dorlag said. The play is a study in values, especially considered from young peoples' viewpoint, he said. "It is a comedy of ideas — a very unusual play — which defies synopsis," he added. "A statement of what it is about or what it says is only apt to confuse the issue," he concluded.

Dr. McCloskey Speaks Monday

"The American Ideology" will be the topic of Dr. Robert McCloskey, chairman of Harvard University Government Dept., when he speaks at the first of the series of government lectures, Monday.

Dr. McCloskey will speak at 8 p. m. in the Library Lecture Hall. He will also lead a graduate seminar in government Tuesday morning.



A native of Wisconsin, Dr. McCloskey received his B. A. in government from the University of Wisconsin and his Ph.D. from Harvard. He has served as head of the Government Dept. at Harvard since 1958.

Dr. McCloskey, who specializes in American Political Thought and American Constitutional Law, has published many books and magazine articles. His two most recent books are The American Supreme Court and Conservatism in an Age of Enterprise.

His lecture is the first of a series of eight lectures sponsored by the Florida State University Government Dept.

ROBERT CRENSHAW

ODK Holds Sale For Crenshaw Fund

During the next few weeks a sale of license plates, bearing the name of Florida State University, is being sponsored by Omicron Delta Kappa, national men's leadership honorary.

The blue and white license plates, the same colors as the present state licenses, are being given in exchange for a $1 contribution to the Robert Crenshaw Memorial Fund. They may be obtained at the University Bookstore or from any ODK member.

Robert Crenshaw, a former ODK member and FSU's 1955 Football Captain, was killed in a USAF jet plane crash in 1958. While at FSU, Crenshw earned four varsity football letters and was elected president of his junior and senior class. He distinguished himself also as a member of the FSU Hall of Fame, the Wesley Foundation, and the Alpha Tau Omega social fraternity.

In order that his name might remain known on the FSU campus and to provide a scholarship fund for worthy sophomore men, ODK distributes these license plates each year.

This year sales are reported by Jack Ascherl, ODK president, as ". . . going well." Ascherl encourages each student to obtain a license plate at the University Bookstore, from him at the Lambda Chi Alpha house, or from any other ODK member.

It is directed by Nicolas Bataille.

Ionesco is perhaps best known for Rhinoceros which is currently playing on Broadway after a successful run in London with Sir Lawrence Olivier in the leading role.

The two hour - long productions will be separated by a 15-minute intermission. Sets and costumes are designed by Jacques Noel, considered one of France's foremost stage designers. Dresses for the feminine roles in Huis-Clos are by the couturier Pierre Cardin.

Shaara Talks On Use Of Words In U. S.

By ERIK COLLINS
Flambeau Staff Writer

Words in America today are used all to frequently to impress rather than to inform or communicate.

This was the theme of English Instructor Michael Shaara as he spoke at the liberal forum, Sunday night in the Unitarian Chapel. Shaara, in his informal lecture, attempted to explain the differences in feeling between the European and the American toward the intellectual and the reasons behind this apparent difference in attitude.

He began by telling some of his adventures as he traveled through the backroads of Europe and the Middle-East. He related several experiences which impressed upon him how the writer, artist, or other creative mind is held in high esteem by other parts of the world and he then went on to give his reasons as to why this is not the case in the United States.

ANTI-INTELLECTUAL

"In America today we have the anti-intellectual spirit even among the writers such as Sinclair Lewis, William Faulkner and Upton Sinclair. America seems to be divided into three separate societies: the guy who is out for a buck, the scientist who is purely living for research, and the artist who disagrees with the other two. Each of the three groups seems to be moving farther and farther apart," the speaker continued.

Shaara went on, "most of the reasons why the so-called American egghead is held in such low esteem are his own fault. In this era of specialization, intellectuals are going down their own narrow road of self preservation.

The reason they are so distrusted by the common man is their tendency to talk over the heads of the average person, to confuse rather than inform."

INCOMPREHENSIBLE

According to Shaara, things which are basically simple are put into such incomprehensible terms that only a technical expert could figure them out. Even complex ideas, if put into workable English, could be understood without a great deal of effort, he added.

"Unless the intellectual overcomes this problem of linguistics, he is in reality, only making so much educated noise. Education and intelligence are two different things. The intellectual can not continue to hide himself from the people, to shirk responsibilities, or he and America will continue to get into deeper and deeper trouble," he concluded.

International Club

The International Club will meet Friday evening at the Tallahassee Junior Museum on Lake Bradford Road.

A bus will leave from in front of Bryan Hall at 7:30 p.m. for those without transportation to the museum.

Several folksongs from different lands are planned for entertainment.

'Ethical Principles Of Moral Action' Is Topic Of Dr. Paul Tillich's Talk

BY JIM SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

"A moral act is not an act of obedience to a law," said Dr. Paul Tillich, "it is an act in which we actualize our potentialities or our essential nature." Dr. Tillich prepared lecture on "Ethical Principles of Moral Action," Monday night Dr.Tillich explained how "moral" has lost its standard and meaning from its original [illegible] in the 18th century Puritan and the enlightenment [illegible] to transform moralism and [illegible] with the loose accusation related only to the sexual [illegible].

While lecturing in Hamburg, Germany, friends asked him to translate the word 'moral' with the German connotation 'ethics.' Since the two words were being used simultaneously as with the same meaning, Dr. Tillich defined ethics as the science of customs and morals as the actual behavior of men. Men must know the ethical principles behind a moral act. Dr. Tillich explained that today, actions are based on what "ought to be." This "ought-to-be" [illegible] other actions determined by accepted ethical theory. The "ought to be" cuts into situations being from another dimension.

Dr. Tillich places this "ought-to-be" in two categories of the unconditional and the conditional. The unconditional is the Kantian categorical If and the conditional is the categorical, absolute. Unconditional experiences leave one with consequences of acting by accepted theories while conditional experiences bring one into the moral imperitive of developing the full person.

MORAL IMPERATIVE

The moral imperitive of conditional oughtness is essentially and actually the fulfilling of man's destiny. If man does not fulfill his destiny by following the moral imperative he is in danger of self destruction by not asking the question of the meaning of reason, he asserted. If man produces his full potentialities he arrives at the moral imperative. "Man today," he said "is separated from his essential being.

The imperative in paradise is the 'Thou Shalt not' which estranges him from dreaming. Man becomes what he is by acting in his true nature, fulfilling his destiny."

He further explained that a moral act is not an obedience to outside influences or laws but that it is one in which man actualizes his essential nature. An anti-moral act is something done by a person controlled by his passions, desires, fears and anxieties instead of his reason, Dr. Tillich stressed. "Free is he who reacts to the stimuli and not from desire, but with the whole centered self," he said.

MAN SEPARATED

Man has become separated from his essential being and the symbol of essential nature has become existence of paradise, he asserted. "Essential being is in conflict with our actual being according to the potentialities of the awareness of conscience," he said. "Conscience is not the voice of God because it changes transhistorically as culture changes. Conscience is duty as duty to yourself. It is the silent attentive self versus the unattentive self."

In another area of his lecture, Dr. Tillich explained what he called Ethical Relativism and Relative Action. The ethical relativity has many interactions on all classes of society and cultures and takes many forms as each of these interprets its own goals end desires. "The natural laws of nature and men," he said, "are based on the moral actions found in natural laws of justice, love and wisdom." He explained further that ethics today, have taken on many forms and what has become acceptable in one society is not acceptable in another and vice-versa.

THREE LAWS

The three natural laws of love, justice and wisdom must operate as the center of the self or as a real person. Dr. Tillich stated. Justice carries on between a person to person relationship as each person realizes exactly what he is.

Love has not lost its power as a word. Its expression and meaning are lost. It has suffered as a word of the spirit. Its real meaning is the urge for the re-union of the separated, he asserted.

Love without justice is sentimentality which makes it become useless, he added. For love to fulfill its full meaning it must remove the sentimentality and become more moveable than any other spiritual reality, Dr. Tillich said. In order for a person to become re-united with love and justice he must first be a real person and must achieve this by learning to live in solitude, he explained. The fear of solitude leaves the self to fall on conventional morals, he added. A moral action is a person to person relationship based on the

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the student body as a whole or the administration of Florida State University. Editorials represent only the opinions of staff members and the initials of the writer following the editorial.

More Are Caught

Florida State University adopted, almost two years ago, one of the most talked about and denounced social regulations ever to hit this campus. It was the so-called "anti-drinking" bill, which allowed coeds over 21 years of age to drink as long as they 1) do not "encourage" under-age students to drink, 2) do not bring alcohol on campus, thereby violating a state law, and 3) remain "ladylike" in their behavior.

WHEN THE BILL was accepted, there were many skeptics among the student body as well as the administration who felt that the new leniency would lead to wholesale violations of the drinking rule among younger women and in general lower the university standards.

Now that several semesters have passed, we can re-examine this bill and its effects.

SOME PEOPLE CLAIM that the recent increase in drinking cases before [illegible] indicates that this rule has indeed lowered coed's standards and made them more likely to accept a drink, even before they reach voting age.

IF MORE CASES are being reported, it must follow that more students are doing the reporting, for residence counselors cannot hold "breath checks" every night. Why should students, now that social infractions are not included in the Honor Code, be more willing than previously to help enforce a regulation?

While university regulations conflicted with state laws, students found it difficult to accept the school's verdict. Coeds realize, however, that the university cannot allow behavior which is contrary to Florida laws, and they recognize the rule as it now stands as an acceptable one.

THEY ARE THEREFORE willing to abide by it and to see offenders punished. Many girls who formerly drank illegally have stopped since this rule was passed, if for no reason other than that they don't want to "mess it up" for themselves by getting caught now when they will be "legal" in a few months.

The results from the "anti-drinking" bill should prove that students are not simply rebelious anarchists, trying to do away with all restrictions. When a regulation is practical and within reason, most of them will obey and help enforce it.

Shrewd Or Shrewish

If the exhibition of boorishness following Liberal Forum Sunday night was an example of how to succeed like a campus intellectual, most of us are better off being dumb.

TO GET MATTERS OFF to a poor start, the questioners, who soon became nothing but hecklers, prefaced their remarks with such choice items as references to the speakers "fan clubs," "following," and such.

Speaker Mike Shaara, having expressed a view that the domestic intellectual has been shirking his responsibility, was questioned by persons who ordinarily might be classed as shrewd and sharp. Sunday night they could have been labeled shrews and carp.

TO DISAGREE AND DEBATE with the scheduled speaker is apparently half the fun of Liberal Forum. However, even those with whom you disagree are due some small courtesies, if only as a matter of form.

Certainly the disgusting aspect was that the debate was tainted by lingoistic leanings and brought forth such "intellectual" comments as "let them learn French," as an answer to the speakers criticism of the use of foreign words where a more generally understood English expression would suffice.

WORSE, THE OBVIOUS animosity exhibited towards the speaker was not based on any point of argument in the prepared talk, but on a completely irrelevant anecdote related in the course of the talk. That this was so was made quite clear before the meet dissolved in communal coffee.

Contrary to the cold-fish "intellectual" attitude of owing nothing to anyone but themselves, we would disagree. We would disagree if only to the extent of saying they owe themselves the respect they've earned by their own hard work whether they choose to see that work as duty or whatever.

Even we mundane nobodies enrolled here can see where an argument of cold reason collapses around an emotional splinter.

Did Tillich Believe?

By JIM SMITH

Dr. Paul Tillich's visit to campus the last week-end was a unique event in the history of Christian thought. Dr. Tillich, who has been called "the most influential living theologian" and "the greatest contemporary interpreter of being and of the Christian symbols" is one of the Christian world's most eminent religious leaders.

IF ONE IS UNFAMILIAR with Dr. Tillich's philosophy, the realization of his thought [illegible] This experience is felt whether he be of strict dogmatic following or of a more liberal minded viewpoint.

The [illegible] of Dr. Tillich show that he is concerned with the revolution of [illegible] doctrine [illegible] to its present day connotations which he calls "Churchianity." His adversary, Dr. Karl Barth, is a strict adherant to accepted orthodox [illegible] but believes that man should have the right to deviate from the accepted [illegible]. The [illegible] two men on opposite sides of the religious fence with Dr. Tillich steadfastly condemning conventional [illegible] standard dogma.

A SHOCKED REACTION would probably accompany a person who has been raised in strict [illegible] when [illegible] would be blended with blasphemous accusations. On the other [illegible] fence, a person with a questioning mind would entertain the new approach to the total religious questions that have not withstood the barrage of 20th Century skepticism.

Dr. Tillich predicts the end of the Protestant Era as he bears witness to the crumblings that its dogma has undergone in the past century. If this is correct then it is up to the new liberal theologians to prepare man to cope with today's, and more importantly, tomorrows complex worldly and individual problems.

IF THE NEW LIBERAL thought can be accepted to comfort many troubled soul in an uncomfortable world and if the new thought is accepted the followers would most naturally be on the shoulders of youth. It is a known fact that youth is more prone to follow and start new trends that will help answer and solve future problems for themselves and their children. The oldsters will be perfectly happy to travel along their own paths that they accepted when they were young.

Chaplain Carey's introduction of Dr. Tillich praised him as a man of worldly status who has traveled [illegible] and written extensively. As the old gentleman strode to the lectern he extracted from his inside coat pocket a prepared manuscript. He put on his glasses and proceeded to read with a take it or leave it attitude. His speech was slow and his voice trailed on in a dull monotonous tone. His audience had to be exceptionally well rested in order to be able to follow logically his point by point deliberation.

IT WILL PROBABLY be said that it is not how he said it but what he said that will be the more important aspects of his text. This is true, but his un-enthusiastic air for his subject left some of his future advocates with the impression that the good Dr. did not believe in what he was preaching.

Watch Russia In Coming Weeks

The meeting of the Central Committee of the Soviet Communist Party, which began yesterday, brings to mind a speech made at the Student Editor's Conference in New York City by Mr. Harrison Salisbury.

Salisbury, a tall, wiry, grey-headed man who wears old-fashioned glasses perched on his angular nose, has covered the Soviet Union for the New York Times off-and-on since the Bolshevik Revolution. He has followed the course of the rise of Communism in the U.S.S.R. since its conception and speaks firmly and authoritatively on the subject.

He anticipates a tumultuous struggle shortly.

And the Party confab going on now may be the battleground for a telling ideology struggle between those Soviet Communists who lean to the doctrines as espoused by Chairman Nikita Khrushchev and those who still cling firmly to the techniques of dead dictator Joseph Stalin.

• • • • • •

Salisbury explained that there were three groups, or cliques, within the Soviet Communist Party at present time.

There are those who were left over from the iron-fisted rule of Stalin. These men do not dare openly contest the "loosening" policies of Khrushchev, but privately they shake their heads and reminisce about the days when it was "so-much easier" to do it Stalin's way. Among themselves, they long for a return to the totalitarianism of Stalin.

On the opposite pole is the younger group. They applaud any easing of the reins by Khrushchev and press for more consumers goods, more freedom, and more westernization. The vigorous young Soviets revile Stalin and Stalin's techniques and shudder at the prospect at growing nearer to Mao Tse-Tung and the Communist Chinese.

In the middle are the young businessmen—the men who will ultimately decide the course of Soviet action. These men are a new group of Communists and their strength or inclination can not be accurately judged. Some of these men own private property; some are employees of the state. These men can be accurately compared to our own middle class suburbanites to a marked degree.

"With these groups vying among each other," Salisbury commented, "the Soviet Union is faced with the choice of drawing closer to the Chinese or moving closer to the West."

• • • • • •

The Communists, just like the West, are having their problems. Mao Tse-Tung is rattling the warheads and talking of war as he has been for years. The Russians shy away from this prospect and talk of coexistence and taking over the United States by peaceful means.

Khrushchev got tough in Berlin and set a deadline for the U.S. to meet. This pleased the Stalinists, the Chinese, and the East Berliners. But Kennedy and the United States did not flinch. The President called Khrushchev with troop call-ups and the Russians conveniently forgot about the deadline.

Those Americans who would attempt to panic their countrymen with scare stories depicting the Soviets as supermen could take lesson in this. They are obviously human too.

Salisbury feels that the dye is set and that Russia is too far inclined toward western economy and western culture to move closer to the China. He anticipates no immediate break in U.S.S.R.-Communist China relations but predicts a gradual widening of the breach between the nations.

The internal interaction going on in the Soviet Union now will determine this. Americans should, and will, watch Russia closely in the coming weeks.

Coma Moves Off-Campus

By LESLIE POWELL

Cona wheeled her bike down the sedate streets of FSU, but oddly enough today she looked particularly grim. Her pony tail stood straight up behind her head, giving her the appearance of an upended broom.

PEDDLING MADLY, she raced up to the Soda Shop steps, banked sharply to the left and parked her cast iron wheel beside the golden urn.

Clutching her heart, she staggered to the stacked cups, picked up one with "Help, I'm being held prisoner in the Bursar's Office," inked across the bottom, filled it with coffee and rolled her eyes mournfully at Theo, managing somehow to squeeze a couple of thin tears out between the eye shadow.

"Gasp," she quoted at him. "Gasp, gasp, gasp."

"WHOT," THEO MUTTERED, "is the matter with you? You somekinda new kinda nut or something?"

"Gasp," Coma gasped. "Can't you se I'm sic, sic, sic, filly? Can't you see my nerves all doing squat - thrusts way above the national norms as established by the nuclear reactor actuators?

"Look me in the eyes, Theo, all three of them, and tell me don't you think I need to live off campus? Gasp. My heart. Gasp. My liver. My lights. My pablum count must be way above the metrecal count. Look at my complexion, like death warmed over. Off, I gotta get off. Gotta get off . . ." she moaned, keeling over in a faint, but careful to keep an eye on the tumult arising thereabouts. The one pick-pocket that tried to take tadvantage of her collapse suffered a kicked shin.

SHORTLY THEREAFTER Coma, armed with affidavits from doctors, lawyers, and a number of leading local palmists, invaded the deans office seeking release from dormlife. Already the Pope had called long distance to make a personal plea on her behalf.

So, whth good fortune and freshened breath in her favor, Coma was duly given leave to go off campus. She did with verve. She rented a good christian firetrap, installed a couple of packing crates and her best friend's boy friend and lived a happy life amidst coffe grounds, pet roaches too big to chase away, a lovely view of several beat up garbage cans and any number of beat up fellow students.

AND COMA WOULD arrive mornings humming "hic, hic, hic." Thereafter, those in the wake of her wobbly bike would say: "Ah ha, there goes the girl on the giddy schwinn."

Abolish The Air Force?

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

The Air Force should be abolished. So says Admiral Hyman Rickover, and for once the good Admiral, who sometimes strays far afield to criticize education, appears to be right. It does not mean, of course, that the United States is to forfeit its' air power. Rather it means that it is becoming obvious that no useful purpose is served by having the Air Force as a separate branch of the armed forces.

THE AIR FORCE has two major roles. First there is the strategic function through which the retaliatory power of long-range bombers and missiles serves as a deterrent to aggression. In its other role, the Air Force supports ground forces for transporting troops and supplies, and by providing tactical air cover.

It has long been apparent to impartial observers that the Air Force has failed in its second mission, the support of ground forces. In Korea Army reports indicate that liaison was poor. Air support was sketchy and clumsy. At times, friendly troops were attacked by mistake. Fortunately there was generally little air activity by the enemy. Nevertheless it was apparent that efficiency would have been much greater had the tactical air support come from with the Army itself.

IN FACT, BECAUSE of poor Air Force support, the Army has been busy creating its own air forces. Currently the Army has almost 7,000 planes, mostly helicopters. Nevertheless great benefits might come from incorporating into the Army those parts of the Air Force now devoted to the support of ground forces.

If this were done, the Air Force would then consist only of the strategic elements. Although this force might currently be large enough for its existence as a separate service to be rationalized, the obsolesence of manned bombers indicates that this condition will not persist. The cancellation of the B-70 program is the first sign that bombers are giving way to missiles. Certainly it would be difficult to justify a separate branch of the service simply to fire missiles, which are, after all, merely an extension of artillery. Thus it would seem that the strategic role of the Air Force should be divided between the Army and the Navy, with the consequent elimination of the Air Force.

THE AIR FORCE is ending. For the past fifteen years that branch has been riding high, wide and handsome. Air Force propagandists from Arthur Godfrey to James Stewart to Steve Canyon lulled the American people into accepting a dangerously false strategic concept. The joint chiefs of staff under Eisenhower were dominated by Air Force cliques. Secretary of Defense Wilson, the most incompetent civilian administrator of the armed forces since 1812, permitted the Army and Marine Corps to reach their lowest ebb. During this era the Air Force wasted more money than the other branches of the service spent. The Air Force Academy turned into a gigantic boondoggle. Billions were spent on planes which were obsolete before they got into the air. The Air Force wasted precious money and time trying to duplicate the missile achievements of Von Braun's Army team. When it succeed, it had its stooge, Secretary of Defense Wilson, place a limit upon the range of Army rockets. Had it not been for the [illegible] sible actions of the Air Force during this period the United States would have been first in space.

Fortunately, the new administration has a more realistic defense policy. Maxwell Taylor is now the president's chief military advisor. An Army General, Lemnitzer, is head of the Joint Chiefs of staff. The Army has been strengthened. A striking force has been created under the command of an Army general. But the Air Force will continue its wasteful propaganda programs in favor of obsolete ideas as long as it exists as a separate service. That is why the Air Force should be abolished.

Proposed Coalition

TO THE EDITOR:

The recent uproar over the movie "Operation Abolition" growing out of an attack on Project Awake, has convinced me that many liberals would align all conservatives together. This is a case of guilt by association which they condemn when used by the HUAC, but do not hesitate to use themselves.

There are many variations of belief on the right, as I imagine there are on the left. Some are concerned over the U. N., and are militantly anti - Communistist. These are the ones who are given the publicity.

Others are concerned over the economic and social problems. They fear the end of a free market economy and are against the welfare state, with its philosophy of supporting one "from the cradle to the grave." They feel, regardless of that F D R said, that there is no freedom in having freedom from want, or freedom from fear, etc. There is no freedom, when all there is is a state guarantee that he shall not want under any circumstances, even if he be too lazy to do anything about it.

Yet others are concerned over the basic athetism of the day, and the decline of morals.

This week a new conservative group is being formed. The group will be affiliated with the Young Americans for Freedom, and the Inter - Collegiate Society of Individualists. Both are given much praise in Stanford Evan's Revolt on the Campus. Backers of YAF, include Senators Holland, Goldwater, and Tower, Prof. Russell Kirk, and the editor of the National Review, Mr. William Bukley.

The local group will embrace the tenets of both national groups — study and action. From the basic belief of the sovereignty of the individual as a child of God, comes the other points in the basic purpose of the organization as expressed in the Saron statement.

Those helping in the formation of the group might be called intellectuals, for regardless of what certain liberals think they do not have a monopoly of brains and talent. Among the starters is a member of the College Bowl team, several graduate students and several others who are in the honors program.

While at times it may be anti-this or that, it is to be hoped that the group will be a constructive group, proposing more than it opposes.

In no way is this group affiliated with any other [illegible] campus, despite the fact that many are members of Young Republicans, Young Democrats, Political Union, Project Awake, etc.

The first meeting will be in Longmire Auditorium at 7:30 Wednesday.

Most, Best

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to compliment Senator Joedy Smith's column regarding the House Un-American Activities Committee in the Friday Flambeau.

It is one of the most pertinent, clearly written and best organized columns I have read in the Flambeau in four years.

MYGNON CHAMPION
Women's Vice President

Dedicated Non-Writer

TO THE EDITOR:

Although a dedicated non-writer to the editor, I feel compelled to comment on Mr. Dobson's column of February 23. My comment is from the viewpoint of a conservative increasingly outraged at the fashion in which this old and honorable term is misused in current political polemics. Although inadequately, I think the conservative viewpoint might be summarized in one sentence in this fashion. The real conservative, accepting that man is equally a creature of reason and emotion, realizes that from the past we have inherited much of value but that we live in a present and must face a future. He regards the existence of the twentieth century as the result of normal chronological development not as the result of a sinister plot by satanic forces of evil.

In the words of Edmund Burke, he sees society as "a partnership not only between those who are living, but between those who are living, those who are dead, and those who are to be born." With this deep respect for both the material and spiritual nature of man, he does not automatically assume that only he and a small group of true believers have a monopoly on truth and that any opposition or even disagreement constitutes outright subversion and treason. By conscience and conviction he os obligated to bear testimony equally against the radicals of the left and of the right.

There are many points on which I am in sharp disagreement with "Liberal propagandists." But Mr. Dobson is neither fair nor accurate in the comments made in his final paragraph. Payment tribute to what he regards as apparently the awesomely [illegible] notic powers of this group, he charges that the "Liberal propagandists, however they may be, "have lulled us into the false notion that there is no real danger to this country from the left, it is all from the right." Personally I have yet to meet an "Liberal" who holds this viewpoint. Mr. Dobson missed the whole point of what is not or a "Liberal" but a thinking conservative viewpoints.

It is naive not to realize that our society is engaged in a grim struggle for existence. But the threat to our heritage of constitutional democracy is primarily an international not an internal one. Long before the existence of the Soviet Union there existed a far more flourishing [illegible] within the United States than there is today, without constituting any serious threat. It is an historical irony that for many years such prominent figures of the American "left" as Norman Thomas carried on a courageous and largely ignored struggle against the threat of "communist menace" which they realized long before many of those who are most shrilly vehement about it now. One may disagree strongly with the viewpoint of the non-communist left, but to lump them as part of the communist conspiracy is to give aid and comfort to the enemy.

As urged by J. Edgar Hoover in his recent Bar Association article, we need "a sane realistic understanding of the facts." I see little concern for this in much of current anti-communist propaganda, rather the emphasis is placed on the cheaply sensational and partisanly political. So-called "apathy" may well represent a shrewdly realistic approach both of motive and content rather than, in terms of a "devil theory" of history, being caused by the machinations of a sinister group. Let us all, as dedicated and conscientious good Americans, defend our constitutional democracy against subversion from any source but with realistic understanding, calmness of mind, and strength of spirit.

Other runnersup were the Georgia Military Academy, Dade County Junior College, the Citadel, the University of Georgia, and the Atlanta YMCA.

FSU Bops Georgia In Finale

By MEL KELLER

There were 99 points on the scoreboard, and the seconds on the clock were few. With the crowd screaming for 100, a Seminole pushed one at the board from about 20 feet out. It hit the rim and bounced off. Dale Reeves pushed the ball up again and it bounced, twirled indecisively, and finally fell through the netting, as the crowd went wild at the third 100 this season.

Thus ended Florida State's final basketball game of the season, and thus ended the college cage careers of five FSU seniors, as the Seminoles swamped the Georgia Bulldogs, 101-69.

For the five seniors, Dave Fedor, Ray Swain, Jack Davis, Rufus Ashworth, and Tim Edney, it was a night of records, but the type found in scrap books and not scoring books.

Fedor ran his lifetime record to 1,453 points, which snatched the old laurels away from Ham Werneke, who set his scoring high in four years of playing a year more than Fedor.

After the half, Fedor owned 19 of the Seminoles' points and the coach could have let him shoot for the Fedor - Durham high of 43. But instead, Ray Swain and Jack Davis were allowed to shoot for personal goals. Leading by 25 points, the Seminoles began feeding Swain, who eventually slapped in 31 points. This was good enough for a 1,000 point career total.

Then attention turned to Davis, who pushed in 12 points for a career total of 500 points.

After Edney hit two free throws, Coach Bud Kennedy began bringing down the curtain on his best team ever.

Moments later, Ashworth hit a jumper from the corner, and, as did Edney moments before, left the court to the applause of the Seminole fans.

Fedor dribbled down the court and stopped near the keyhole. He hesitated and the crowd hollered, "Shoot!" The 6-6 foot senior, who was a double threat because of his ability to hit under or far from the basket, shot from about 20 feet out and the ball neatly sliced the nets.

Thus, the cager who had on the same day been named to the AP All American honorable mention list for the third straight year, and who has been called "the best all around player in FSU history, left the court for the last time for his collegiate career.

The crowd gave him a standing ovation, which would have lasted longer, if the refs hadn't ordered play to continue.

Swain, FSU's most efficient field goal shooter ever, got his 31st point and also left to a standing ovation. Davis pushed in a layup, and properly, the spark-plug was the last senior "to burn out."

And so ended the final appearance of the team that had the distinction of beating Kentucky on its home court, a feat that was acclaimed as the "most outstanding ever performed by an FSU basketball team."

FSU was led by Swain's 31 and Fedor's 25 points. Other double figure scorers were Dale Ricketts (11), Davis (12), and Charlie Long 12.

The team hit 55.7 per cent from the field to take the national field goal title away from Ohio State. The Seminoles ended the season with a final field goal percentage of 51.2, and is almost sure to be recognized as the hottest shooting quintet in the nation.

The University of Georgia was led by senior Allan Johnson (32), Carlton Gill (34) and George Adams (11).

The Bulldogs closed their season by falling to the University of Florida, 105-78. Their season record was 8-16. The Dogs fell to the Seminoles in an earlier match this season.

FROSH FALL

The FSU freshman fell for the third time this season as the Albany (Ga.) Marines surged, 69-63, in a preliminary bout before the varsity game.

Jerry Shirley of Mobile spearheaded the Seminoles with 19 points, while Ross Winter hit for 14 points. Cal Huge dropped in 11 points along with Tom Lunt.

SOCCER CLUB SLATED

An organizational meeting will be held at 4 pm. Wednesday in Room 206 of Tully Gymnasium for all male students interested in learning to play soccer. Previous experience is not needed, and the club is open to all men.

Mermen Cop 19th

Florida State swimmers won their 19th straight dual meet, defeating East Carolina College, 56-39. It was the last dual home meet for the undefeated tankers, who wind up their season Saturday in Gainesville against the powerful Gators.

The Tribe was led by senior Tommy Mew, who grabbed the 220 freestyle in 2:21.2 and swam a lap of the record - smashing 400 freestyle relay event.

Other members of the relay team, which set a school and pool record at 3:29.1, were Lee Bransford, Paul Thompson, and Dale Smith.

Paul Thomoson, who appears determined to leave many records behind him when he graduates this year, set a school, pool and meet record in the 440 freestyle at 4:32.4.

Tom Lasanta took the 50 freestyle in :24.6 and 100 freestyle in :54.1, while Mark Owen came in first in the diving.

Cindermen Face 'Canes Mar. 10

By CHARLES INTRIAGO
Flambeau Sports Writer

Head Coach Mike Long sees a more mature and ripened squad" after the Tribe's recent victory in the Memphis Indoor Track Carnival.

The Seminoles will open their dual meet season March 10 against the University of Miami Hurricanes in what promises to be as most Hurricane - Seminole encounters, interesting and down to the wire.

Long explains that intrastate rivalries are something one can't predict no matter what the previous scores were.

"Our losses were not heavy through graduation," Long said.

FSU's forte this season is the middle distance races with co-captain Quentil Till, Bill Davis, and John Brocksmith handling the large part of the relays. The team's apparent weakness seems to be the long distance races; this is due to the fact that there are no returning veterans for these events.

After tthe Miami tussle, co-captains Till and Jeff Clark will spearhead the team against Furman, South Carolina, and LSU in separate dual meets. Furman, which is one of the better teams in the South, promises to give the Tribe a run for its money March 16.

Linkers Face UF

The Florida State University golf team opened its season yesterday in a home game against the University of Florida, but results were not available at press-time.

FSU, beginning its fifth season, under coach Bill Odencal, will compete against Florida, Auburn, and Georgia Tech of the Southeastern Conference.

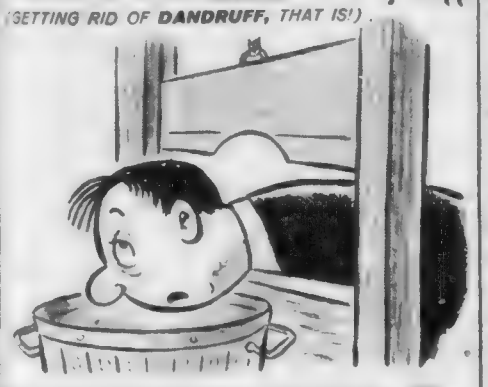
The Tribesmen will also play such independents as Springfield, Rollins, Navy, Jacksonville, Miami, Florida Southern and Stetson.

Five lettermen were lost from last year's team, which had a 15-3 record, but four lettermen will be returning. Seminoles who were lost include co-captains Dick Dunlap, Downing Gray, John and Rock Fraleigh, and Frank Malara. Returning Tribesmen include Bryan Bergerson, Chuck Keating, Manny Nordon, and Dave Onstad.

The schedule

March 5 Florida at Tallahassee, 15-17 Florida Intercollegiate at Ocala, 19 Georgia Tech, Springfield and Rollins at Tallahassee, 20 Rollins and Springfield at Tallahassee, 21 Springfield at Tallahassee, 23-24—Navy, Florida, Jacksonville and Jacksonville Navy at Jacksonville, 29-31—Houston All-American Intercollegiate Invitational at Houston.

April 12-13—Miami, Florida Southern, Stetson, Rollins, and Florida at Orlando, 17—Turner AFB at Albany, Ga., 18—Auburn at Tallahassee, 27—Florida at Gainesville.



May 3-5—Southeastern Conference Intercollegiate at Auburn, Ga., 10—Auburn and Alabama at Auburn, Ala.

Sign up for Advanced Army ROTC...

And right away, you'll feel better about your Military Obligation...

Because you know, as an officer, your military service will be a stimulating and rewarding experience. You will enjoy the pay, the prestige, the traditional privileges of an officer...

your military service can pay off handsomely in later life. For example, ROTC can be tremendously helpful when a man starts his climb up the civilian ladder. Success in the executive areas of business and industry comes earlier and more substantially to the man who can lead. Few are born leaders; but leadership can be learned. And Advanced ROTC is a great place to learn it...

you will be contributing to the limit of your potentialities in one of the biggest jobs we face today . . . you can help keep America so strong the war the whole world dreads need never happen.

During your 2-year Advanced Army ROTC course, there will be a subsistence allowance of $535. Uniforms and military textbooks are paid for. There is a $117 allowance for your six-week summer camp training, plus travel allowance. And when you're commissioned, a $300 uniform allowance.

And then, of course, there is the warm sense of accomplishment you will feel in June 1963 when the gold bars of a Second Lieutenant are pinned on your Army uniform.

philosophy of love as the backbone of justice and guided by wisdom, he concluded.

QUESTION SESSION

Saturday morning Dr. Tillich answered questions in Longmire Lounge. In these answers Dr. Tillich spoke of the re-interpretations of Christian Dogma. He mentioned that Christianity accepts the meeting between God and the Man Jesus as the ultimate experience of the finite meeting tthe infinite. Christ is this experience and Jesus is the anointed one, he explained.

Christianity does not mean everlasting or endless infinity but it is that which is beyond temporal processes, he said. It is one manifestation of the infinite within the finite. Immortality has become personal and contradicts the ability to think as well as the vision of faith, he added. It means not being able to die.

Dr. Tillich explained that the resurrection of the body acknowledges the preservation of the total person and the Kingdom of God unites body and soul, by liberating man from isolation from nature. Man becomes aware of the separation through acutalization of the individual self, he continued.

Dr. Tillich also commented on the doctrine of original sin calling it the tragic universality of estrangement.

THEY'RE NEVER TOO SMALL TO KEEP. ACCORDING TO DR. Ralph Yerger, right, of Florida State University who has been fishing Florida streams for more than five years in search for new and unreported species. Tiny fish he's holding with tweezers is an Okaloosa darter, a species found only in one small area of Walton and Okaloosa counties. Most of the fish Yearger has been studying are tiny ones but one new recent find was the sauger pike in pan, never before reported in Florida. It was taken below Woodruff Dam on the Apalachicola River. With the zoologist is graduate assistant Ray Birdson of Key Largo, who has helped Yerger with fishing expeditions between the Suwannee and Perdido rivers.

FSU Zoologist Does Work On Unusual Florida Fish

Dr. Ralph W. Yerger, a Florida State University zoologist, has been interested in the research for small fish not usually found in the waters of Florida.

His research has been carried on by a grant from the National science Foundation.

For more than five years Dr. Yerger has been searching the streams of West Florida for fish ranging from a fraction of an inch to an inch long. He is interested in learning about the distribution of the fish in hopes of finding new ones and finding out if the fish have stayed in the same location for a long time. This may indicate changes in the geological past.

FISHING TRIPS

Dr. Yerger and a student assistant have fished in 175 streams and have made over 300 collections in the territory between the Suwannee and Perdido rivers. They have identified 10 species not previously found in Florida and one of their newest finds is the Okaloosa darter.

The darter is found in only a few streams near Niceville. This indicates that this area with an altitude of 20 feet was once an island isolated from the mainland, he said. Apparently, this species developed during the ice-age of the Pleistocene when the sea rose to 150 feet because it has only been found in streams emptying into Bayou and Boggy Bayous which empty into the Choctawhatchee Bay.

Fresh water species inhabiting Florida waters now number 104, including all of the recent additions found in West Florida which is a meeting area for species of the Mississippi basin and the Atlantic coastal plain. Dr. Yerger has also found similarities between species of the Apalachicola and the Ochlockonee rivers indicating the Ochlockonee was once a tributary of the Apalachicola.

UNITED WE STAND

The entire academic world is agog over the success of the Associated Colleges Plan, ACP, for short. I mean, you go to any campus in the country these days and you will see students and faculty dancing on the green, blowing penny whistles, grasping each other by the elbows and yelling, "Yea, team! Rah, ACP, Charley—like wow!"

And who can blame them? The ACP is a plan not only simply brilliant, but also brilliantly simple. All it is is a [illegible] federation of small colleges. Let's say, for example, that in a given region we have a group of small colleges, each with its own academic specialty. Small College No. 1 [illegible] language department. Small College No. 2 [illegible] science department. No. 3 has a fine music department [illegible].

Well sir, under the ACP these various colleges [illegible]. A student in any one of the colleges can take courses in the university of any of the other colleges and [illegible] —he will receive credit for the course at his home college. Thus he enjoys all the advantages of a big university without losing the comfy coziness of a small college.

Well sir, you can see what a good idea the ACP is. I respectfully submit, however, that just because a thing is good is no reason not to try to make it better. Like, for instance, Marlboro Cigarettes. Marlboros were good from the very beginning—people found out quickly and sales zoomed. But did the makers of Marlboro say, "Okay, we've got it made. Let's [illegible]"? Well sir, if that's what you think, you don't know the makers. They did not relax. They took their good Marlboros and kept improving them. They improved the filter, improved the flavor, improved the pack. They researched and developed [illegible], until today Marlboro is just about the most admirable cigarette you can put a match to. There are, in fact, some people who find Marlboros so admirable they can't bear to put a match to them. They just sit with a single Marlboro in hand and admire it for ten, twelve years on end. The makers of Marlboro are of course deeply touched by this—except for E. Rennie Signiora, the sales manager.

But I digress. The ACP, I say, is good but it can be better. Why should the plan be confined to small colleges? Why should it be confined to a limited region? Why not include all colleges and universities, big and small, wherever they are?

Let's start our federation. Let's call it the "Bigger Associated Colleges To Encourage Richer Intellectual Activity"—BACTERIA for short.

Here it is. Still a few bugs in BACTERIA.

What a bright new world BACTERIA opens up. Take for example a typical college student, Hunrath Signiora, incidentally of the Marlboro sales manager. Hunrath is a great lad, is currently majoring in turkey at the University of Kentucky. Under the BACTERIA plan, Hunrath could stay at Kentucky, where he has made many friends, but at the same time broaden his vistas by taking a course in constitutional law at Harvard, a course in physics at Caltech, a course in frostbite at Minnesota and a course in poi at Hawaii!

I admit there are still a few bugs in BACTERIA. How, for instance, could Hunrath attend a 9 o'clock class at Harvard, a 10 o'clock class at Hawaii, an 11 o'clock class at Minnesota, and still keep his lunch date at Kentucky? It would be silly to deny that this is a tricky problem, but I have no doubt American ingenuity will carry the day. Always remember how they laughed at Edison and Fulton—and particularly at Walter Clavicle who invented the collarbone.

Three cheers for American ingenuity, which gave us the ACP, the collarbone and MGM . . . that's the Mighty Good Makin's you get in Marlboro, the filter cigarette with the unfiltered taste. Settle back and enjoy one. You get a lot to like.

ONE OF THE STARS OF GIAN CARLO MENOTTI'S "THE CONSUL" HERE PORTRAYS ONE of the character roles in the Pulitzer Prize-winning musical drama which will play in Conradi Theatre next week.

Menotti's 'Consul' Opens Tuesday For 5-Day Run

Gian Carlo Menotti's musical drama, The Consul, opens Tuesday evening in Conradi Theatre for a five-night run.

Tickets will be available today at the West- Ticket Office, priced at $2 for the public and $1 for students.

Judi Svendsen, Joy Davidson, and Tom Teague sing the leads in the production, a completely different kind of opera, according to Richard Fallon, stage director of the production.

"The Consul has created considerable controversy as to whether it is classed as more dramatic or more operatic," he said. Menotti has called it a musical drama, he added. "The opera is probably a new art form that will be representative of a modern type of drama," he explained.

The Pulitzer-prize winning opera tells the story of the wife of a "freedom fighter" in a dictatorial state who is trying to join her husband who has fled to a free country. The story was, according to Menotti, based on actual incidents. The FSU production is under joint sponsorship of University Theatre and Opera Guild. Richard Collins, director of the Opera Guild is musical director.

With the success of The Consul in New York Menotti was acclaimed as a successful discoverer of a new form somewhere between opera and drama which brought poetry back to the contemporary theatre. Those who agree with playwright Noel Coward when he said, 'The trouble with opera isn't that it isn't what it used to be, but that it is,' place great hope in Menotti as the writer for today's modern operatic dramas," stated Fallon.

The Women's Faculty Club will sponsor a special preview performance of the production Monday at 7 p.m. in Conradi. Chandler Cowles, the original producer of The Consul will discuss the play with Menotti, who is a close friend of Cowles.

Following the performance and talk, a dinner will be held at Holiday Inn. Tickets for this special preview and dinner may be obtained from Mrs. Richard Fallon, Mrs. Robert Davis, Mrs. Robert Earnest or Mrs. Malcomn Parsons.

Excellent speaker certificates went to Marilyn Young, Linda Diz and Erickson. A superior certificate in debate went to Joan Corey and Erickson who had a record of four wins and one loss on the affirmative team. Representing FSU in debate in the varsity division were Miss Young and Miss Diz, affirmative, and Ann Rushing and Carolyn Cooksey, negative. Debaters in the novice division were Miss Corey and Erickson, affirmative, and W. O. Beauchamp and McCarron, negative.

Auburn University won the senior division trophy at the Magnolia Tournament; while Alabama College won the junior division.

TWO MORE TRIPS

Debate Coach R. A. Hahn also announced that an affirmative team from Yeshiva University in New York will be coming to FSU for an audience debate in the near future. The Pensacola Junior College teams are also planning to come to FSU in early April to help prepare theh FSU teams for their two coming tournaments.

'Best Dressed' Applicants Must File By 5 P.M. Today

The deadline for dormitories and sororities to submit their candidates for the Flambeau sponsored "best dressed girl on compus" is today at 5 p.m. Names of the candidates and their sponsoring residence must be turned in at the main desk in Longmire Bldg. by this deadline.

The Florida State University winner will be selected Tuesday night at 7:30 p.m. in the Club Room, Longmire. At this time each candidate must be prepared to present the judges with photographs of herself modeling a typical campus outfit, a short or long party dress and a daytime offcampus outfit. The candidates will then model their campus outfits for the judges.

The FSU representative will be entered in the Glamour magazine's sixth annual "Ten Best Dressed College Girls in America" contest.

In the spring, these ten young women will be photographed for the August College Issue of Glamour. The location is still secret, but the editors have stated that it will be the "most exciting" one in the six years the contest has been running. In the 1960 issue, the winners were photographed with leading political figures including John F. Kennedy, Richard Nixon and Lyndon Johnson.

In June, the winners will be flown to New York and spend two weeks in the city as Glamour's guests. The visit will be highlighted by a fashion show at Carnegie Hall where the winners will be introduced to over 1,000 members of the Fashion Industry.

K For C Test

Students who have not passed the Knowledge for College Test must take the test again, Wednesday at 5 p.m. in Longmire Auditorium.

Women students who have not passed the test will be on partial restrictions until they pass the test, according to Chairman of Judiciary Linda Stearns.

The test is required of all new women students, all transfer students and all women students living in dormitories for the first time. Any of these students who did not take the test last Wednesday, must take it this Wednesday, Miss Stearns said.

Women Senators Introduce Bill To Alter Men's Apartment Rule

By GAYLE MOTES
Flambeau Staff Writer

Women students will not be permitted to visit in men's apartments or rooms unless they are accompanied by two other women, under a bill which is pending approval in Women's Senate.

The bill which will amend Knowledge for College was introduced Tuesday by Sens. Ginny Boyd, Cathy Young, Jeanie Ferlita, Jeanne Graham, Clyda Stokes, Nancy Sindon and Pat Doomar.

Women's Vice President Mygnon Champion referred the bill to the Social Regulations and Codifying Committee for study. The vill will be voted on at the March 20 meeting of Women's Senate .

DEANS MUST APPROVE

If the bill is approved by Women's Senate, it will go to the dean of students and the dean of women for approval.

The bill also provides that the two other women students must be present the entire time that a coed is visiting in a man's apartment and sets a maximum penalty of six full weeks restrictions for violation of this regulation.

Under the present regulation women students are not allowed to visit men's apartments under any conditions.

During the discussion of the bill, one of the co-authors of the bill, Sen. Boyd, asserted, "I feel that there is a definite necessity to approve this bill since it is in line with the wishes and desires of the student body. Since the rule will be strongly enforced, I don't see any real objection to its passage."

CHECK AND BALANCE

Sen. Doomar then pointed out a check and balance attribute of the amendment. She feels that this bill will help to enforce the anti-drinking regulations. Under present conditions since a coed is not permitted to be in a man's apartment at all she might be forced to condone the violation of the drinking rule since she too was violating a rule

Sen. Ferlita is also in favor of the bill because she too feels that it will "aid in the enforcement of the women's drinking rule." She continued, "It isn't likely that a woman student would place herself in jeopardy ty turning in another who is drinking; consequently a woman who is violating the drinking rule is confident that she will not be turned in."

'LEGITIMATE REASONS'

"As the case stands now," commented Sen. Sindon, "students do not always abide by the moral rule in many situations." She feels that there are legitimate reasons for a woman to be in a man's apartment. She cited as an example a group might like to get together and cook a meal.

Sen Sylvia Cashion in reference to the bill suggested that there be a clarification of "room" since university rules state that women are not to visit in the rooms of men except on designated occasions, such as visitors' day.

DEAN LYNN COMMENTS

Miss Elizabeth Lynn, associate dean of women, also commented on the proposed amendment at the meeting. "I would like to propose that the last sentence of the amendment concerning the penalty for violation of the rule be a recommendation to Judiciary." Dean Lynn feels that it is the perogative of the judicial body to pass the penalty.

Sen Boyd then asked Dean Lynn if she felt that the bill would be more forceful if students knew they would receive the maximum penalty

Dean Lynn stated that she felt it probably would be, but that it was Judiciary's not Senate's place to decide upon an effective penalty.

Opera Tryouts Are March 30

The Florida State University Opera Guild will hold tryouts for all roles in the opera Madame Butterfly March 30, from 7 to 9 p. m.

Richard Collins, who will stage the production, requests that each singer prepare at least one selection from the opera. He may also prepare, if he wishes, an aria of his choice. The FSU voice faculty will hear all those trying out for roles.

Suggestions for audition selections may be found inside the front cover of the vocal score on reserve in the Music Library.

Madame Butterfly will be presented May 18 and 19.

Nancy Bell Elected Editor Of Pow Wow By BOP

Nancy Bell, Florida State University sophomore, was elected Editor of the 1962 - 63 Pow Wow by the Board of Publications Wednesday afternoon.

The Pow Wow is a student handbook containing facts and information about FSU. It is published annually and distributed to freshman and transfer students when they arrive on campus.

Miss Bell served on the art staff of the 1961 - 62 Tally Ho where she drew the fraternity and sorority crests, and also on the Pow Wow staff, in the same capacity. She is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta sorority where she currently holds the office of treasurer. She will assume editorship of the publication immediately in order to get the publication to the printer by June 1

Miss Bell's ideas and proposals for the 1962 - 63 Pow Wow include: a table of contents, making use of the Flambeau for more information and as a source for staff recruitment, having more Pow Wow printed, printing material on the trimester system, presenting a list of scheduled club meetings after the calendar, and using better placement of material.

Other candidates for the position included Fred McDonald, a transfer student from Florida Southern College in Lakeland, and Martha Roberts, a feature writer for the Flambeau.

Florida State University's graduate lounge will be the stage for Les Jongleurs production of the play, Look Homeward Angel to be presented March 22 through 25.

The play, based on Thomas Wolfe's novel, calls for the three-sided arena effect provided by FSU's Graduate Lounge in 204 Dodd Bldg. This is the first full length production of the year by the dramatic honorary.

The setting is in an old boarding house, The Dixieland, located in Altamont, a fictional city in North Carolina.

The general theme is one of loneliness, expressed in a different way by each of the characters. Eddie Reid plays the leading role of Eugene Gant, a lonely adolescent, intended by Wolfe to represent himself. Claire Frieberger is Gant's dominating mother, Eliza.

Sam Baker, FSU graduate student in speech is directing the three-act play. He won Les Jongleurs best actor of 1961 award for his role in Inherit the Wind. This is his first time directing at FSU, having previously directed at Young Harris College, University of Georgia and LaGrange College in Georgia.

Assistant director is Jerry Walter, an organizer and director of the Junior Theater of Ft. Lauderdale where he played lead roles in Kismet and J.B.

THE LONESOMEST BOY IN TOWN TRIES TO FIGURE IT ALL out for himself in this scene from "Look Homeward Angel" to be presented March 22 through 25 by Les Jongleurs, dramatic honorary at Florida State University. Here thoughtfully stargazing is Eddie Reid, who plays Eugene Gant, main character in the Thomas Wolfe novel and supposedly representative of the author himself.

Indonesian Ambassador Predicts 'Bright Future'

By MYGNON CHAMPION
Guest Writer

A "bright future" for United States-Indonesian relations is predicted by Indonesian Ambassador to the United Nations, Sukardjo Wirjopranoto.

Ambassador Wirjopranoto is returning to New York today after visiting in Tallahassee with Dr. Robert C. Bone Jr., associate professor of Government, for three days.

The U. S. and Indonesia have a "basis of common understanding", the Ambassador said in a Flambeau interview at Dr. Bone's home yesterday.

SAME IDEALS

The Indonesian Revolution to achieve independence from Dutch colonial rule reflected the same ideals reflected by the American Revolution, he said.

Although Indonesia had "been misiterpreted and misunderstood in the past by the U. S.", he described the present situation as much better and forecast a "bright future" for relations between the two nations.

"We have learned that the United States is always against colonialism," he said. But he expressed disappointment that Attorney - General Robert Kennedy, during his recent visit to Indonesia, had not stated more bluntly his support of Indonesia's case against the Netherlands over the disputed Dutch-held island of Irian Barat (West Irian).

The island of West Irian, a part of the former Dutch East Indies from which Indonesia was formed, lies east of the Indonesian Archipelago. It is still held as a colony by the Netherlands. Indonesia claims it as a part of Indonesia

DRIVEN BY HONESTY

In reference to Robert Kennedy's remarks before Indonesian college students that the U. S. war with Mexico was not the proudest moment in American history, the Ambassador said he thought Kennedy was "driven by his honesty."

Ambassador Wirjopranoto said that one of his nation's serious internal problems was with maintaining unity among its people. This trouble is caused "from outside", the Ambassador said, particularly from the Netherlands. Many Dutch who remained in Indonesia after it achieved in-

McCloskey:

American Political Values Often Conflict

Americans as individuals hold conflicting political values which are never fully resolved and are only partially resolved when an issue arises, Dr. Robert McCloskey said, Monday night.

The Chairman of the Government Dept. at Harvard spoke at the opening lecture of the Government Lecture Series on "The American Ideology."

He asserted that only a small number of people "think ideologically" because most Americans think in terms of issues rather political ideals or values. This small group comprises a "political sub-culture" which is comprised mainly of politicians, lobbyists, party leaders and intelligencia who are the political activists.

CONSENSUS

Dr. McCloskey questioned whethehr there was sufficient concensus even among this group to permit conclusions about the nature of an "American Ideology." He said that advances in public opinion research suggest that even among this group there may not be an "ideology" but that "the uncertain evidence provides some freedom of speculation."

He explained that most Americans seem to hold contradictory ideas simultaneously without bothering to resolve the contradictions."

To support this conclusion, Dr. McCloskey considered three categories of evidence — the ideas expressd in "traditional literature," political institutions and political behavior.

In the first category, the professor cited Jefferson as the perfect example of a man's evoked as a authority on almost every side of every question. Jefferson's First Inaugural Address, according to Dr. McCloskey, is a "text of a mind divided" as Jefferson supported state government and advocated preservation of federalism.

"He is enshrined in our pantheon because of these varying and contradictory views which reflect the American Way," asserted the lecturer.

Explaining his second category, Dr. McCloskey said that the political institutions have also shaped the American nation "The conflict to choose a strong or weak president has not been resolved by Article II. No clear image of the democratic leader is embodied in Constitutional language and no such image has so developed," he stated.

According to Dr. McCloskey, "American ideologs believe in leadership deeply, yet dread it." This is exemplified by the pacifism of Coolidge and the non-in-

Court Results Are 'Symbolic'

The Supreme Court has accomplished "a kind of symbolic result" through the school integration decisions, said Dr. Robert McCloskey, chairman of the Harvard Government Dept

In an interview with Flambeau reporters, he stressed that the decisions had brought about "recognition of at least token integration."

"I don't think that a court can change the social habits of a nation," he asserted. However, a court "can stimulate" social change, he explained.

Concerning life appointment of judges to the court, Dr. McCloskey feels that the life tenure preserves an independant judiciary. Now the Senate is in opposition to life appointments, but a review of history shows "times when they were very grateful for an independant judiciary," he added.

"An agency which is free from the limitations of political control will not have the tendency to vote on party lines rather than on the merits of a dispute," he stressed. On state supreme courts where judges are elected for short terms, he said that "it is common for the judges to vote along party lines."

Dr. McCloskey said that there were differences in the political parties "in the very broadest sense — in attitude." It's pretty hard to find convincing differences on issues between them," he added. "There is more difference between the leadership and the rank and file," Dr. McCloskey said.

"If the Republican leadership could have had its way in 1960, they would have nominated Barry Goldwater," he asserted.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the student body as a whole or the administration of Florida State University. Editorials represent only the opinions of staff members and the initials of the writer following the editorial.

Govt. For The Common Man

Student Government has progressed rapidly recently in generating ideas for coping with the approaching Trimester system. They are working on time of elections, length of terms, and other pertinent questions. But they have failed to give the "common man", the ordinary class-attending student, much consideration.

Let's pause a moment to reflect the problems. The Trimester System will bring longer class hours and fewer weeks of class. It will mean that the student will have to do more work on his own outside of class. More students will be vying for library materials; more students will want to use the library as a place to study.

RELIEF FOR THE crammed library is a problem at present. In the afternoon, there is ample room . . . but a full house is typical during the evening hours. A solution to this might be to initiate action to ask that the library be left open for an additional hour nightly to provide for the overflow. Saturday night opening might also help the situation.

The effects of the loss in class time might be counteracted by a cutback in the examination week. At present, we take an entire week out for final examinations. A week of lost class time results. If this examination time could be shortened or if final examinations could be administered during the regular class period, valuable class time would be gained.

Typing rules should be eased or completely scrapped in the women's dorms. The compressed academic load will require later hours at the typewriter. A woman student needs rules to help, rather than hinder, her academic progress. Action has been initiated on this and should be followed up by strong student support.

Trimester pressures affecting the "common man" will be mostly academic Changes in this area cannot be made by Student Government, but the government owes it to their constituents to represent their interest in proposing these ideas to the faculty and administration

Intelligent student ideas, strongly supported, can mean much in determining changes. Student Government should use both in representing the students as a whole.

BCS.

Meet Half-Way

The long-awaited move to liberalize one of the major women's social regulations has finally started, and Women's Senate can be proud of the bill which was introduced there Tuesday.

SPONSORS OF the bill have obviously given the matter a great deal of thought, consulted their constituents, recognized the traditional university attitude toward women's rules, and found a solution in one of the basic principles of American government. This principle is that of Compromise. In Colonial days, when small and large states were feuding, the two-chambered Congress was accepted by both sides as a compromise, which has been highly successful.

The women senators have followed this example beautifully. Many students have been pushing for complete revocation of the apartment rule so that individual women could visit men's apartments alone. The administration, on the other hand, has traditionally worried about the "moral" implications of the situation and once vetoed a similar bill in the past.

THE SENATORS, therefore, have written a compromise bill which would allow women to visit men's apartments, but only if two other women are present. This should give partial satisfaction to both sides, without forcing either group to completely sacrifice its ideals.

We hope that this bill will pass Women's Senate with a wide margin, showing heavy student support of the move. Then perhaps the administrators will be willing to meet the students half-way.

French Plays Fill

By DR. ALBERT LEDUC
Modern Languages Department

Who would ever have thought that two contemporary French plays, given in French, would fill Opperman Music Hall? And fill it they did—with even a handful of late arriving standees—last Tuesday evening!

UNDER THE JOINT sponsorship of the departments of Modern Languages, Philosophy and Speech, the touring French troupe "Le Treteau de Paris," led by Jean de Rigault, presented a masterful dramatic interpretation of Jean-Paul Sartre's Huis Clos (No Exit) followed by La Cantatrice Chauve, (The Bald Soprano) by the avant-garde French playwright Eugene Ionesco.

But did the audience understand and appreciate this very special fare? They must have understood a good deal, for they paid constant attention and the spontaneous bursts of laughter came at the right places. Most of the audience were obviously students, plus a good many faculty members and some townspeople. Such a success augures well for future exotic artistic offerings.

SARTRE'S PLAY is an idea piece showing a self - service hell where the suffering is as poignant as thuogh the damned were undergoing the traditional physical tortures. The characters, each with two or three valid reasons for being in hell, must torture each other mentally jusqu au bout (to the end of eternity), as one of them says. Ionesco's play is a complete contrast, a take-off on ever seen. It is nonsense, but wonderfully amusing by its preposall the neatly contrived movies, T-V shows and plays you have terousness and jolting contradictions. Laid in England in a timeless period, it pokes fun at certain British manias and at human credulity in general. The title has nothing to do with the plot. The audience laughed again and again at it and applauded generously.

French plays in general contrast with American and English plays in that their motives and action are phychological and that the dramatic conflict is within the characters. Huis Clos was a very good example of this, but the action never seemed to drag on the stage, as it might in reading the play, because of the absolutely superb acting by the French troupe.

FOR THE BEST ACTOR each spectator can take his choice: Francis Lex as Mr. Smith, Daniele Lebrun as Estelle or Mrs. Martin, Marguerite Perrin as Ines, and so on. This reviewer's choice would be Jean-Francois Calve, but this is a personal preference by a former actor for the dynamic intensity with which Monsieur Calve played the complex coward and traitor Garcin.

So our American university audience saw two contrasting French plays in the original French language and appreciated both Satre's ideas and Ionesco's fun. Whether in hell or in England the audience was enjoying an admirable dramatic experience brought to FSU from Paris.

Attack By Insinuation

TO THE EDITOR:

I can speak in no official capacity for Liberal Forum, but I think that Leslie Powell's attack-by-insinuation on this group requires some further observations:

1.) Most of the comments — which upset him apparently more than speaker Shaara — were made by two participants in a gathering of about twenty-five persons.

2.) Liberal Forum does not attempt to control, as far as I am aware, the statements of those who attend its open meetings, nor is there any requirement that discussion be limited to questions, or to vacuous pleasantries. (Also, one might ask about the need for Mr. Powel to inject himself into the debate between Mr. Shaara and the Hecklers.)

3.) "Let them learn French" was not given precisely "as an answer tto the speakers criticism of foreign words where a more generally understood English expression would suffice." Rather, it was put forth as an alternative suggestion, which Mr. Shaara himself later qualified, to the effect that clarity in writing could be increased by dropping foreign words from the language.

JOHN PEARCE

B. Sharp, Et Al..

TO THE EDITOR:

Your paper of Feb. 20, was terribly partisianed and, to this reader at least, represented something of an "all-time low" in the free disemination of ideas and ideals.

You are hereby challenged to substantiate the statement that J. Edgar Hoover is or ever was " . . . a leader in the fight against 'radical' anti-communist groups."

Why are you so concerned with the fanatics? Why do you attempt to make the minority seem representative of the whole?

And as for the remarks of Claire Arment Kemper. I have grown sick of the criticism of the HUAC and the film Opporation (sic) Abolition.

Congratulations to Reen Perkins for her letter and to Gerry Dobson. They seem to deal in realities.

As to Malcolm Johnson's quallfications, one does not need a Harvard diploma to be well informed.

Finally, if I may close on a sour note, let me further suggest that in the future those to whom I have directed my little diatribe be able and willing to document their argument with reason and facts. How about it?

D. ROSS THOMPSON

EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Thompson is a Junior at Florida High. His very long letter was heavily cut.

Class Officers Meaningless?

Meaningless? I don't think so. The reference is to the BCS quote "meaningless" Class Officers.

First, let me state that this letter has not been written with any bitterness or for purpose of creating animosity. I simply wish to offer information to refute Mr. Sharp's comment about the unmeaningness of Class Officers.

I shall be the first to admit that the class functions could have been or could be handled by an appointed branch of student government. To say they could not would of course, be naive. But simply because others could do the job of Class Officers does not necessarily imply that class positions are meaningless

What do class officers do? Are their functions so trivial that they can be dropped altogether? Here is a list of their major functions for a school year.

1.) Orientatuon of freshmen to FSU tradition and spirit

2.) Rat Cap sales that save student government approxumately $800. per year.

3.) Sophomore-Senior Banquet

4.) Sophomore-Senior Investiture

5.) Sponsorship of three dances after a football or basketball game.

6.) Chairman of Hall of Fame Selections Committee.

7.) Selection of Outstanding Senior Man and Woman and presentation

8.) Selection of Permanent Class Officers.

9.) Class Day Proceedings.

10.) Class Gift to school.

11.) Selection of school ring

12.) Selection of graduation invitations.

13.) Spring Formal arrangements.

In addition, Class Officers are usually appointed to various other committees through association with their Class position. Also, Class Officers give further representation of students at periodic meetings, i.e., President Blackwell's monthly meeting of campus leaders

I must also mention that many of the functions of Class Officers are performed to a great extent behind the scenes. The importance of a Class dance or other function is not determined by whether or not it is covered by the Flambeau. Many people seem to think that a function (dance) is a flop if they do not attend. However, this does not seem to be true.

I have tried to explain in a rational way the justification for Class Officers in the past and present and possibly in the immediate future. When making future decisions or comments may we have open minds and pertinent information.

If my three years of effort towards Class functions has been "meaningless" then I apologize for wasting your time as well as mine.

I want to ask why haven't Class Officers been extended the same courtesy of an interview or consultation by the Senate committee investigating the feasibility of Class Officers under the trimester system?

Critical Judgement

By JIM RAYFIELD

How many times have I attended a performance of a play and enjoyed every minute of it —except the intermissions— was during these times that I was told directly or indirectly that I should not be enjoying it. People would say, "It's lousy" or turn thumbs down on it. I could almost get the impression that there were two performances — the one I was seeing and the one the others were seeing. Maybe it was a difference in critical judgement — maybe I have none. I don't think this was it — I think the difference was very simple: I wanted to enjoy the play, I wanted it to like it. Of course everyone else wanted to enjoy it or they would not have come But once they were there they were not willing to enjoy it.

FOR A PERFORMANCE to be good there must be two sets of artists — those on the stage and those in the audience. the latter being the most important. It doesn't seem fair for an audience to demand actors, musicians , or singers to create when they themselves are not willing to do the same. But why should an audience bother? Simply so they can enjoy something

I can not see the pleasure in disliking anything. (I mean anything.) Since we go to plays and concerts for pleasure we should demand our money's worth. but from ourselves.

Well, what kind of creativity is this that the audience performs? It takes its birth when you dislike something. Suppose you thought a certain actor's performance wretched. Now if you take this view it must be because you have a mental idea of how the role should be played — all right — play it! With your mind take that "wretched performance" and lavish upon it the brilliance your performance has, repaint the set, fix the costume, help Tosca hit the high C, create your own Academy Award winning production

"BUT WAIT!" you might say. "What about our critical judgment? Aren't we in danger of losing it?" Yes you are so right. But how many of us are critics? I'm not. Besides, an audience of two hundred critics makes a pretty miserable night of things

"Pleasures"!!

TO THE EDITOR:

What does Women's Senate think they are trying to do? Of all the ridiculous things I ever seen Student Government do, this takes the cake. How can elected representatives try to lower the moral standards of the university by allowing women to "visit" men's apartments?

There is absolutely no justifiable excuse for condoning this type of conduct. No self-respecting young women would ever suggest changing the present rule, much less ask other students to support such a move.

In case the reader has not heard, a small fringe group of Women's Senate is pushing to allow all women students to indulge in the 'pleasures" which can only be enjoyed in men's apartments.

I hope the decent women senators will pray for guidance, and then overwhelmingly defeat this immoral bill.

I challenge you to print this letter.

Not A Charles Atlas

TO THE EDITOR:

Mr. Carl Rosenbush in a letter in the Flambeau for March 2, stated very well his hostility to the physical fitness program.

I will concede one point in the letter from Mr. Rosenbush: Intellectual ability has little to do with physical ability. I myself have never been an outstanding athlete or a "Charles Atlas;" however, I do realize the importance of being physically fit, if for no other reason than maintaining good health.

In regard to the snide inference about Mr. Kennedy, I would like to point out that the president is in excellent physical condition. I only hope that I am as fit as he when I reach his age.

It is obvious from Mr. Rosenbush's remarks that he is unable to meet the minimum standard and that he wrote the letter under tthe influence of an inferiority complex. I think that Mr. Rosenbush, upon reflection, would agree that had he been able to meet the minimum standards he would not have written such harsh words.

Union Leaders Living Longer

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

When my favorite uncle, Bruce Davis of Charlotte, N. C., retired recently as southern representative of the AFL-CIO it was an achievement of sorts. To my knowledge he was the only union man in the South to live long enough to retire, the others having been killed in line of duty in Hendersonville, Gastonia and other bobby little mill towns throughout the region

PERHAPS THIS is a sign that labor relations are becoming more refined than in the days of the legendary Harry Sims, when union representatives were shot down by company thugs while the "law" looked the other way. Nevertheless, sporadic outbreaks of violence from time to time serve to remind us of the past, a fact surprisingly little known to students of the current generation.

It is because they know so little of the history of labor in the United States that students today are ready to believe the various myths currently being propagated by management throughout the nation. First of all there is an attempt to line up the unions with communism. Any desire to improve the lot of the workers is said to be an attack upon capitalism. In reality, no one has been a stronger foe of communism in the United States than the free trade unions. Long ago the Reds were kicked out of the AFL-CIO. It was union leaders, not industrialists who wanted nothing to do with the Communist bosses of Soviet and Mikoyan. American unionists well know that the workers are powerless to organize, bargain or strike in the "workers' paradise." In contrast, many of the lower paid American workers live better than the elite of Communist nations. They are free to organize for their own protection and welfare. It was a hard-won freedom which some anti-union Americans even now deny to American workers.

THEN THERE IS THE MYTH of corruption in the ranks of labor. In this respect it is interesting to note that the AFL-CIO expelled Hoffa's teamster's Union when evidence of corruption was brought forward. There is no record of the National Association of Manufacturers even mildly condemning Westinghouse, General Electric or other companies guilty of the most monumental corruption Newspapers too, in typical anti-union fashion, played up alleged labor corruption while burying or completely ignoring malpractices in the business world.

Finally there is the incredible idea that the unions have become too strong. Ignoring the fact that strong unions are needed to deal with monolithic companies, the critics of labor would shackle unions with untenable restrictions. Already unions are hamstrung in many states where they are needed most, as gerrymandered rural-dominated legislatures, under powers granted by the Taft-Hartley Act, practically prohibit unions. Thus it is that thousands of workers in the South are being exploited in sweat-shop factories for sub-standard wages Conditions among migrant farm workers, completely unrepresented are a national disgrace White collar workers are still subject largely to the whims of management

THE AMERICAN SYSTEM of constitutional government has helped to shape this nation into what it is today. But outside the realm of government, the two things which have brought this country to its present level are the public schools nad the free trade unions. It is the unions which made it possible for our high standard of living to be shared with most of the population. It is the unions which will preserve our standard of living, if they are permitted to continue to exercise their hard-won rights The problem today in the United States is not that the unions are too strong, it is that they are not strong enough.

Let's Gets Serious

The Straw Boss Got In The Way

By GERRY DOBSON

I would like to answer charges made by various individuals about the coulum I wrote praising Project Awake, and, in addition, give a few reasons why I feel that the HUAC is performing a useful function in our nation. Unfortunately, my straw boss, the Associate Editor has certain length restrictions which apply to those who labor regularly in his vineyards. There will, therefore, be two columns, the first dealing with some of the charges, and the second defending the HUAC.

IN A HASTILY - WRITTEN column by Joseph D. Smith (izzat you, Joedy?) there were several statements deserving of comment. He accuses the "rightists" of whom, I presume, I am one, of being propagandists because, for example, the Sheriff of San Francisco allegedly stated that "there was no act of physical aggression on the part of the students." The propaganda charge arises, I suppose, from the fact that the San Francisco hearings have been billed as riots.

Mr. Smith's quotation was taken from the Reporter Magazine of November 24, 1960, and after reading it, Sheriff Carberry was quoted as saying, "I did not make that statement. I do not know the author of the article, Paul Jacobs, and have never spoken to him and have never been interviewed by him." Mr. Smith's "quotation" would therefore appear to be a hoax. If he wishes, I am perfectly willing to send a letter, signed by both of us, to Sheriff Carberry asking which quotation is the correct one. I sincerely hope Mr. Smith's is, for it would be most unfortunate if he had been "duped" by a bogus statement.

TO FURTHER QUOTE Mr. Smith, "there are other principles which are being disregarded (or rather discarded) by HUAC and the reactionary rightists liberty, life (recent bombings of homes in California) . . ." I myself was unaware that the bombings had been solved, and I would therefore suggest that Mr. Smith report to the FBI any information he might have that the "HUAC and the reactionary rightists" were responsible for the bombings. I recall a case in Louisville where when a Negro family moved into an all-white neighborhood, their house was bombed. Of course, the segregationists were blamed, but investigation proved that the communists were responsible, and had hoped to profit from the resulting bitterness. I'm not accusing anyone of the bombings and would suggest, in the absence of proof, that Mr. Smith do likewise. Or doesn't he regard a person (or group) as innocent until proven guilty? And since I have been lumped with the reactionary rightists, may I hasten to add that I am not now, ner have I ever been in the State of California.

Mr. Smith further states that "As treason is defined in the Constitution it is for the protection of the person against insinuations and requires factual proof." The "factual proof" mentioned in the Constitution consists of "the Testimony of two Witnesses to the same overt Act. . ." Mr. Smith, however, rejects the testimony of seven witnesses to the San Francisco riots that the film Operation Abolition was "a true and accurate presentation." He asserts that they were "only opinions and not facts or evidence" and were, therefore, a "smear." One is forced to the conclusion that Mr. Smith regards testimony as "factual evidence" when given by two witnesses, but as a "smear" when given by seven. He also shows a strange lack of willingness to accept the word of seven respected members of the profession he hopes to enter, the ministry.

DR. ROBERT C. BONE writes that he felt compelled by my column to comment "from the viewpoint of a conservative increasingly outraged at the fashion in which this old and honorable term is misused in current political polemics." The Professor wrote an excellent letter, but I think he will find that the word "conservative" was not even mentioned in my column.

Strange World Depicted In FSU Museum

By MARY ELLEN HARRIS
Flambeau Feature Editor

A strange world is depicted in the University Museum, second floor Dining Hall. It is a world of wires and lights, tubes and tapes, records and unbelievably complex machinery.

This world is many things to many people: it is a world of service and communication, entertainment and enlightenment. It transcends the realm of theory and the science of electronics to be calmly accepted as an everyday occurance and as a necessity.

Its name is radio - television and it is displayed in the exhibit "Inside WFSU-TV FM" currently showing in the University Museum.

This display, designed and executed by Dick Puckett, art director of WFSU-TV, consists of processes related to the production of radio and television programs. Its facets cover program areas to slide projection to the mechanical instruments involved in production.

Various areas are devoted to make up techniques and art displays required in broadcasting. All the available space in the museum is utilized to accommodate the various exhibits, which are tied together in a manner which suggests a TV studio.

Outstanding in the display is the quality of silence. Only the soft whirring of machinery and the hushed glow of lighting mechanisms break the stillness of this strange world.

Candidates Are Heard

Candidates or election to the newly - created Ninth Congressional District, spoke at a meeting of the Young Democrats last Thursday night.

The Ninth District encompasses 13 counties in this area. Candidates are Roy Ball, Hal Davis, Dexter Douglas, State Rep. Don Fuqua and Jim Murphy.

The candidates were introduced by Martin Waldron of the St. Petersburg Times. Each spoke briefly concerning his qualifications and objectives, then a question - and - answer period was held in which the audience participated.

The candidates were asked to state their stands on such diversified issues as the farm program, national defense, taxation, federal support of education, segregation, the National Democratic Party, Supreme Court tenure and the United Nations.

The men all seemed to be in close agreement on the issues in question, with only minor personal differences. As one candidate commented:

"This will be a unique election, in which there are no polished professional politicians, no major controversial issues, no incumbent's record to consider. It is going to involve purely personalities and qualifications."

McCloskey...

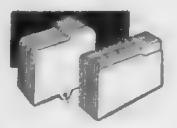
terference policy of Teddy Roosevelt, he said.

Congress itself is "a mass of contradictions" where "the minority has the absolute right to frustrate the will of the majority." He then referred to the Constitution as "a bundle of unresolved contradictions and the judiciary as "omnipotent and subservient" at the same time.

American political behavior also helps shape this ambivalence. Dr. McCloskey further stated that McCarthyism is the most recent example of this. In frenzies of reform of this sort the initial excitement soon dies down and conditions return to the status quo. "He was a man who had made up his mind appealing to an audience that had not made up its mind and had no intention of doing so," he said.

The paradox of behavior is as apparent in education and law as elsewhere. On the one hand there is a respect and on the other hand there exists a recklessness.



He then used Sen. Hughes as an example, pointing out that his dislike for the law, although realizing its necessity, his hostility toward education, although offering no better solution rang a responsive note in Americans. There exists a desire to "knock off the head as well as the hat of respectibility."

In his concluding statement, Dr. McCloskey asserted that it might be idle to look for an American ideology as such because this ideology fundamentally exists in the American's pragmatic spirit.

What It Was... Was Basketball

Basketball at Florida State is over for this year, and we dis-ered to our surprise that the entire game was nothing but a ous ritual, which came from the Old Testament and was mod- by several faiths through the centuries. Basically basketball ased on the ritual of offering sacrifices.

The ball was taken over the symbolic significance of the former s or goats; the baskets have replaced the altars of old; and courts are used as a sacred area. Each group of worshippers sponds to one of the 10 ancient Israeli tribes (hence the resmen"), and each is charged with the task of out-offering the r tribe so the first Tribe can receive the greater blessings.

This is related to the Cain-Abel struggle, but the fratricide is ded by a neutral tip off, during which a priest throws the sacri- into the air and the two tribes strive to gain possession of it. more blessed tribal head (usually the tallest) gets the offernig. Then the tribal head dribbles or throws the offering down the ed area and approaches the altar, where he attempts to make urnt offering. (The "burnt" aspect is retained by the tribal sweating.) If the chief is touched by a member of the other he gets to make an unhindered offering, which was once called ace offering, but is now known as a free throw.

If a tribesman violates a technical rule of the service, the other gets to make either a trespass offering or an offering for sins norance, depending upon the offense.

Since Christianity came into the world, the game has been mod- to include both Gentile and Hebrew offenses. Christian deci- are settled in one of three circles, representing the Father, Son, Holy Ghost, while Hebrew disputes are decided from the side e sacred area.

The two tribes, wearing the holy garments of Aaron, exhibit d much in the same manner as the Spanish Conquistadors, who ered the Americas and contributed the spoils to their church. again, stealing the sacrifices is proper as long as no one is hed . . . probably because the other tribe is unclean. If a esman touches another, the abomination is atoned at the sacrifice

The two priests, their loud jaws reminiscent of the jaw bones ass that Samson used, do not permit a tribe to wander in enemy tory for "40 years" . . . the offense doesn't net the other tribe respass offering, but it does give them possession of the offering.

Even as the congregation joins priests, deacons, etc. in modern ship, so do the congregations at the ball sacrifices.

Basketball Pews

The tabernacle is filled with pews lining each side of the sacred and the congregation is seated after offering tithes at the door. ng the sacrifice, the congregations stand and pray loudly how they contributed:

Two bits, four bits, six bits, a dollar . . ."

The deacons of old are represented by about six young ladies are possessed with St. Vitus' dance. There is now a peculiar n in the service often the young ladies shout one prayer and congregations rebelliously shout a different one.

The congregations are eternally faithful to their tribe. The Flor- State Tribesmen pray, ". . . FSU all the damn time!" or "Go ell, Gators."

During the service, often the mastermind (now called a "coach") n tribe disagrees with the priests' decisions. He may leap to eet and shout at the priests, who wear convicts uniforms. I modern game, this is known as a technical foul. It used to be led heresy.

The tribe that sacrifices the most receives the most blessings; at the end of the service, the congregations find out which tribe e greater blessed by looking at a lighted sign, which represents handwriting on the wall.

nd during the whole affair, a voice from heaven (coming from d speaker) tells who sacrifices each offering or who must be hed.

So, we feel that James A. Naismith has gotten too much credit for game, and credit must be given where it is due. As the Bible "Render unto Caesar what is—"

Florida State Swim Team To Face Gators Tomorrow

By VICTOR COMOLLI
Assistant Sports Editor

Florida State's swimming team concludes its dual meet season in Gainesville tomorrow afternoon against the University of Florida. The Gators represent the only remaining obstable before Coach Bim Stult's hopes for an undefeated campaign, his second in three years.

Earlier in Tallahassee, FSU upset the Florida tankers, who, only last week, won their seventh consecutive Southeastern Conference championship. But, once again, the Gators will be favored because of camparative times and their performance at the Georgia AAU, where they edged FSU, 106-98.

Another factor against the Tribesmen will be swimming at Florida Pool, which always proves to be FSU's nemisis. Last year, the Tribe handled Florida easily in Tallahassee, 63-31, but barely edged the Gators, 48-40, in Gainesville.

FSU will rely on senior Paul Thompson and sophomore Lee Bransford for the freestyle and relay events. Thompson owns school marks in the 220 and 440 freestyle. Bransford recently set school marks in the 100 freestyle at 49.5 and the 50 freestyle at :22.4.

He is also anchor man in the 400 freestyle relay, which set a new school record at 3:29.1 last week against East Carolina College.

The Seminoles will also count on Dick Acosta, who claims the school mark in the 200 backstroke, and Bill Dahl, who is one of the leading 440 freestyle swimmers

FSU will get added strength from Tim Lasanta in the breaststroke, Tommy Mew and Dale events, Pete Davis in the backstroke, Risto Pyykko in the butterfly and Mark Owen in diving.

FROSH UNDEFEATED

The undefeated freshman team, which won the Southeastern AAU last week, will also travel to Gatorland to swim the Baby Gators in a preliminary bout. FSU won an earlier encounter here, 61-34, but will probably have a harder time pulling the trick in hostile waters.

Stars for the frosh are James Payne and Allen Neal in diving, Jim Mullally in the backstroke, Bruce Quayle in the freestyle, Mark Cohen in the individual medley, Sherman Henderson in the breaststroke, and Ted Roth in the butterfly.

FSU Batmen To Play A 32-Game Schedule

The baseball team of Florida State University will play a 32-game schedule this season.

The annual tournament has been striken from the Seminoles' schedule this year because the Easter holidays and the spring vacation do not coincide. The Tribe will tour the Carolinas during that period.

FSU will play 11 Southeastern Conference teams; eight Atlantic Coast Conference teams; two games against a Southern Conference foe; three games against Georgia Southern, two each with Navy, Miami, and Florida Southern; and one each with Jacksonville and East Carolina.

The FSU squad, coached by Danny Litwhiler for the eighth year, will retain 14 of the 21 lettermen of last year's team, which won 21 of 18 games.

Principal losses were second baseman Jack Dull, a 1961 All-American (.370); first baseman Doug Walker (.370), right fielder Neil Martin (.343); catcher Buck Hutchinson (.333); pitcher Frank Davis, who holds Seminole records in most wins for a career (22) and most strikeouts in a career

Hutchinson was slated to return, but he was signed to a professional contract by the Cleveland Indians.

Leading returnees are pitcher Jack Ross, shortstop Kyle Spitzer (.364), centerfielder Bob Madison (.329), catcher Buddy Teagle (.308) and pitchers Ray Mc - Shane abd Frank Echols.

The varsity schedule:

March 14-15—Georgia at Tallahassee; 16-17—Auburn at Tallahassee; 20-21—Georgia Tech at Tallahassee; 27—Navy at Jacksonville; 30—Clemson at Tallahassee; 31—Clemson at Tallahassee.

April 2—Furman at Tallahassee; 9-10—Auburn at Auburn; 16-17—Miami at Tallahassee; 19—Clemson at Clemson; 20-21—Duke at Durham; 23—East Carolina at Chapel Hill; 23—North Carolina at Chapel Hill; 24—North Carolina State at Raleigh; 25—Georgia Southern at Collegeboro.

May 11-12—Florida Southern at Tallahassee; 14-15—Georgia Southern at Tallahassee; 18-19—Florida at Gainesville.

The freshmen will have a 10-game schedule and five of their opponents will meet them at home

The freshman schedule:

March 20-21—Manatee Junior College at Tallahassee.

April 6-7—University of Florida at Tallahassee; 14—South Georgia College at Tallahassee; 27-28—University of Florida at Gainesville; 30—Dade County Junior College at Tallahassee.

May 1—Dade County Junior College at Tallahassee; 4—Pensacola Junior College at Tallahassee

Tribe Ends Season

Florida State's basketball team, acclaimed the best in Seminole history, finished its season with seven straight wins, building a 15-8 record against the toughest competition in FSU basketball history.

The Seminoles closed the season with wins over Valdosta State (72-42), Tampa (91-71), Georgia (71-62), Florida (79-56), Miami (83-80), Tampa (123-92), and Georgia (101-69). They averaged nearly 89 points in the seven wins, which brought their overall average to 81.2 from the floor. This should give Florida State the national honors for field goal percentage.

Leading the Seminoles from the floor was senior center Ray Swain of Jacksonville. The 6-4 co-captain hit a school record of 57.3 percent from the field and broke his own record of 53.7, which he set last year.

Honorable mention All American Dave Fedor led the Tribe in rebounds and total points (470, a 20.4 per game average. Fedor owns 1,453 points in a career, a school record. In addition, he played in every varsity game for three seasons and scored in double figures in all 72 contests

He led FSU in free throw percentage (78.4), hitting 78 percent for his three years of varsity competition. He dropped in 52.2 percent from the field, which brought his career percentage to 49.8. Swain hit one percent higher for the three seasons.

Earlier in the year, the Seminoles sparkled against top-ranked Ohio State when they fell, 72-57, in a game in which Jerry Lucas tallied only 11 points.

The Tribe lost to Wisconsin by one point (64-63) in a disputed game, in which FSU failed to score a field goal right before the buzzer. The Wisconsin coach said he felt FSU's field goal left the Seminoles' hands before the buzzer

The Indians split with the Auburn Tigers, winning one away and losing one at home. The Tribe also had an 11-point second half lead over NIT-bound Houston before falling, 87-76.

The Seminoles brushed aside the homecourt advantage of Florida, becoming the first team in 10 games to defeat the Gators on their home court

The low points of the Seminole season were the Clemson contests, which most fans expected FSU to win, and the Alabama loss

Seminoles Drop Gator Golf Team

The Florida State linkers shattered a jinx Monday afternoon by defeating the oft-victorious Florida golfers, 18½ to 8½, at the Capital City Country Club course

Florida has been the winner of the last five meetings between the Gators and Seminoles, dropping the Tribe 21½ to 5½ last year. The Gainesville golfers now lead the series, 716.

Manny Nordonw and Dave Philo of the Seminoles shot a 74 and 73 respectively to down Mickey McMahabob and Harry Root, who shot a 77 and 78.

Chuck Keating teamed with Tribesman Byron Bergeron to tally to 72 and 75. They dropped Marlyn Vogt (74) and Chip Anderson (73).

Phil Leckey (70) and Richard Leckey (73) beat Jim Hill (76) and Doug Davis 80).

Although Florida State won hte season opener, the baby Seminoles fell, 15½-2½ to the Baby Gators.

Soccer Meet Slated

All male students are invited to attend the practice meeting of the International Soccer Club, which will be held at 2:30 p.m. Saturday behind the Women's Gymnasium.

Tribe Vies In Open

The Florida State wrestling club will compete in the Jacksonville YMCA Open Invitational Tournament tomorrow in Jacksonville. The grapplers recently downed the Jacksonville YMCA in their first home match of the year.

The next meet will be March 23, when they compete in the North-South Invitational at Cocoa.

LESSON 4 = Why men watch girls

Men watch girls for various reasons. Personally, we need no better reason than the reason men climb mountains. They are there. We have heard old men say they watch girls because it makes them feel younger and young men because it makes them feel older (see above). While investigating the reasons why men watch girls we picked up a clue from, of all things, a bird watcher. He told us that he formerly had been a flower watcher. Then one day a Speckle-Breasted Jackdaw happened to land in his garden as he was watching a calla lily and he noticed that the bird moved. He switched to birds on the spot. Girl watchers have discovered that girls enjoy this same advantage (movement) over calla lilies. (Speaking of advantages, how about Pall Mall's natural mildness!)

BSU Begins 'Hobo' Drive

The Baptist Student Union has begun its annual HOBO Campaign to raise funds to support student missionaries this summer.

Each Baptist student is asked to contribute a minimum of $50 to the campaign. In addition, many students are doing odd jobs such as baby sitting, yardwork, housework, car washing, baking and typing to raise the funds.

The goal for this year has been set at $3,750. Last year, the FSU Baptist Student Union raised over $1,200 for the fund. Two FSU students, Norma DeCamp and Dawn Sheffield, served last year in Hawaii and Africa, respectively.

The students selected to serve on the Mission Boards give their time voluntarily and tthe Baptist students in Florida colleges and universities help provide their transportation.

Students will serve this summer in Thailand, the Philippines, Colorado, Ohio and California.

BSU will also sponsor a bake sale at the Student Center next Friday.

METHODIST

Dr. Robert O. Lawton, assistant dean of the School of Arts and Sciences, will speak on chapter five of the Gospel of Mark at the Sunday Morning Seminar at 9:30 a.m. in the main lounge of the Wesley Foundation. "The Japanese Christian" will be the topic of a talk by Rosemarie Kascher at the Forum Hour at 6:15 p.m.

FSU's Flying High Circus Tent Arrives Here Thursday

The big top is coming to Florida State University Thursday.

The new tent, which will seat 3,200, will be erected on the Circus lot and used for practice by the circus performers in preparation for the annual home show, May 1 through 5.

The tent and rigging are being purchased from Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey for $22,600 by FSU for the Circus under a loan through the Board of Control. Student Government is underwriting the loan, although the Circus will probably be able to pay the loan off within the required five years from gate receipts and from renting the tent out to organizations off campus.

Use of the tent will insure that the Circus will be able to present the home shows as scheduled. In previous years when Campbell Stadium was used for the Circus performances often the shows would be rained out, but last year when the Circus rented a tent the shows were able to go ahead as scheduled.

The home shows are presented in conjunction with Parent's Weekend. Shows will be presented nightly at 8 p. m., May 1 through 4. May 5, two shows will be presented, one at 5:30 p. m. and one at 8:30 p. m.

Tickets for the home shows will go on sale the first week in April. Coaches Jack Haskins and Ad Gilbert are urging that students obtain tickets early for the shows because of the great demand for tickets as the time for the performances actually nears.

As the big top is being completed, so also are final adjustments in the acts and costumes, the coaches said. Many of the same acts from last year will return, although some of the acts will be performed by different students and others have been completely revised.

The majority of the circus acts will be performed in a three ring display. There will be approximately 21 displays, the coaches said. All students who take Circus for credit and those who take it as an extra-curricular activity, will be performing in the Circus home shows.

The Circus has been making road trips, the coaches said recently about 35 performers eled to Miami and a group go to Winter Park, March 30 Montgomery, Ala., April 11

In addition to the Circus formances, activities on Par Weekend will include the Spring Football Game, closes spring football practice dependence pose as an internal threat, he said.

PAST PROBLEM

The Chinese who reside in Indonesia were a problem in the past, the Ambassador said, but we minimized the present problem.

Several million Overseas Chinese live in Indonesia. Since China accepts jus sanguine (citizenship by blood), all were claimed by China as Chinese citizens. Indonesia, however, accepts jus solis (citizenship by place of birth) and therefore held that persons born in Indonesia of Chinese descent were Indonesians. As a result, both nations were claiming these people as citizens.

The People's Republic of China (Communist China) and Indonesia have concluded an agreement to solve this dilemma, the Ambassador said. Each person is allowed to choose his citizenship and most have chosen to be Indonesians, he added.

OTHER NATIONS

Several other nations which have large minorities of Overseas Chinese, however, have not reached similar agreements with Peiping, the Ambassador said. These include Burma, the Philippines, Malaya, Thailand and Cambodia.

The Ambassador did not think there is any danger of another Communist Revolt in Indonesia, as there was in 1948, although he did classify the Indonesian Communist Party as one of the strongest in the nation.

To have a revolution, he said, there must be a reason, such as poverty or famine. The Government is trying to give food and clothing to the poor and is importing rice from other nations including the U. S.

Indonesia has voted consistently in the U. N. for admission of the People's Republic of China and has recognized Red China since 1950. As reasons for admission of China, he cited the size, population and population increase of the country and said it was necessary for the implementation of U. N. decisions.

"It (Red China) is a stable government. We cannot ignore them. It is much better to ask a representative of Red China to sit in the U. N.," he said. He stated that the means by which the Communists gained control of China was not of concern to other nations.

In supporting Indonesia's claim to West Irian (Irian Barat), the Ambassador said, "We have a lot of different ethnic groups but we are building one nation, one language, one flag."

"It is sometimes said that the people in Irian Barat are different from us. But they are not completely strange. Their kind are found on other Indonesian islands. We come from the same stock," he added.

He stressed that racial homogeneity is not a necessary ingredient for building a nation and pointed out that the people of Irian Barat are definately not of the same race as the Dutch who hold the island.

MELTING POT

"Like the United States, we are a melting pot," he said. Our motto is 'Unit With Diversity'.

When the Netherlands granted independence to Indonesia in 1949, she should have granted independence to all of Indonesia, including Irian Barat, he said. When Great Britain granted independence to India and Burma, she did not grant independence to only part of these nations, he concluded.

Dr. Bernard Cooper, FSU associate speech professor with the Radio and TV Dept., who has been consulted by the committee for advice on the film, stated his comments on the plan for the film. "Every university has books and mortar and every university has students. What we want to do is to examine what's inside those books and mortar and what is inside those students."

Wendell Vogt, cinematographer with the University Broadcasting Services, who is in charge of the film production division of WFSU-TV, would be in charge of making the film.

A man who has had much experience in the film field and who has won several awards for cinematography, Vogt has been interested in the idea of a promotional film for several years and is pleased to see this project under consideration.

ADEQUATE FACILITIES

The FSU film studio has facilities to make the film, Stripling reports. "We are being supported at almost all angles. Our main obstable is financial," he said.

At present, the committee is negotiating with the staff and administration for appropriations to carry through the project, he said.

Working with Stripling on the committee are Sens. Arnie Gibbs and Gretchen Uzzell.

Senate Hears Class Ideas

Recommendations that present rules governing class officers including the two-semester term of office, stand for the coming year, will be voiced when Student Senate convenes tomorrow.

These suggestions were agreed upon by members of the trimester committee in meeting Sunday.

"Due to the fact that next year will be a transition perood, future decisions are going to be based heavily on recommendations from the class officers chosen in the coming elections," said Johnny Smith, ex-officio member of the committee.

There is at present a plan being formulated for a future class council to take over the duties and responsibilities that the present class officers now hold. According to the committee, new class officers would be making recommendations and looking out for obstacles in changing over to this plan.

As it now stands according to Smith, there will be a bill introduced into senate creating a class council to replace class officers. If this does pass Smith said, it will not go into effect until next year and until then class officers would be instrumental in making plans for the operation of that council.

Virgil Austin (left) has the role of Nika Magodoff, the magician, in the Menotti opera.

'The Consul' Starts Tonight

Gian Carlo Menotti's Pulitzer-prize winning opera The Consul opens tonight at 8:15 p. m. in Conradi Theatre. The production, sponsored jointly by the University Theatre and Opera Guild, is directed by Richard Fallon and Richard Collins.

Scheduled for a five - night run, The Consul features Hedi Svendsen, Joy Davidson, and Tom Teague in the singing leads.

The opera tells the story of the wife of a "freedom fighter" in a dictatorial state who is trying to join her husband who has fled to a free country.

The part of Nika Magadoff, the magician, is played by Virgil Austin. Austin has to turn gloves into flowers, make small balls appear and disappear, as well as do other tricks of magic.

The Consul has been acclaimed, after its success in New York, as a new form, somewhere between opera and drama, which brought poetry back to the contemporary theatre.

Tickets for the production are on sale at Westcott Ticket Office at $1 for students and $2 for non-students.

Trophies presented at the banquet will include the Phi Mu social service trophy to the sorority which has contributed the most to the needs of the campus and the community through active service during the preceeding year. In presenting the trophy, emphasis will be placed on the contribution of service rather than that of money. Group participation in Pamellenic service drives will not be considered in the awarding of this trophy.

Sedore To Conduct Symphony Concert Friday Night With LaMar At Piano

The University Symphony, conducted by Robert Sedore, will present a concert Friday, at Florida State University with Richard LaMar as solo pianist for two numbers.

The concert, third of the season for the orchestra, will be at 8:15 p.m. in Westcott Auditorium. The concert is free and open to the public.

The program will open with Bach's "Piano Concerto No. 5 in F minor." It will be followed by "Totentanz, for Piano and Orchestra" (Dance of Death) by Franz Liszt. LaMar will be soloist for both numbers. The second selection, a dance of death based on the old plain song chant, is considered by musicians to require a great deal of skill from the piano soloist.

LaMar holds bachelor's and master's degrees from FSU and is a candidate for a Doctor of Music Degree in Piano Literature. He is, at present, a member of the faculty of North Carolina Woman's College, Greensboro, N.C. where he teaches piano. A student of the late Ernst von Dohnanyi, he is now studying with Edward Kilenyi. LaMar has played with the Miami Symphony and has given numerous piano recitals in Florida, Texas, and Washington, D.C.

The program will end with the orchestra playing "Pictures from an Exhibition" by Modest P. Moussorgsky. This selection functions as a musical trip through a gallery. Miussorgsky composed the pieces from his reactions to a posthumous exhibition of drawings and water-colors by Victor Hartmann, a close friend.

Judge Rudd Talks At Liberal Forum

Questions and answers flew back and forth with fervor when John A. Rudd of the Tallahassee Municipal Court spoke before a packed house Sunday night in the Unitarian Chapel.

Judge Rudd a city judge for nine years who was recently recognized by the Tallahassee Bar Association as "an outstanding municipal judge in the field of traffic law enforcement" was the guest speaker at the weekly session of the Liberal Forum.

DUTIES OF JUDGE

He briefly described the duties of a municipal court judge and then opened the discussion to questions from the audience.

He was immediately questioned as to the right of peaceful assembly and the differences between a peaceful gathering and an unlawful one. The speaker gave his definition on an unlawful assembly as one where a group is gathered together with the express intent or the knowledge before hand that their appearance or action will tend to incite a riot or if a peaceable assembly becomes riotous.

Fielding the question of civil rights, Judge Rudd said that he didn't believe that the question could be solved by the Supreme Court in any single case. He sighted statistics showing the court had reversed or changed its decisions nine times in the past three months. He questioned the right of the court to completely close the issue to further legislation or court interpretation.

HOMOSEXAUALITY

The questioning then turned to reported cases of homosexuality and his handling of some of the more celebrated cases. He replied that, in one instance, he had requested a professor to either stand trial or to forfeit his bond and resign from the University. He requested that the reason for his resignation be listed on the professor's record but denied that he had expressly told University officials to fire him.

The conversation shifted to the question of police authority in the search of homes and the right to stop people in cars and on the streets to inquire about their reason for being in a particular section and their immediate destination.

POLICE FORCE

Judge Rudd defended the Tallahassee Police Dept. saying that he had never seen a group of harder working individuals.

Youth Needs Facts

Published in the March 11 edition of the St. Petersburg Times is a course outline for the Americanism Versus Communism course to be instituted in the Florida school system. Every intelligent Floridian, interested in the preservation of his country and its freedom, would be wise to read this outline closely.

The rise of intense anti-communism in the United States has been rapid. Only a few years ago school boards would not allow Communism to be mentioned in the public classrooms. Many Americans demanded that the youth of this nation be left ignorant to the doctrine and the international threat which it presents.

RECENTLY, HOWEVER, Americans have become aware that communism could not be ignored and have attempted to combat it with varying degrees of effectiveness. This course is part of that combat program.

Basically, the course is broken down into four areas: The Communist Party, The Communist Ideology, The Soviet System, and Khrushchev in Power.

The objectives of the course are:

1. DEVELOP A GREATER appreciation of the American heritage, democratic processes, freedom of opportunity, enterprise under law, and the will to preserve that freedom
2. UNDERSTAND WHAT the threat of communism means to the freedom of the people of our Nation
3. OBTAIN THE FACTUAL picture of the phenomenon of communism in all its aspects
4. ACHIEVE a thorough understanding of the nature and evils of communism
5. BECOME AWARE of the grounds on which free people of the world have condemned communism.

The course includes sections on Party History, Party Organization, Party Operation, Historical Background, The Capitalist Society, Dialectical Materialism, Historical Development, and other informative topics.

When this course was proposed, we opposed its institution, feeling that the slant of the course, as proposed in the legislature, made it nothing more than propaganda session. The outline, however, askes questions which provoke sincere thought.

The responsibility still lies with the teachers. Communism should be taught, but it should be taught with facts. Floridians should become familiar with the outline and insure that the youth of the state get honest, truthful facts.

BCS

A Beautiful Idea

Once a year, the small Central Florida community of Winter Park holds an event which is worthy of careful consideration by Florida State University.

WINTER PARK, like FSU, is the home of many artists, professional and amateur. The community takes great pride in the creative talents of its citizens, and encourages them as much as possible. This civic pride gave birth to the town's annual Sidewalk Art Festival, in which artists are invited to set up their canvases along the broad sidewalks of the main street.

Many of the participants bring a partially completed piece and continue to work on it during the display. This gives other inhabitants the chance to see not only the finished product, but also the processes which go into making it.

THE FSU ART DEPARTMENT often presents beautiful displays of work by students and professors, but they find students either unwilling or unable to make the trek up to the art gallery. Usually, students simply forget about the display since they rarely go by the museum in the course of an ordinary day.

If, however, the campus artists could set up shop on Landis Green for a day or two, they would probably find students more than willing to stop for a few moments to browse and watch. Weather reports would have to be given careful consideration, of course, but an outdoor show would be more than worth the trouble.

ALSO, THE NATURAL beauty of the campus in Spring, with dogwoods and azaleas blooming all around, would make a charming and picturesque setting for such a display.

We hope that the Art Department will investigate the possibilities of an outdoor show, although there is no real reason why it would have to be limited to art majors and professors. Other students and townspeople might enjoy participating in the experiment.

The Name Is Mudd

By HOWARD DENSON

Two fellow staff members, both fraternity men, were discussing at a letter from the Ku Klux Klan the other day. And, I thought, how strange that they should test so, especially since the fraternal system spawned the KKK.

THEY PROTESTED, of course, when I mentioned it, but its pity it was the truth, regardless of their moanful laments.

The Ku Klux Klan was born in pre-ante bellum days in a small college in South Carolina, where a group of youthful, zestful, and generally genial lads assembled every Saturday night to partake of some spirited ambrosia.

AFTER A WHILE, they augmented the beverages with a bit of cards (although some preferred mint julep in their booze), playing four card, three, stud, go fish, etc. And eventually one of the lads, a member of the Southern aristocracy said "This heah organanzation of ouah's need ah name, y'all."

They assented and, after four days of duelling, decided upon Kappa Kappa Kappa, hence the name KKK.

AS ALL FRATERNAL, sororital, and Greekal groups go, naturally the student body of the school began calling the KKK the Tri-Kapps. And since they possessed such a descriptive title, if one wanted to be punny, they began wearing pointed hats in their initiation services.

On the night of each initiation, tapping, they could be seen riding on white horses, wearing white robes, and carrying crosses, which had yellow flames.

THE TORCHES WERE the idea of the son of Colonel Buford B. Beauregard, who decided that, since the group was an organization of youths who were Christian scholars, they needed a composite symbol, hence, the cross, representing Christians, and the fire, signifying the torch of knowledge.

Ah, but sad to say, the fraternity (as others have) fell into rapid decline. After the ill-fated battle of Bull Run, in which four of the nicest brothers were trampled to death by a stampeding quadriped, the KKK had to lower its standards and begin letting rabble in.

THE FIRST TO GET IN, Harry Q. Rabble by name, was a lad with a sneaky eye (having lost the other one in a poker game), a surly lip (having gotten frost-bite while playing a trumpet in a snow storm), and a serpentine gait (having snakes in his boots).

Immediately after his admission, bad days descended as all the Rabbles were let in the KKK, including Zeke, Nikita, Oscar, Homer, Hobert, Pomphret, and Adlai.

THE REST IS HISTORY. Everyone knows how the name was altered from Kappa Kappa Kappa to Ku Klux Klan, the rabble, fond of playing with cue sticks in pool and fond of stealing clucking chickens, changed the title to Ku Klux Klan. And now the KKK's name is Mud, the regional leader being George (The Anglo-Saxon) Mudd.

A Plan

How To Be 'Great'

By CARL ROSENBUSH, JR.

When the late Robert M. Strozier was president of Florida State University, he frequently and on the slightest provocation, especially at quarterback clubs, declaimed that this would become a Great University. After much cogitation on this subject, I have formulated a plan by which FSU may become a Great University.

This is a plan which will bring us more fame and prestige than either buying an expert football team or promoting a race riot. The plan is simple: It is to have FSU investigated on a nationally televised hearing of the House Un-American Activities Committee.

The first of two primary problems is to choose Congressmen who will best represent the spirit of the Committee and McCarthy. This can be solved by selecting those with the greatest seniority as Sons-of-Birchers.

Finding a solution to the second problem, that of deciding upon a subject for investigation, is much simpler. There is a great variety to choose from. For instance, they could investigate the University Symphony for playing music written by Russian composers to determine if they are subtlely drawing students to the left. Of they could investigate students taking Physics 111 to see if they are putting information learned in the laboratory to sinister use. Perhaps the nuclear accelerator is a cleverly disguised bomb designed to destroy our crack ROTC divisions. The Committee could investigate fraternities for painting the town Red. The library could be censored for stocking books written in Russian. Finally, they could investigate the faculty to see if they are true patriots; that is, if they belong to the American Legion, Daughters of American Revolution, or Lone Ranger Safety Club.

As I stated before, this could be the beginning of greatness. The purchase of a crack football team would only put us on the sports page, and the promotion of a race riot would be reported only in Life, Time, and Tallahassee Democrat. But a full-scale investigation by the HUAC over television would cause people, as they switch from Peter Gunn, Frontier Circus, Gunsmoke and Mighty Mouse, to watch great men at work ridding us of witches, to say: "Since FSU is on twenty hours a week of prime viewing time and has the top TV rating, it is indeed a Great University."

Letters, Letters,

Helps Tillich

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to respond to two articles which appeared in last Tuesday's Flambeau concerning Paul Tillich.

Firstly, I would like to say sincerely that I thought the news story lacked the best penmanship. Not only were some things wrong, but one statement was completely backwards from the way Tillich stated. In some respects, I can understand this difficulty for the writer because Tillich is a very deep thinker and for those who do not understand him every sentence is important. Maybe it would have been better to have had someone in the Philosophy and Religion Dept. review the coverage before it was presented in the Flambeau.

Secondly, the same writer's column entitled, "Did Tillich Believe?", certainly was uncalled for. I would like to say that Dr. Tillich is upward in his seventies and had been ill during this time. Many activities had been planned for his visit here, but the day before his arrival his secretary phoned to ask that these activities be kept to the very minimum. Also, having a German accent, Tillich had to speak slowly to try to be more distinct. It is fallacious reasoning to assume that because a person's delivery is not enthusiastic, then he did not believe what he was saying. I hope that possibility this may clear up any misunderstandings concerning Tillich's lecture.

Personally, I was on the edge of my seat throughout the entire lecture and was not distracted by anything for each sentence that Tillich writes or speaks is like a "capsule loaded with dynamite." He was certainly the most profound lecturer I have ever heard.

TO THE EDITOR:

I am very ashamed to think that such a person as "Name Withheld" is a student at FSU.

I am privileged to know each of the women senators who sponsored the bill and am convinced that they have been greatly slandered.

Opinions such as those expressed by "Name Withheld" can only serve to add importance to anything which these senators have said. I firmly endorse this bill and hope that every other FSU student will too.

Wanna Trade?

DEAR ROBERT SANCHEZ:

When you speak about the elimination of the Air Force by consolidation as a means of solving a problem, you are all wet!

May I make my sentiments clear concerning the Air Force: I was an enlisted man, and upon departure from said service, I had a healthy distaste for it or any other.

It is quite obvious you have had no intimate contact with the Air Force. Your article of March 6 indicates that. The Air Force program was launched with many questions unanswered, but I believe as many others do that they have done a damn good job in the past fifteen years.

When you laugh at SAC and condemn it with the idea of consolidation! Don't you agree SAC has maintained the balance of power since '53? And half the recipe to make this outfit jell is the espirit de corps.

Only time gives tradition. Keep in mind the handicaps faced by the new Air Academy and you will admit it is producing fine officers.

One main reason in splitting the services was to increase the efficiency of the administration. The only thing accomplished by consolidation would be longer times between KP duty. So what da ya say Bob ole buddy-poo! Why don't ya army trade 2,000 of dem choppers for an X-15?

The Apartment Bill: Zap!

TO THE EDITOR:

Congratulations! . . . to the seven senators who presented the very timely and logical bill concerning women visiting men's apartments. At last someone is thinking along the terms of the people of our generation instead of the traditionalists of the late 19th century.

This bill must and should pass. It concerns those women who shall go to men's apartments for, to use the phrase, above table activities and nothing else. Young women who go to men's apartments for "close" activities are going now, regardless of the rules and will probably continue to do so until they are caught.

If a rule is considered fair and good, then it is upheld by the students themselves. If we are to be called adults by the administration, then by gosh, it's high time we were treated as adults. We're tired of hearing people say "Wait until you're twenty-one, then you can . . ."

By the way, "Pleasures," I consider myself a "decent" woman and I believe in every statement I have made. I challenge anyone to dispute me, and my name is not withheld. This bill is for the mature young adults who go to this university and they should most certainly have it.

KAREN THORNTON
Asst. Man. Editor
Smoke Signals

DEAR NAME WITHHELD:

What does Women's Senate think we are trying to do? We are trying, desperately, to update Women's rules on this campus.

As one of the sponsors, I am proud to say this bill was the product of numerous requests by constituents and of much serious thought on the part of each Senator who put her name on this bill.

We do not seek to degrade the moral standard of our women students. We hope that through a more realistic approach to rules, we will be better prepared to assume our positions in society after leaving this institution.

When students want to gather together to cook a meal, play bridge, dance, or just talk, they should be allowed to do so without fear of punishment from student courts or the administration. I believe in allowing persons who abide by the rules the opportunity of enjoying the privileges enjoyed by those who do not.

GINNY BOYD
Day Student Senator

DEAR NAME WITHHELD:

After reading your letter in Friday's Flambeau, I feel that FSU is in dire need of a campus psychologist for people like you.

I take your letter as a direct insult to the morals of the women at FSU. In my personal opinion, I feel that each and every good girl here can be trusted to keep the high morals of FSU without any archaic, victorian rules sponsored by the administration.

Women's Senate is trying to modernize FSU and make it a progressive institution. Why do and the administration want to hold them back?

TOM SISCO
Class Senator

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to challenge the writer of "Pleasures" by "Name withheld by request" by standing up for my opinion and that of others. As I read his (her) article, I cannot help but wonder why someone so strongly convinced that the "Apartment Bill" will corrupt women's morals has not even enough fortitude to stand by his convictions.

What does he mean by the fact that Senate would be condoning bad morals by passing such a bill which would only be condoning the already prevailing practice that women could visit men's apartments, with the addition of the chaperone stipulation, of course. There are many reasons, such as a group of friends preparing a home-cooked meal, or spending the evening with the television set, which give this practice a perfectly moral slant.

Not everyone is going to be immoral given a chance. A perfectly respectable college woman will not jump at the chance to gain "pleasures" with her male companion. As a male friend of mine from Gainesville so precisely put it, "A good girl will not do anything wrong at a man's apartment; a bad girl would have already been there anyway."

So, I don't see that there should be such extreme convictions and conclusions drawn from the possibility of such a bill as the senate may wish to pass.

PATRICIA BASSETT

TO THE EDITOR:

The writer of the "Name Withheld By Request" letter in last Friday Flambeau, seems to lack a basic knowledge of good taste and propriety.

The writer quite obviously does not know the sponsors of the bill. I can assure him (or her) that these senators are among the finest and most outstanding women on campus and that their character is far above his defamous implications.

The sponsors of Bill 16 comprise anything but a "fringe group." The seven sponsors are: Nancy Sindon, Jeanie Ferlita, Clyda Stokes, Ginny Boyd, Jeanne Graham, Pat Doomar and Cathy Young. If you are at all familiar with student government or honoraries on this campus you would certainly have recognized the names. Or did you bother finding out whom you charged with lacking respectibility?

MYGNON CHAMPION
President, Women's Senate

TO THE EDITOR:

Again eyes are focused on women's rules and typewriters are clicking. I don't consider myself a great moral judge (like some people do) but I do like to retain my self-respect. I can do this only by realizing that I live the way I do because I chose to, not because someone told me to! If our young friend (name withheld, last issue) does not consider herself responsible enough to choose between right and wrong, then by all means she needs rules! Why not have a special set of rules for those who need them and let the rest of us live as the responsible, self-respecting adults that we are.

MARY ANN STEVENS

DEAR NAME WITHHELD:

First of all, how can this bill or results of this bill "lower the moral standards of the university?"

Most of the young women I know here seem to me to be perfectly capable of choosing what their standards should be and as far as a man's apartment lowering those standards, I fail to see how.

TO THE EDITOR:

After reading the letters in Friday's Flambeau, we [illegible] compelled to answer. We do not understand that sponsorship or support of the new men's apartment bill has any connection with the "decency" of the women students, nor do we think the bill is "immoral."

In our opinion, the women supporting this bill have at least as much right to [illegible] as anyone else [illegible], perhaps, than the letter writer, for they have the courage to print their names.

We would like to add [illegible] to the list of those supporting this bill since we [illegible] a reasonable step forward [illegible] ing women's rules into a more realistic perspective.

TO THE EDITOR:

I would like to ask Miss Name Withheld by Request how she should happen to know just what "pleasures" can only be enjoyed in a man's apartment.

She seems to be [illegible] the idea that anything other than "immoral activity" can be carried out in a man's apartment. If she thinks that what goes on in men's apartments is immoral, then she should take a look around campus some time.

One of the main reasons that this rule has always been [illegible] ed before is that it is both ridiculous and illogical. We feel that the efforts of that very farsighted and courageous "fringe group" Women's Senate is the most intelligent thing done on campus all year.

HAZEL J. WINCHELL

TO THE EDITOR:

As a member of the "fringe group" mentioned in "Name Withheld's" letter and a strong backer of the apartment bill, I feel compelled to answer her letter.

I would like to define one of the psychological defense mechanisms for her benefit. Projection is that defense mechanism whereby the person redirects the original impulse (e.g., hate) and projects the exact opposite reaction (e.g., love). This may well be "Name Withheld's" problem. In any case, she is interpreting the meaning of the bill in a perverted way. The bill is not trying to undermine the moral system of FSU. It is merely allowing males and females to meet socially in the homes of male students. Since an apartment is a home, a man's apartment is his home. Therefore, there is nothing wrong or immoral about a gentleman entertaining a lady in his home with at least two other ladies present.

BETTY GUNN

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

I fail to see what is immoral about the bill. All it does is allow a freedom of choice that every individual should enjoy as free people in a free society.

Assuming that "NWBR" is a woman, then maybe she has never been invited to a man's apartment and hence, wants to keep everybody's fun. I say if you haven't tried it, don't knock it.

TO THE EDITOR:

I have the dubious honor of having at least in part contributed to provoking an editorial last Tuesday. First of all, it is clear that LP is a newcomer to Liberal Forum. Welcome aboard! It will take you some time to get used to the proceedings, but I think it well worth the effort.

I should like to touch only upon two points, raised in the editorial, for which I feel directly responsible. My answer to anyone unable to understand "foreign" terms used in English is still to learn as many foreign languages as you can. It is well known that the spirit of language is such that no documentation is necessary to back me up in this contention. It was certainly the case in point on Sunday night (Ed. Note: March 4) for "le mot juste"; I challenge Mr. Shaara to give me a satisfactory equivalent. I thought that this should be particularly obvious to a writer who depends on the command of many shades of meaning of myriad terms from all quarters to have the necessary freedom of expression.

Lest I be misunderstood in my reply to Mr. Shaara's query concerning to whom I felt I had my first duty: if you stop and think for a moment, you will tend to agree with me that one's first and foremost duty is always to oneself. This in no way makes a "cold-fish" intellectual attitude of owing nothing to anyone." It really only depends on one's own conscience.

On the whole, I usually enjoy your Editorial Page.

Big Brother

DEAR STUDENT PARTY:

This system of yours . . . sure, it's efficient for you, and for the people you want nominated. I mean this nonsense of selecting your own delegates to the convention rather than letting the student body choose the people they want to represent them. Of course the people selected will be the ones who will vote the "right" way because they want to see the "best" man win.

Come on, Big Brother, whoever you are.

One thing for sure. The man who didn't get the nomination will get two votes . . . his own and mine. Mine, because the other candidate by having his name linked with the little "SP" on the ballot has given condemnation to your practices, so I'll vote against him. Maybe this isn't the right method. But is yours?

What's FSU's Future in Big-Time Football

If we are not mistaken, educational institutions gage in intercollegiate athletics for the general in- est and enjoyment of their students. FSU's athletic rtment has shown no intention of pursuing a y that the students support or fully understand. As one freshman commented, "What is so great about the utheastern Conference that we want to get in it so badly?" As are told, SEC membership would facilitate FSU's recruiting ngers of high school athletes.

this were true and since we now recruit without that advan- then our teams should be presently losing to SEC team with y. But this is not true, a look at the record will illustrate our teams, with the exception of fooball, have done rather well.

If SEC membership were an assurance of a successful re- ing campaign in football, why are schools such as Vander- Tulane, and Mississippi State, not consistent football winners?

We can presume that what makes SEC football teams power- es is not conference membership but rather misappropriation nds, sometimes to the neglect of scholastics.

We are told that FSU schedules football giants, such as Au- or Mississippi, because we need to acquire prestige and money er to enter the conference of football conscious schools. Does g to Ole Miss, 33-0, or to the War Eagles, 57-21, increase our ge?"

is a known fact that playing in Oxford, Miss., before a d of 12,000, most of which were students, does not profit any- We believe that the Seminoles would have done much better, nomically and prestige-wise, by playing a team more within r class.

We are also certain that the student body would rather see ght it out to the last second against Wake Forest, for in- e in Tallahassee than to listen to the radio give the results a 33-0 stomping.

as been announced that we play five SEC powerhouses next n football . . . in addition to Miami and others. Also we that FSU students will witness only four home games.

For a team that has not won an away game since 1950, this suicidal. We are quite aware that the game with Georgia Tech anta with Florida at Gainesville, and with Miami at the city, will be quite profitable for us, but why can't we formu- more advantageous and realistic schedule? Must we always eams that are out of our class?

espite the Florida tie and the victory over the Bulldogs, a the overall record will show that FSU's chances against erhouses are not promising.

e explanations are many, but the most important one is FSU's athletic budget does not compare with Florida's or s, therefore we cannot expect to come out on top with any ency against such opposition in football, where money rules to give an illustration, Miami's head coach earns $21,000 while FSU's Bill Peterson makes about $15,000. This is an indication of the discrepancies of the football budgets two institutions. This is not due to the balance of wealth at ent schools, but to the emphasis placed on different values. ere are many universities that follow moderate programs ball (FSU, for instance), and these are not necessarily push-

FSU students would probably not feel insulted if schools as North Carolina State, Wake Forest, Virginia Tech, Boston e, Villanova, etc. made up the bulk of our football schedule d this does not mean that we have to drop traditional rivals a or Miami from our schedule.

As it appears now, FSU is not ready financially to pursue big football in the Ole Miss or LSU manner. Nevertheless, our policymakers are attempting to project us into big time al with the idea that it will help us obain Southeasern Con- ce membership—which, to them, is the most wonderful thing could happen to FSU.

Tracksters Hit Miami

The Florida State track team opened its season Saturday by swamping the University of Miami Hurricanes, 77-54, in a dual meet held on Florida field.

Florida State, which has defeated the Canes for eight straight times, was strongest in the hurdles and the dashes, while the Miami cindermen came through in the mile and two-mile runs and the field events.

Quentin Till, the Seminole co-captain, spearheaded the Indian's attack as he toured the 220 in 22.3 and the 440 in 48.8. Jeff Clark, the other co-captain, pushed the Tribe ahead as he slung the shotput for a 53-10½ distance. This was good enough to smash a seven - year - old meet record.

Herby Kraft came through for the Seminoles when he leaped 23 - 8½ in the broad jump to set a meet record. Teammate John Brocksmith rewrote the 880 meet record by negotiating the course in 1:56.0.

Ed Hayes soared 13-5¾ feet into the air to shatter the old mark. Terry Long wound out the Seminoles' record breaking for the day by running the low hurdles in 23.9.

Overall, the Seminoles captured 10-of-15 events, in addition to their five meet records.

The summary:

AFTER INVENTIVE DRILLS

Batmen To Face Bulldogs

By CHARLIE INTRIAGO
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Florida State Seminoles will open their 1962 baseball season Wednesday against the University of Georgia Bulldogs. The game will start at 3:30 p.m. on the FSU diamond. A second game is scheduled at 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

Slated for mound duty for FSU is co-captain Ray McShane. The other co-captain for this season's campaign is John Madison.

Georgia coach Jim Whatley will send either Charlie Bagby, John Wyatt, or Don Pierce against the Seminoles in the two games. The Bulldogs will be led by outfielder Tommy Vandiver, (.338), second baseman Robert Sapp (.338), and outfielder Benny Cheek (.310).

COACHING AIDS

The baseballers will soon have a pitching instructor working full time in finding flaws in pitchers' deliveries and willing to show the hurlers exactly what they seem to be doing wrong.

This tutor will work full time and accept no pay. This will be true only because the instructor isn't human. The ingenious head baseball Coach Danny Litwhiler has come up with a contraption which he calls the "pitching instructor."

It is a concave mirror ¾" thick and standing 3x5 feet. The pitcher will wind up and deliver into the mirror with a regular baseball and thereby see any hitch in his motion. The mirror is being prepared by the Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co. and soon will be delivered to the FSU teams . . . and to the Chicago White Sox, whose manager, Al Lopez, made a special trip to see the invention.

He showed much interest in the "instructor" and also in the other Litwhiler creations, including a batting cage that permits five men to practice simultaneously.

The batter stands in a wire mesh cage about the size of a dorm room, and the pitcher delivers the ball from outside through a hole in the side of the cage. With this batting cage, much manpower is saved from having to field for the batter.

THE SPRAY DOG

The Kansas City Athletics' head grounds keeper recently offered to trade an $11,000 infield canvas for another Litwhiler and Co. invention. This one is called the "Spray- Dog machine." It rakes and waters the infield at the same time in one clean swoop. Thus is done by means of a small tractor pulling a long steel rake around the infield and at the same time watering the dirt.

BUNTING BAT

The White Sox, the Cincinnati Reds, and the New York Yankees are now using the Litwhiler "bunting bat" to help their players regain the lost art of bunting. This bat has inserts cut about halfway up the length, while the "meat" part of the bat is cut in half with only the bottom part remaining. This reduces pop-ups in a bunt situation.

Lamar Tech Whitewashes FSU Netters

Florida State's tennis team started its 1962 season last week with a "fowl" match with the Lamar Tech netters, in which the Cardinals swept the Indians in all events.

The netters will go against the University of Georgia Bulldogs at 1:30 p.m. Thursday on the FSU courts.

Tribesman Paul Scarpa gave the Cardinals their biggest threat of the afternoon when he defeated Francis Rawstorne, 7-5, in the first singles set. In the second set, however, Rawstorne triumphed, 7-5. Scarpa was unable to play the third set because of leg cramps, and Tech won the event by default.

Grady Smith fell to Tech's John Maloney, as the Cardinal won, 12-10 and 6-3. Then Al Driscole of Tech swept Ed Fusula, 6-2 and 6-3, to give the Cards their third voctory.

Jamie Jameison of FSU was dropped, 6-1 and 6-2, in Tech's fourth win. Tim Heckler did the honors. Robin Spengler socked FSU's Bob Berry in a 6-1 set and a 6-2 set, and then Alfonso Ochoa of Tech triumphed as he downed Mike Dyer in two 6-1 sets.

The Cardinals also won both doubles matches as the team of Heckler and Spengler dropped Fusula and Jameison, 6-2 and 6-1. Ochoa and Driscole socked Dyer and Berry in a 6-1 set and a 6-3 set.

Having won 39 straight matches over a three year period, the Cardinals had only lost two sets last year.

Gator Tankers Dunk Tribe In FSU's Last Dual Meet

By VICTOR COMOLLI
Asst. Sports Editor

Florida State's swimming team ended its 1962 dual meet season as they were stunned, 63-32 by the University of Florida. The defeat was the worst ever handed to a Seminole swim team, snapped a 19-meet winning string, and ruined FSU's chances for an undefeated campaign.

The Tribe concluded the season with a 12-1 record.

Earlier in the season, FSU had handed the Gators their only defeat of the year in a Montgomery Pool match, but this time the Seminoles could not match the sensational performance of the Gators.

The Seminoles only managed to take 2-of 11 events. Lee Bransford's :49.5 effort in the 100 freestyle was one of the Seminoles' short - lived bright moments. The other one was in the 440 freestyle, which Bill Dahl won in 4.45.1.

Cheered on by a crowd of 2,000 in their spacious pool, the Gators ended an eight-meet string of losses to FSU, which dated back to 1957.

FSU' potent freshman team kept the afternoon from being a complete rout by handing the Florida frosh a rousing 68-27 defeat. The baby tankers ended their season with a perfect 7-0 record, which included two impressive victories over Florida.

The frosh were sparked by Jim Mullally, who won the 100 backstroke in a FSU frosh record time of :58.4, and Doug Kruger, whose surprising 1:06.5 in the 100 backstroke set a new FSU frosh record.

Seminole divers, Neal Allen and James Payne, took first and second respectively and finished the season with no defeats by divers from other schools.

The 200 medley relay was won for FSU by Mullally, Sherman Henderson, Ted Roth, and Mark Cohen in 1:49.5.

Cohen, who came in second in the 200 individual medley, combined with Charles Tandy, Gene Daton, and Bruce Quayle to capture the 200 freestyle relay in 1:35.5.

The scheduled Florida Inter - collegiate championships, which were scheduled Saturday in Montgomery Pool, have been cancelled.

Linkers To Vie In State Meet

The Florida State University golf team will compete in the annual Florida Intercollegiate Golf Tournament, which will be held Thursday in Ocala.

The tourney will involve teams from FSU, Florida, Miami, Tampa, Rollins, Stetson, and several of the junior colleges in the state.

The Seminoles opened their season last week by trouncing the University of Florida on the Tribe's home course.

Lambda Chi Alpha social fraternity took the top scholarship honors for this past Fall semester with an over all average of 2.403. This is the seventh time in eight semesters that the Lambda Chi's have won first place scholarship awards.

Vernon Sanders, fraternity president, attributes his fraternity's leadership to the "general scholastic attitude of the group." He also mentioned the recent raise in scholarship requirements for initiation to a 2.2 and remarked that this new requirement will help maintain "the quality leadership and the success of Lambda Chi Alpha."

The Lambda Chi average was above the all fraternity of 2.211. The all men's average of 2.27 was slightly above the Greek overall. Commenting on this, Hal Smith, fraternity counselor, stated that "a trend to the positive" was being realized by the present and past FSU Greek averages.

Second place was held by Sigma Phi Epsilon with a 2.365 and third by Kappa Alpha with 2.333. Phi Delta Theta finished fourth with a 2.308 and Sigma Alpha Epsilon was fifth with a 2.307.

SOME 200 BOOKS COLLECTED BY THE FLORIDA STATE University chapter of Alpha Phi Omega, national service fraternity, will go to enrich road prison libraries in the state. Here L. W. Griffith, superintendent of road prisons (center), and his administrative assistant, Malcolm Hill (left) accept the books from Alpha Phi Omega President Jerry Spinks. The books, most of them on academic subjects, were donated to the fraternity by Bill's Bookstore for the prison library project. They will be sent to Brooksville and Palatka road prisons.

The final selection comes after long and careful screening of all applicants, he added.

Dr. Fox stressed the desire of the Corps for qualified young people to train for service abroad, "for" he said, "we can't afford to make mistakes, as we have in the past."

WHO'S WHO BILL

Following Dr. Fox's talk, Senate discussed and passed a bill which concerns candidates for Who's Who. A vote of 16 dissenting, 1 abstaining, and 25 favoring, was cast on the bill which provides that a person must have maintained a minimum 2.5 overall grade average for five semesters in order to be eligible for the list of nominees.

The bill provides for certain exceptions to the required 2.5 average as follows: If a person falls below the 2.5 average but is among the top five qualifying students, his name may be added to the ballot, as long as his overall grade average does not fall below the over - all student average for the prior second trimester.

It was reported to senate that the over - all student average for last year's second semester was a 2.4281. This is not far below the required average, but will vary slightly from year to year.

TRIMESTER

Additional bills were presented to Senate by the Trimester Committee, changing or amending the student Body Statutes to suit the new system.

Two of these bills, concerning the duties, functions, and assistants of the Attorney General and the Secretary of Student Welfare, were discussed and passed unanimously.

A third bill dealing with the duties of the Secretary of Internal Affairs, was introduced and discussed. The bill includes sections on the cheerleading activities and the homecoming committees. It was referred to the Organizations and Finance Committee.

Before Senate's adjournment, two bills were presented by the Organizations and Finance Committee. These were discussed and referred until their second reading to the Labor, Student Services, and Education Committee. They concern the duties of the treasurers of student organizations, and the operation of these organizations within specified budget regulations.

COMMITTEE REPORTS

Reports given to senate by investigating committees showed that there are signs in favor of the proposed promotional movie for F. S. U., that the present distribution of the Flambeau is based on an extensive study of student needs; and that the registrar's office has already worked out a registration system for the coming years. Next year last name initials will determine registration appointments, beginning with Z and going to A.

Annual Summer Music Camps Are Planned By Music Department

The School of Music has announced that the 21st Annual Summer Music Caps will be held June 24 through Aug. 10, at Florida State University.

The anticipated enrollment of all the camps is one thousand students. Their purpose is to offer a broad educational experience to Florida's superior junior and senior high school music students.

With Dr. K. O. Kuersteiner as director and Owen Sellers and Gene Simons as associate directors, the camps consist of four programs designed to meet the special interest areas of the students.

Approximately 375 students are expected to attend the first program, the five - week Summer Music Camp, which offers training in symphony orchestra, chorus, operetta and dance band. Dr. Manley Whitcomb, Robert Braunagel and Oliver Hobbs will direct the bands; Herman Guntter, the chorus; Robert Sedore the camp symphony.

There will be classes in music theory, sight singing, orchestration, music literature, ensemble, twirling, and private instruction. An important aspect of this camp to be held June 24 through July 28, and attended by students from Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Arkansas, Michigan, Oklahoma and Louisiana, is the presentation of concerts each Sunday at 6 p. m. featuring both of the 130-piece bands, the chorus and the orchestra.

The Youth Symphony Workshop, the second program, to be held July 29 through Aug. 4, is a session for members of youth and community orchestras which will stress music performance for the exceptionally talented student. Henry Sopkin, conductor of the Atlanta Symphony, will conduct the orchestra rehearsals, and outstanding FSU teachers will conduct the section rehearsals. This week of intense training will be climaxed with a concert by the symphony.

Consultant Predicts FSU Will Be Among Top 10 By 1970

By JIM SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

Paul H. Davis, research consultant on colleges and universities for Readers Digest, predicts that Florida State University will be among the top 10 educational institutions by 1970.

In an article which appeared in the Journal of Higher Education, entitled, "Changes are Coming in the Colleges, Davis gives numerous colleges and universities that whil compete successfully for replacing those in the top 10 today. Among these are California at Berkeley, California Institute of Technology Cornell, Illinois, Illinois State Normal, Minnesota, North Carolina State, Ohio State, Penn State, and Pittsburg.

Davis bases his predictions on a survey he made on the coming trends of education. He selected 40 top educators and administrators from all over the U.S. to present their views on what they believe to be the future goals of educational institutions.

The institutions that will change, Davis and the educators believe are those that have the greatest flexibility in their attitudes toward change. Institutions that meet the new challenge in their altered attitudes toward change will bring dramatic transformations in their prestige ratings.

The progressive new trends will focus on learning rather than on teaching. Emphasis on memory will decrease and emphasis on creativity, attitudes and values will increase. The number of course offerings will decrease and the student will be required to study more intensively in required areas. Small classes will give way to large lecture halls of 50 to 200 students leaving to teach themselves.

In educational policies, programmed learning with films and television will replace subject material that can be given en masse. Higher education will yield to more specialization in related fields with an increase in the research of teaching methods.

Dr. E. Laurence Chalmers, assistant dean of faculties at FSU, commented on the position of FSU on the educational trends and the 1970 prediction. He believed the prediction to be true due to the educational system that exists throughout the state.

The vast junior college program requires this University to concentrate on restricted students maintaining the continuing stress on liberal arts education

"One need only look at the growth of the past 10 years," he said, "and at the present expectations for the growth in the future

"We already rank, in special areas, among the 10 best with the accelerating research contracts and grants that reflect the capabilities of the facilities and the faculty," he said

He added that the faculty, students and alumni already have this goal in mind, which was pointed out by the Student Government concern over the trimester system and the effect extra-curricular activity will have on scholastic averages.

Dr. J. Paul Reynolds, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at FSU, remarked that "the prediction is true because at Florida State University the only tradition we have is a lack of it. The significant thing is that we are willing to take bold steps in any direction and not be bound to any tradition."

Dr. Mode L. Stone, dean of the School of Education at FSU, is in complete agreement with the prediction .

"Such status," he said, "can be achieved by the University provided that during the period from now until 1970, the several divisions of the university achieve such distinction in their own right." He added that the quest for the School of Education will be a continuation of its present program of sound scholarship and research

The emphasis on research will be in the nature of learning and the conditions under which it occurs and is fostered. Dr. Stone intends the school to build its undergraduate and graduate programs on the results of such research to assure that teachers and specialists establish instructional situations in which learning will proceed with economy and dispatch.

Dr. Charles A. Rovetta, dean of the FSU School of Business, believes that "the states that provide the strongest support for their universities will experience the largest development in their economy. The states that provide the least, will experience the least economic growth and will go into decline." He remarked that Florida has the potentiality for huge economic growth due to the inception of the huge space programs that are centering in this state. If the growth is to continue, then the universities must take the lead in intellectual stimulation

"If the School of Business," he said, "is given sufficient autonomy, it can become the pioneer in the school of business education." He explained that the school is presently concerned with the new developments in cybernation and the effect it will have on production of goods and services along with its social consequences (study of control and communication common to living organisms and such machines as computors).

Dr. John K. Folger, dean of the FSU Graduate School, believes that the evidence is strongly against the prediction. "The biggest problem," he said, "will be in achieving quality due to quantitative pressure. It will be difficult to accomodate quality and additional students with programs and research activities. The University will be like the adolescent who grows away from his coordinator.

He believes that some of the trends will come about and that Davis is identifying only likely prospects for educational trends. Dr. Folger foresees a continuing growth in the number of graduate students which will improve selectivity and raise the standards. "The better we are known," he said, "the more applications we have for selectivity."

The trend which seems to be of great concern at FSU is the learning process Dr. Chalmers remarked that learning undergoes changes with each generation. It is society changes, the change must occur in the universities. Education cannot be the learning of yesterday's problems for tomorrow.

Dr. Reynolds pointed out that the future focus of education will be on the learning process based on learning for learning's sake that satisfies the student's inner curious desire.

Dr. Rovetta agrees that students will be taught to teach themselves. Courses will be sharply reduced and will be replaced by planned programs of study. Dr. Rovetta believes the student will study problems that he will encounter 10 to 20 years after graduation.

Dr. Folger has noted that the emphasis today is on research not teaching. He mentioned the informed rating system and its application to prestige ratings. The system has revealed that the only significant institution that has climbed is the University of California. He added that reputations are stable and change slowly.

Davis, in his article, points out that faculties in colleges and universities have a large resistance to change built into them. He predicts that in the next decade the greatest change will be in the attitudes to hold new transformations. He adds that education is changing and will change further from opinions based on hunches, to judgments based on controlled experiments.

Dr. Blackwell:

Faculty Funds To Be Withheld?

Some of the funds originally earmarked by the State Legislature for faculty salaries at the state universities for next year may not be released, according to President Gordon W. Blackwell.

The Board of Control will present recommendations to the Budget Commission concerning the salaries at its meeting in St. Augustine today.

The question under discussion will be "whether the full amount appropriated for faculty salaries is needed by the several universities," Blackwell said.

FUNDS NEEDED

The universities are taking the position that the full amount of funds originally designated for salaries will be needed, he added.

Dr. Blackwell commented on the possibility that some of the funds might be withheld by the Budget Commission when he spoke at the 36th annual convention of the National Association of College Deans and Registrars, which was held at Florida A and M this week.

He spoke to the group on "Higher Education in the Sixties," Wednesday night

"I can find no evidence that this was legislative intent," Dr Blackwell told the group, the Tallahassee Democrat reported

The quality of the faculty that universities are able to maintain during the 1960's will be a primary determinant of the quality of college education, the FSU president said While improvements in faculty salaries have been achieved rather widely, much more needs to be done, he reported.

SALARY STUDIES

He said that a recent 12-year study of salary increases revealed that faculty salaries increased only 12 per cent while income for lawyers went up 29 per cent, for industrial workers 64 per cent and for physicians 96 per cent.

"We are not going to be able to attract and keep the most competent professors until their salary levels are considerably raised," he said.

It is estimated that 30,000 new faculty members are needed annually in institutions of higher education in this country, while only 5,000 to 6,000 actually accept academic positions each year

"If continued, this situation can only lead to mediocrity in our faculties which in turn inevitably will mean mediocrity in education," President Blackwell said.

Rachmaninoff Rebroadcast

An All Rachmaninoff Concert featuring Thomas Wright, pianist, which was played before a record crowd in Opperman Music Hall February 7, will be broadcast by WFSU-FM radio Sunday at 6 p.m.

The program also features Nikolaidi, mezzo - soprano Sellers, cellist, and Mary Winslow, pianist, and will emphasize the music of the early years of Rachmaninoff

The radio recital will begin with the Second Piano Concerto in C Minor Opus 18, with Miss Winslow playing the orchestra accompaniment on the second piano. Following will be the Sonata, Opus 19, with Sellers and Miss Winslow Sonata for Cello and Piano in G Minor, Opus 19, with Sellers and Miss Winslow.

The last half of the program will include In the Silent Night, Little Island and Floods of Spring sung by Miss Nikolaidi. Closing the program will be the Prelude No. 2 for Two Pianos, Opus 17 with Wright and Miss Winslow.

Woodrow Wilson Grants Given To Four Seniors

By SANDRA DIXON
Flambeau Staff Writer

Four seniors enrolled in the Honors Program at Florida State University have been selected for Woodrow Wilson Fellowships for graduate study. They are Joyce Story, Frank J. Miller, Brian Chellas and George Crofts.

The purpose of the Woodrow Wilson National Fellowship Foundation program is to encourage young men and women to enter the field of college and university teaching. Each Fellowship awarded covers a full year's tuition and fees at a graduate school of the fellow's choice and a living allowance of $1,500.

Miss Story, a French and Russian major, plans to continue her studies at Indiana University, and to teach Russian at the college level. Her membership in scholastic honoraries at FSU includes Alpha Lambda Delta, Phi Kappa Phi, and Pi Delta Phi, the national French honorary. She has a 3.78 over - all grade average.

Miller, who has a 3.5 scholastic average, is also a language major. He has been accepted by Indiana University to continue his studies in German and Russian.

Chellas plans to continue his studies on the graduate level in philosophy. A member of Phi Eta Sigma honorary, he maintains a 3.8 average.

Crofts, a mathematics major, is a member Pi Mu Epsilon, national mathmatics honorary. Upon graduation, he plans to attend either Tulane or Rice University.

Six additional students enrolled in the Honors Program at FSU received honorable mentions in the fellowship competition. Their names and areas of study are Mrs. Patricia Alexander, Spanish; Penny Diehl, English; Roland Eves, geography; Lee Gray, modern languages; Robert M. Holley, meteorology, and Mrs Barbara Winget, psychology.

The Foundation President, Sir Hugh Taylor, announced 1,058 awards to winners of fellowships elected by fifteen regional committees from 9,975 candidates nominated from 965 colleges. The Fellowships are made possible by a Ford Foundation grant of $24,500,000 made in 1957 for a five - year program.

"A candidate accepting a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship assumes a moral obligation to complete at least one year of graduate studies and to give serious thought to a career in college teaching," the foundation president said.

Dr. Weymouth T. Jordan, FSU representative of the Foundation said that FSU received seven fellowships last year, more than any other university in the four-state Region Six.

12 File For Major Campus Offices

Twelve students had filed declarations of candidacy for major Student Government offices by 2 p.m. yesterday.

Two candidates had filed for vice president, Leonard Floyd Price, president of Kellum Hall, and John Robert Smith, Junior Class Senator. Price is running as a Student Party nominee and Smith is seeking the post as an independent. Smith commented that "After a considerable amount of thought, I have decided not to seek any party affiliation for vice president, but rather I have chosen to run independently."

Only one candidate Gloria Jean Ferlita, Junior Class Senator, had filed so far for women's vice president, although Nancy Sindon, also a senator is expected to file. Both women have said that they are going to seek the post as independent candidates.

Accidental Underwater Cave Drownings Of FSU Students Give Impetus To Establishment Of New SCUBA Course

By CAROL HACKNEY

Several drownings of Florida State University students in underwater caves, climaxed by a double drowning two years ago, served as impetus for the establishment of a SCUBA diving course by three FSU graduate students.

Allan Schwartz, Poke Runyon, and Don Martin, worked with a team from the Sheriff's Dept., to recover the two FSU students' bodies from Crystal Cave. In order to prevent further accidents of this kind, they approached the administration through the Safety Director and proposed a course teaching Scuba (self Contained Underwater Breathing Apparatus) diving. They believe that, through supervised experience and a greater knowledge of safety rules, accidents of this kind can be avoided.

The course is set up under the Underwater Safety Council, which is a committee made up of the instructors and representstives from Student Government and the faculty. It has been offered every semester for the past two years to all University personnel; now, however, it will only be offered during the spring semester due to lack of participation by students during cold weather. The course will be offered every Sunday afternoon beginning this Sunday in back of the Women's Gym at 1:30. They will be composed of both a lecture period and a practical lesson. Experienced divers as well as inexperienced divers are encouraged to attend the classes Schwartz said.

The lectures are especially important to the experienced divers in that they concern the best type of equipmnt; medical aspects (physics and physiology of SCUBA diving); care and maintenance; safety procedures and drills

The first practical lessons will be given in the pool at the Women's Gym; the rest will be given in open water.

The lessons are not confined to people with SCUBA gear. The first class will be devoted to the proper equipment, after which time prospective students will know more avout such apparatus as masks, fins, and snorkles that they will need.

As a policy, the Underwater Safety Council discourages cave diving as a sport; however due to its popularity in this area, one lecture will be devoted to this type of diving.

Those who successfully complete the course will be awarded a certificate. There are two types of certificates available — SCUBA DIVER is the basic certification and Assistant Instructor is a more advanced certification. In addition, plans for instructor rating are being worked out. Thirty certificates have been awarded thus far.

SEVERAL DROWNINGS FROM UNDERWATER EXPLORATION of caves in this area (as shown above) has served as impetus of a SCUBA diving course at FSU.

A Wrong Assumption

Tuesday night's Student Party convention was a flop. We can't say it fell with a sickening thud . . . it never got that far off the ground.

FOR TOO LONG the delegations have been delivered over to the nominees in saran-wrapped purity. The nominees have been too obviously hand-picked months in advance; like high school Prom queens, you could see from their freshman year who was pitching the right curves in the right directions. From there any opposition was supposition.

Any enthusiasm there may have been was pretty well confined to the floor. Only one speaker gave his spiel the old rah-rah try, and then it was difficult to tell if he was nominating a man or his favorite TV program. A minor scrap broke out over the nomination of a candidate for the Board of Publications. That candidate withdrew his name.

MANY DELEGATES SAT ON their hands often. One major candidate was nominted by a 67 vote for and 61 votes abstaining. That seems indicative of the present state of the Student Party.

The more or less open rigging of the delegations brought on the rebellion. Where the convention has normally been crowded to the rafters two successive nights, it played to bored delegations in a quick one night stand this year. The normal crush of onlookers and curious students stayed home in record numbers.

STUDENT PARTY SHOULD have gotten a glimpse of the picture last year. It's attitude, apparently, has been to turn its head under the assumption that something it doesn't see can't exist.

We don't want to see the Student Party die. We would like to see more than one party. For the Student Party to give way to some as yet unnamed party will simply be asking for a renewal of an old cycle. We can and do applaud the courage of the men and women who, after affiliation with the party, withdrew to run as independent candidates after a thorough disenchantment with the "practical" political proceedings that are an earmark of this campus.

WE FEEL THAT this is the opportunity for every disgruntled voter on campus to turn out and express his attitude toward campus politics. Some independence has been shown: support it if you are one of those who often shout about the lack of independents. Certainly independent voters should be better at expressing their sentiments than the so-called "independent" delegations which are the first to dance to the the piper's tune.

LP

APO Excells

Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity deserves a hearty commendation for outstanding services performed in recent weeks. The APO's do a fine job of serving the university as a rule, but they have been excelling themselves of late.

THE GUARDS and messengers provided by the APO pledge class at Tuesday night's Student Party convention were perhaps the most organized group in the convention. They were alert and on guard at the door to ward off any Party crashers and were constantly on hand to carry messages from delegation to delegation. The value of both of these services is great at a political convention.

The APO's also provided, at no cost, a stand for the flag given to Student Senate recently and sent out stacks of free books to prisons in the state.

LAST WEEKEND, the APO pledges spent five hours raking the lawns of the university's student religious houses.

All of these projects were undertaken in addition to their regular project of running the travel service.

These, and other smaller projects add up to an outstanding record of unselfish service to the university community.

Today is the first day of Alpha Phi Omega's annual weekend. We sincerely hope their weekend is a complete success. After the work they've done, APO certainly deserves a holiday.

Independence Is Order Of Day

A cute little girl with a french twist and perceptive judgment turned around in her Opperman Auditorium seat and commented wryly, "This is a farce."

The keen observation summed up the prevailing feeling of the delegates assembled as Florida State University's only student political party rollicked along nominating candidates that a great percentage of the delegates refused to endorse and failing to come up with any candidate in the key President and Women's Vice-President's race.

"This is the best thing that has happened to Student Government in a long time," said another young lady who is close to Student Government herself. "This time they have just gone too far in trying to stack delegations. This protest will make things more healthy from now on."

"This certainly is a big change from the past years," was another comment. And indeed, the Student Party is no longer the mighty giant that it once was.

Only a year ago, the Student Party convention was the main battle ground for political activity. Candidates went all out to secure the nomination and deals flew fast and heavy. Money was spent on paper extravaganzas. Name tags were predominant and the scent of politics was heavy.

After it was over, few losers were brave enough to venture running without the coveted "SP" beside their name.

Ken van Assenderp changed all that.

The present Vice-President of the Student Body ran an underdogs race last spring. He faced Duncan Moore, who had the apparent backing of those in power, and lost the Student Party nomination after some maneuvering in the men's dorms.

Van Assenderp, a rank amateur in the campus political world didn't have sense enough to know he couldn't win without Student Party backing and pulled a landslide victory.

This year van Assenderp, everyone's candidate for President, refused to take the Party nomination, and a motion to endorse him, which was contrary to a provision in the Party statutes ruling out endorsements, was defeated.

The question on everyone's lips is, "What happens now?"

As of today, it looks like an independent's race. The man in the street is asking "Will there be a new party formed?", but no other party has yet appeared. With the major student body elections only two weeks away, it does not seem feasible that a new party could come into existence in that short a period of time.

Independence is the order of the day. Van Assenderp is running with no affiliation. President Pro-tem of the Senate, Johnny Smith, has stated that he will independently battle SP's Floyd Price. Jeannie Ferlita is independently running for Woman's Vice-President, and will likely be opposed by Nancy Sindon, also running independently. Senate Parliamentarian Gene Brown intends to oppose Jim Blue Student Party nominee for Men's Vice-President.

This should be an interesting race. One thing is sure. It'll take more than Student Party nomination to win this year.

Barnyard

Climax To Farce

By KAREN THORNTON

The circus is in town! Come one, come all to the GREATEST FARCE IN CAMPUS HISTORY. "I nominate for the Student Party, Mr. Whatshisface, because he is my friend, dear and true to me."

"WOULD YOU VOTE for my candidate because she has blonde hair, is cute and just checked her outstanding qualifications in the mirror." These, of course, are excellent qualifications for any barnyard election, but are they good enough for our campus officers?

The actions taken during the first and last night of indecisions was remarkable. Some delegates used this "important" meeting to catch up on their cat naps, while others studied their shorthand.

INDEED, THERE WAS as much action taking place at the "convention" as there is in a graveyard on Saturday night. In fact, more takes place in a graveyard during any night of the week than took place at the convention.

More people didn't vote than did. An occasional deadpan face mustered up strength enough to crawl out. One may as well have stayed home since nothing really took place. It was just an interplay between cliques to see who could stop what. The result was that nothing ever was started, not to mention accomplished. Matter of fact, they couldn't even keep the rules straight concerning qualifications and parliamentary procedures.

IF THERE WAS a true Student Party present, in spirit or physically, I saw no evidence of it. The means to an end became a climax to a farce, namely the Student Party. It is leaning sickeningly into the horizon, maybe for good, never to rise again.

It was truely a great show. A real nowhere show.

Views On The Apartment Bill

By ROBERT SANCHEZ
GERRY DOBSON
JIM SMITH
LESLIE POWELL

Sanchez: A basic change in attitude, not a minor change in rules is what is needed at FSU. Too long has the university confused its role as landlord with the duties and power of parenthood.

POWELL: I SUPPORT the "proposed" Apartment Bill wholeheartedly. I support it because I feel it is less fallible, more fair, and more reasonable than the current state of affairs.

Smith: The present bill before Women's Senate concerning the men's apartment rule is a good step forward by the women to emancipate themselves from the burdens of mountainous rules and regulations.

DOBSON: SANTAYANA once said something to the effect that those who did not learn from the mistakes of the past were bound to repeat them. Prohibition should have taught us two lessons: First, that morals cannot be legislated and secondly, that an unenforceable law breeds contempt for other laws as well.

Sanchez: Rare indeed is the young woman living in a home as puritanical and narrowminded as FSU. Far more refreshing is the attitude of the respected (and respectable) Reed College of Portland, Oregon. A highly complimentary article in this week's look praises the school for encouraging individual responsibility, not only on academic matters but on matters of conduct as well. The administration of Reed College knows that it cannot foster an independent inquiring spirit in the classroom if it treats its students like ten - year - olds in other aspects.

Powell: I know many coeds from surrounding towns. These girls and their parents have known me from grammar school days . . . mine and theirs. I am welcome in their homes; they are welcome in mine, and as long as I pay rent, any chickencoop is home. My sister was warned on several occasions that it wasn't smart to visit my apartment. That's taking Planned Parenthood too far, even for FSU.

SMITH: THE WOMEN have a good point in that it is almost impossible for an independent to attend any social functions. This leaves many people ostracized from innocent functions that are completely "moral." The main objective seems to me to be an honest try at updating outmoded rules so the women may join humanity as individuals.

Dobson: Now that this almost perfect example of an attempt to legislate morals with an unenforceable law has been challenged, we again hear the voices of doom; as the drys said two years ago that the gutters of Leon County would be filled with starving babies if the county went wet, we now are hearing the predictions of a latter-day, Southern Sodom and Gemorrah if women are allowed to visit in men's apartments.

SANCHEZ: FSU'S ATTITUDE should stress personal responsibility. Students should determine their own conduct just as adults do. FSU should offer guidance not force it. Even MIT in the hidebound state of Massachusetts permits undergraduate males and females to visit each other's dorms. Somehow that institution has a better reputation than FSU in spite of it.

SMITH: UNIVERSITIES, like all mothers and fathers, are guilty of refusing to allow their "children" to grow up. And an attempt at change is almost always met with resistance. Resistance must be realized to prevent unnecessary skull-banging. A peaceful solution certainly should come about for all concerned.

Dobson: It would be far better for FSU to have a realistic and enforceable law, one which takes into account the need of coeds to make some of their own decisions, and accept some responsibility. I feel that a rule permitting coeds to visit apartments in groups of three or more is such a law.

SANCHEZ: FSU SHOULD insist on being everything landlord, parent, and professor. Where students live, what they do outside class should be of no concern to the university. It should not attempt to run students' lives merely because they are enrolled here for the academic courses offered. Someday they have to graduate.

Powell: It doesn't seem to have occured to the powers that there are plenty of strait-laced fee drinkers left among the faculty.

Smith: The battering down doors of the bastille has begun. The women are trying to exercise their rights as human beings. They are tired of being treated as uncivilized monkeys in a peanut - cluttered cages.

DOBSON: I HAVE found that our coeds are quite capable of resisting the lecherous advances of the FSU male.

Opera Singers Easy On Eyes

By LESLIE POWELL

If Florida State University is to its apparent way opera is going to become popularized and justification.

WHO CAN BE BLAMED for disliking recorded opera? If the voices involved are not particularly spectacular, and most of them aren't, canned opera is unpalatable than the "artists" care to admit.

HEDI SVENDSEN

THE BETTER KNOWN singers at FSU, Ethel Donaldson, [illegible] McCarty, Joy Davidson, Svendson . . . all appear to enjoy their work without the verbal ticuffs you might expect.

With the exception of Miss McCarty, whom we have no current information on, the quartet of lovely singers above are very busy at this time. Ethel Donaldson is in preparation for performance with the West Coast Symphony organization the St. Petersburg area [illegible] month.

MISS DAVIDSON is [illegible] appearing with Miss Svendsen featured in the Gian Carlo [illegible] musical drama, The Consul, which brings something [illegible] entertainment and [illegible] form to FSU audiences. The Pulitzer prize winning opera winds up a five day run tomorrow in the Conradi theatre. It is the story of a wife trying to escape from a dictatorial state and join her husband, who has fled to a free country. Miss Davidson portrays the wife, and Miss Svendsen portrays the mother in the opera, which is reputed to have brought "poetry back to the contemporary theatre."

Interlocking Teeth

By ALLAN DERMOTT

Not too long ago a well-known, distinguished English professor of F.S.U. said that he couldn't help, whenever he read John Keats lines:

"Virgin-choir to make delicious moan
Upon the midnight hours."

thinking of the "delicious moan" at Reynolds a little after midnight on Friday and Saturday nights and slightly earlier on the other evenings. (Reynolds, I'm sure, was meant to be symbolic of all the women dormitories and the sororities.)

A FRESHMAN male stated the situation more precisely. At the beginning of last semester one night he came in the dormitory late looked at me, and said "Do you know what I just saw? My gosh—at the women dorms!"—there was a couple per every four square feet just trying to break the law of physics that no two objects can occupy the same space at the same time!"

Some students have stated that they feel the scenes are indecent and not representative of college students. I must disagree, at least, with the last five words. Having talked with students from several universities, I have almost concluded that the "midnight hours" scenes are quite representative of college students at almost, if not all, higher institutions of learning.

ONCE I OVERHEARD a coed in lunch line tell a friend that she felt the scenes at night were signs of immaturity because love is not an exchange of saliva in the middle of a herd.

It would be unfair, however, not to state the view of some participators. One male student said that since the F.S.U. Police Department is the most efficient organization in the world in keeping a college campus lighted up at night everyone just gets in the habit of kissing their date under a tree. Soon all shame of openness disappears and the act is merely repeated with the few midnight kisses. I have found this is the feeling of many participators.

AT THE U. OF F. one of the women dormitories, Jennings, has started a new system called the PDA (Public Display of Affection). Everyone is limited to one kiss. If more than one is taken, the couple is issued an offense slip and the girl has to go to what the women here call House Council. One U. of F. coed stated the rule as follows: "One good night kiss—but not two or a little offense slip will be given to you."

It is apparent that the F.S.U. Seminoles would go on the warpath if any such action were taken here. It would be asked, "Why can't an innocent little couple steal a kiss?" Perhaps, on the otherhand, a large number of "innocent little couples" stealing a kiss might end up in one big massive miss. When looking at the actual picture, it appears that the stealing of a kiss turns into a ten-minute, arm-body entanglement and interlock of teeth.

SINCE THESE ACTS are done in the open and most likely will continue, it might be best if the couples be a little more conservative in the immediate areas of the women dorms and limit themselves just to the "stealing of a kiss" or two or some other low number.

Letters, To The Editor, To You, To Everybody

DEAR STUDENTS:

Please accept my thanks for electing me as Student Party Chairman for the coming year. I will try, in every possible way, to live up to the confidence you have placed in me.

During the coming year, I will devote every effort toward making the Student Party a stronger, more unified and more democratic organization than ever before. I ask your help and suggestions in this effort.

It is my desire to make unity the keyword of the Student Party. I hope that we can all work together to maintain and even increase the power and prestige of our organization. I use the term "our organization" because that is exactly what it is. The Student Party must be a democratic organization representing every student member equally if it is to function effectively. You can expect it to be democratic in every way during the year ahead.

Men On The Bill 'Pome'

TO THE EDITOR: .. .. — To M. C. and G. B., concerning the Bill:

This bill, I'm sure, is God's own thought
To steal the joys of sin.
It's not the plan, dear innocents,
To fill the virgin's tin.
So why the waste of words and sweat?
So why the march on men?
You'll only lose the "come into . . . . "
(The men might lose their win.)

DEAR NAME WITHHELD:

Parking

Parking spaces on campus that are painted green are reserved for staff parking, Sgt. James M. Lewis of the Campus Police announced yesterday.

The Faculty-Student Traffic Committee voted to have spaces reserved for the staff and the action was approved by President Blackwell.

TO THE EDITOR:

I believe that the bill concerning FSU women visiting men's apartments is a discriminating one. It seems to favor those male students who are fortunate enough to be able to rent apartments. I propose that this unfair discrimination be corrected by amending the bill to include rooms in men's dorms.

The Great Dream

TO THE EDITOR:

Faculty and students who were not a part of the Florida State University during the late Robert M. Strozier's tenure as president may have received an erroneous impression of Dr. Strozier from Carl Rosenbush's column in Monday's Flambeau.

In his first address after assuming the presidency he stated that ". . . it will be understood that the role of inter-collegiate athletics is secondary to the academic program." During the three years which he provided the leadership for this university he insisted upon such an understanding. Not quarterback clubs, but alumni, faculty, students, citizens and the legislators were urged, "Let us all work together to accomplish the simply stated but Herculean goal which I have set for Florida State University: "Let's make this a great university."

Dr. Strozier defined his dream of a great university as a place where there is a "seeking with excitement for something that is new and interesting, promotion of imagination for new avenues of learning, trying new experiments, having the courage to defend them when they fail . . ." And again ". . . there is excitement about learning and research, there is a desire on the part of every individual to participate in work which has meaning and importance." And again "A college education should equip students for the vocation of man; it should acquaint him with the main currents of his cultural heritage. It should make it possible for him to understand and become a part of the society in which he lives; it should provide him with inner resources which will make his life richer and fuller regardless of his vocation."

And still again "We must cherish and nourish the independence of thought and inquiry that will make this a great institution."

Dr. Strozier excited many of us with his dream and his confident, courageous "Let's make this a great university."

Georgia Beaten

The Florida State Seminoles, surging in the first and eighth innings, opened their 1962 season Wednesday afternoon with a 13-3 stomping over the University of Georgia.

Backed by pitcher Ray McShane, the Seminoles surrendered only seven hits during the game.

Third baseman Al Beccaccio started the first inning drive for the Tribe with a double. Center fielder Bob Madison singled to deep center, and then left fielder Dwight Smith walked to load the bases.

Shortstop Woody Woodward pulled into second base on a baseman's error to score Beccaccio.

The first baseman Hal Mangin cinched the other two runs when he reached first on Bulldog shortstop Joe Miller's error. In the meantime, Madison and Smith crossed home plate.

The Georgians, scoring in the second, sixth and eighth innings, changed pitchers like they were going out of style. They sent eight men to the mound.

Mangin opened the Seminoles' eighth inning explosion with a triple to center field. Eliot reached first on a third baseman's error and scored Mangin.

Later in the inning, the bases were loaded when catcher Buddy Teaule, Beccaccio, and Madison were all walked.

Smith singled and Woodward tripled to drive in three runs.

Record Breaker

Flashy Quentin Till will lead the Florida State Seminoles against the Furman tracksters in a dual meet which will be held at 2 p.m. today on the Florida High track and field.

Valdosta Falls To Racquettes

The Racquettes, the women's tennis club, dropped the Valdosta (Ga.) High School in their third match of the season.

Previously, the netters had defeated Rollins College and had fallen to the FSU freshman men's team.

Their next match will be Saturday against the Seabreeze High School of Daytona Beach, this match was rescheduled after being rained out.

The Valdosta-FSU summary:

Gail De Lozier defeated Barbara Brackett, 6-1, 6-2; Jan Quinn defeated Nancy Jones, 6-2, 6-6; Carol Riley defeated Beverly Turner, 6-0, 6-2; Judi Dunn defeated Maxine Shuler, 6-1, 6-2; Chris Padgett defeated Sandy England, 6-0, 6-2; Ann Lake defeated Judy Millis, 6-2, 6-1; Kit Logan defeated Jan Hatcher, 4-6, 6-3, 6-2; Lina Baxter defeated Joy Murphy, 6-1, 4-6, 6-3; In the doubles, Marilyn Bush and Judie Dunn fell 3-6, 6-3, to Barbara Brackett and Nancy Jones, Carol Riley and Ann Lake defeated Judy Millis and Joy Murphy, 6-1, 6-0, Nancy Barnes and Priscilla McKnight split with Maxine Shuler and Sandy England, 6-1, 3-6; Donna Deutch and Maxine Moody split with Beverly Turner and Jan Hatcher, 6-4, 4-6. The last two doubles matches had to be called because of darkness.

Golfers Fight In Ocala Meet

The Florida State golfers will compete in a four-way meet on the FSU campus at 1 p.m. Monday. The Seminoles will go against linkers from Georgia Tech, Springfield College, and Rollins College.

The freshman golfers will meet the Georgia Tech frosh Monday also.

Yesterday, the Seminole golfers began competition in the Florida Intercollegiate Tournament, which is held in Ocala, but results were not available at press time. Complete coverage will be given in Tuesday's Flambeau.

The Florida Intercollegiate will continue through today and end tomorrow.

Netters To Meet 3 Teams

The Florida State tennis team, hoping to bounce back from a whitewashing from the Lamar Tech netters, will meet three opponents in home matches during the next few days.

The Seminoles meet the University of Georgia Bulldogs Thursday afternoon, but results were not available at presstime. Full coverage will be given in Tuesday's Flambeau.

A second match with the Bulldogs will be held at 2:30 p. m. today.

The Indians will battle the Pennsylvania tennis Squad at 2:30 p.m. Saturday. At 2:30 p.m. Monday, the varsity and freshman netters will go against the varsity and frosh of Georgia Tech.

FSU's biggest boost will come from Paul Scarpa, Gordy Smith, and Ed Fusula. In the opener, Scarpa provided the highlights of the afternoon for the Seminoles by defeating Davis Cup star Francis Rawstorne in the first singles set.

In the second set, however, the Davis Cupper duplicated Scarpa's score by tallying 7-5. Scarpa, troubled by leg cramps, was unable to continue the match, and Rawstorne won by default.

(Author of "I Was a Teen-age Dwarf", "The Many Loves of Dobie Gillis", etc.)

THE GRASS IS ALWAYS GOLDER

The academic world, as we all know, is loaded with dignity and ethics with lofty means and exalted ends, with truth and beauty. In such a world a heinous thing like faculty raiding—colleges enticing teachers away from other colleges—is not even thinkable.

However, if the dean of one college happens—purely by chance, mind you—to run into a professor from another college, and the professor happens to remark—just in passing, mind you—that he is discontented with his present position, why, what's wrong with the dean making the professor an offer? Take the other afternoon, for instance, Dean Sigafoos of Gransmire Poytech finding himself in need of a refreshing cup of oolong, stopped in quite by chance at the Discontented Professors Lounge where he discovered Professor Stuneese from the English Department of Kroveny A and M sitting over a pot of strong coocheng and shrieking "I Hate Kroveny A and M!" Surely there was nothing improper in the dean saying to the professor, "Leander, perhaps you'd like to come over to me. I think you'll find our shop A-OK."

It should be noted here that all English professors are named Leander, just as all psychics professors are named Fred. All sociology professors are, of course, named Myron, all veterinary medicine professors are named Rover, and all German professors are named Hansel and Gretel. All deans are, of course, named Attila.

But I digress. Leander, the professor, has just been offered a job by Attila, the dean, and he replies, "Thank you, but I don't think so."

"And I don't blame you," says Attila, stoutly. "I understand Kroveny has a fine little library."

"Well, it's not too bad," says Leander. "We have 28 volumes in all, including a mint copy of Nancy Drew, Girl Detective."

"Very impressive," says Attila. "Us now we have 36 million volumes, including all of Shakespeare's first folios and the Dead Sea Scrolls."

"Golly whiskers," says Leander.

"But of course," says Attila, "you don't want to leave Kroveny where, I am told, working conditions are tickety-boo."

"Oh, they're not too bad," says Leander. "I teach 18 hours of English, 11 hours of optometry, 6 hours of forestry, coach the fencing team, and walk Prexy's cat twice a day."

"A full, rich life," says Attila. "At our school you'd be somewhat less active. You'd teach one class a week, limited to four A students. As to salary, you'd start at $50,000 a year, with retirement at full pay upon reaching age 29."

"Sir," says Leander, "your offer is most fair but you must understand that I owe a certain loyalty to Kroveny."

"I not only understand, I applaud," says Attila. "But before you make a final decision, let me tell you one thing more. We supply Marlboro cigarettes to our faculty—all you want at all times."

"Gloryosky!" cries Leander, bounding to his feet. "You mean Marlboro, the filter cigarette with the unfiltered taste—Marlboro, the cigarette with better makin's—Marlboro that comes to you in pack or box—Marlboro that gives you such a lot to like?"

"Yep," says Attila, "that's the Marlboro I mean."

"I am yours," cries Leander, wringing the Dean's hand. "Where do I sign?"

"At the quarry," replies Attila. "Frankly, we don't trust paper contracts any more. We chisel them in marble."

Candidates

All candidates for major Student Government offices are required to attend a meeting at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow in the Longmire Student Lounge.

At the meeting, Secretary of Elections Nancy Sill will explain election and campaign procedures.

Byrd Returns 3 Bills To Senate

In last Wednesday's session, Student Senate was presented with three bills which had been vetoed by Student Body President Bobby Byrd.

After a lenghty discussion on the vetoed bills, one of them was referred to a committee for further consideration, one was amended and passed, and one received the necessary vote to override the executive veto.

The bill which Senate determined to put into effect in spite of the executive veto, is one concerning the compliance of Student Government officials with state statutes. President Byrd's opinion, as expressed in a letter to the senate, was that certain of the clauses in the bill were repetitive of other statute clauses. "I think that legislation which serves to duplicate what has already been done at the same time serves to complicate and make less understandable our Statutes," Byrd concluded.

CLAUSES NECESSARY

The general opinion of the senators seemed to be that the clauses were necessary, for they provided measures that could be taken when officers didn't comply with the statutes. As the statutes stand now, several of them expressed, nothing says that anything can be done when noncompliance does occur; this is a stipulation which will provide proper action.

Sen. Jeannie Ferlita expressed the stand of Senate when she said that the bill was originally passed to ". . . put teeth into that very same clause (the one cited by Byrd as already covering the situation.) . . . I believe it is correct in form and should be passed!"

The second of the vetoed bills presented to Senate concerns the office, duties, and functions of the Secretary of State. President Byrd opposed the instances included in the bill wherein appointed officials were in turn given the power to appoint. This, he pointed out, is unconstitutional. He also proposed that Senate revise or further consider the section on the Speaker's Bureau, for which Gold Key is now being considered.

This bill was referred to the Organizations and Finance Committee for further study.

APPOINTMENTS

The third of the vetoed bills also contained one of the instances whereby an appointed of-

Board Of Control

Faculty Raises Still Unsure After Meet

The status of merit salary increases for faculty members at the state universities remained uncertain following the Board of Control meeting in St. Augustine, Friday.

The Board delayed making a recommendation to the State Budget Commission on whether the full $1.3 million available for the next fiscal year should be spent, or only $623,000 of it, until further study of the problem could be made.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

A three - man executive committee of the Board will meet with the university presidents next Tuesday to discuss the problem, after which a special meeting of the full Board will be called to make final recommendations to the Budget Commission.

The funds for the salaries must be released by the Budget Commission. The Associated Press reported that Governor C. Farris Bryant has expressed opposition to spending the full amount.

The funds for merit increases were "not clearly set forth in the legislative act," Florida State University President Gordon W. Blackwell said. A certain part of the salary funds were contingent on the adoption of the trimester system at the universities, while another part was for merit salary increases. Whether or not the Legislature intended all of the later part to go for merit increases in the problem under discussion.

INCREASES NEEDED?

An additional aspect of the discussion is whether or not the full amount is needed for salary increases. The universities are maintaining that the Legislature did intend the full amount available to be used for merit salary increases and further that the increases are needed.

President Blackwell told the Flambeau that, "We are still hopeful that at this next meeting the Board will agree with the universities."

Three legislators from Alachua County appeared before the Board of Control Friday and said that there was no legislative intent to hold back some of the salary money, the Associated Press reported.

"We intended every dime to be spent," said Sen. J. Emory Cross of Gainesville. He said he spoke for the chairmen of the Senate committee and subcommittee on appropriations as well as himself in saying the Legislature intended to raise faculty salaries so that Florida's universities would pay as well as a group of 20 comparable universities in other states, the A. P. reported.

President Blackwell presented two charts at the meeting which showed that even if all funds available for merit increases should be released, salaries of faculty members at FSU would not be competitive with those in other states.

Now average faculty salaries at FSU and the University of Florida rank below those at 14 of the 20 comparable institutions.

Rep. Osee Fagan said the Board of Control had urged the 1961 Legislature to appropriate enough money to make this state's universities comparable to others, the A.P. reported.

Fagan said the State Budget Director Harry Smith didn't feel university faculties should get an 11 per cent pay increase for the change - over from two - semester to three - semester operation which begins next fall and for that reason was trying to hold back some of the merit raise money, the A.P. reported.

The university presidents pointed out that under the proposed 10 - month contracts faculty members would be required to produce 25 per cent more student semester hours than under present contracts.

ADJUSTMENT

The presidents agreed to the 11 per cent mechanical adjustments on the assumption that the remainder of the funds would be used for merit increases, President Blackwell said.

Board members Frank Buchanan of Miami and Charles Forman of Fort Lauderdale said they were opposed to across the board raises. University of Florida President J. Wayne Reitz and President Blackwell quickly responded that they hadn't proposed any across - the - board raises but had submitted schedules of individual increases.

OTHER ACTION

In other action at the meeting Friday, the Board speeded up plans for construction of university buildings under a proposed $25 million bond issue after approving a lease - purchasing agreement with the Florida Development Commission, which is floating the issue.

Executive director of the Board, Dr. J. Broward Culpepper, was authorized to ask the State Cabinet for permission to call for bids immediately on a $1.6 million nuclear Bldg. at U of F and a $226,000 addition to the Nuclear Bldg. at FSU.

Planning was also speeded for student unions at FSU, U of F and Florida A and M and dormitories at FSU and A and M.

FSU Receives $5,000 Gift

Florida State University has announced a gift of $5,000 from Miss Martha Isabel Mays of Jacksonville, a retired school teacher, for a student loan fund.

The loan fund will be established as the Martha Simkins Mays Memorial Loan Fund in honor of the donor's mother. Originally of Beaufort, S. C., Mrs Simkins moved to Madison County in 1861 and lived there until her death 35 years later. Sunday, was the 140th anniversary of Mrs. Simkins' birth.

Students living in North Florida will be given preference for the student loans and stability, integrity, patriotism and kindness will be considered in making the awards.

Miss Mays had more than 40 years' service as a teacher when she retired in May, 1941. Her first teaching job was at Flatwoods in Madison County where she taught the first six grades in 1893.

She has taught various subjects and grades in Madison, Jefferson, Citrus, Sumter, Gadsden, Marion, Volusia, St. Johns and Orange counties.

College Can Offer More Than Society, Academics To FSO House Residents

By MILA ARNOLD, GAYLE MOTES AND LANA MURRAY
Flambeau Staff Writers

There can be more to a college education than the academic challenges and social get-togethers.

Every college student should learn coooperation and how to get along with others. But not every student has an opportunity to work day by day with a group of other students in maintaining a house and making it a home.

Members of the six Foundation Scholarship Organization houses — three for men and three for women — have that opportunity. Each house operates as an independent unit, with students sharing in housekeeping and cooking responsibilities and in recreation.

OFFICERS

Every house has five major elected officers, president, vice president, Secretary, treasurer and, what few clubs have a business manager who plans menus and purchases food. Eleanor Stockey (609 W. Pensacola), John Oliver (402 S. Copeland), Gwendi Roberts (F. E. A.), Bill Richardson (641 W. Pensacola), Linda Eshleman (Selby House for Women) and Bill DeVane (Selby House for Men) are presidents of their respective houses.

As is needed in any group having as many as 136 members, the FSO has a governing body which unifies the activities of the entire foundation — the FSO Council. Each house sends representatives to the bimonthly council meetings, where business of general interest to the foundation is discussed. Newly elected officers of the Council are Luther Kramer, president; Gretceeen Colchiski, vice president; Lana Murray, secretary, and Judy Williams, treasurer.

COUNSELORS

A head residence counselor lives in each house to serve as an advisor. Often, however, it is hard to tell counselors from members, as they join in such fun as swimming, dancing, singing and playing basketball. Residence counselors are Marilyn Swears (609 W. Pensacola), Warren Tyler (402 S. Copeland), Hugh McTeer (641 W. Pensacola), Sue Saxon (FEA), Jane Newton (Selby for Women) and Capt. H. A. MacGill and Jim Morrison (Selby for Men).

The FSO is under the supervision of the board of directors of the Southern Scholarship and Research Foundation, which was granted a charter as a non-profit corporation in 1955. President is J. Velma Keen, Tallahassee attorney, other directors are Dean of the School of Education Mode L. Stone, Dean Emeritus Ralph L. Eyman, Dr. Sam Lastinger, Dr. Hazen A. Curtis and B. R. Fuller, former director of the Florida Development Commission

DIRECTOR'S DUTIES

The board of directors supervises the operations of the houses, including maintenance and upkeep, and selects scholarship recipients. The process of selecting FSO members begins with a single nomination from a high school principal and faculty of the top student meeting the Foundation's requirements.

1) Academic excellence (the average Senior Placement score of FSO students is 443); 2) Desire for a college education; 3) Good moral character and general qualities of leadership and service. 4) A willingness to cooperate in the duties of the house; and 5) A need for financial assistance.

Additional scholarships are often given by teachers' organizations and civic groups.

After applications have been examined, eligible students are invited to visit FSU for a personal interview and to be a guest in one of the foundation houses. Final selections are made after consideration of the results of these interviews.

FOUR-YEAR PLAN

Recently, the Foundation initiated a four - year plan of expansion which calls for establishment of 16 more houses, in addition to an international house for exchange students, at colleges and universities throughout the state. It is the belief of the Foundation that it has found a means for providing opportunity to business, organizations and individuals to invest in a unique experiment — that of assisting qualified young people to attend college.

FSO students must maintain the high scholastic standards for which they were selected by the Foundation. Freshmen are required to make a 2.0 average or better, while upperclassmen must maintain a 3.0 average.

Rev. Carey

'Religion In 60's— Problem, Perils'

By ERIK COLLINS

Religion in the 60's - Problem, Perils, and Possibilities" was the topic of the Rev. John Carey as he spoke before the first of the spring lectures sponsored by the Liberal Forum, Sunday night.

The speaker listed four main problems facing Christianity: scientific and research worker explosion sweeping the world today, the non - Christian churches rising to new heights of popularity and the problem of religious differences in the Christian world

The Rev. Carey explained the significance of these fundamental unstable problems and tried to offer some possible answers to the problems. He then listed five perils or immediate problems that were of upmost importance in the Christian world today.

The peril of nationalism, the increasing spread of Communism, and the ever present terror of imminant nuclear war were sighted by the lecturer and the deadly problems that must be stopped or righted immediately for the world to continue on an even keel.

The Rev. Carey named four possibilities or signs of hope for Christianity in the next generation. The first possibility is a new revival of interest in the workings of the Church. Where people are gathering together and discussing the meaning of Christianity, there there is new hope for a spiritual revolution such as never before seen in the history of the religion, continued the speaker.

The second major possibility is a new willingness on the part of the people in the church to listen to the coivces of those on the outside. Authors such as T. S. Elliot and J. D. Salinger are being studied by theologians in hopes of discovering the thoughts and ideas of modern writers and spokesmen for the 20th Century in regard to the Christian religion

Thirdly, there seems to be a new emphasis being placed on the other great religions of the world. As Paul Fillich reported, after having spent many hours talking to Japanese Buddist priests, he gained moch more information than he was able to give. The Rev. Carey declared that the Christian church could learn much from the other religions.

The fourth and final possibility is the new and deeper interest in the Bible to be found among the present day Christians. According to the Rev. Carey, the Bible is now beginning to be read not as a word for word translation but for the real spiritual message to be found in the essence of the book.

Foundation Honor Students Recognized

Last Monday night at the first Academic Awards Convocation, Foundation honor students were recognized for outstanding academic achievements.

President of the Southern Scholarship and Research Foundation J. Velma Keen, Tallahassee attorney, welcomed the Foundation students, board members and guests.

Miss Emily King, State 4-H Club agent, was guest speaker. Her topic was "Scholarship and Citizenship in the Twentieth Century."

Board Member Ralph Eyman, dean emeritus, recognized students with a 3.5 or better average and honored the Foundation's 4.0 students.

3.5 AVERAGES

Those with 3.5 or better averages are: Jim Brandt, Anne Fleishel, Wilda Murphy, Lana Murray, Gayle Motes, Linda Eshleman, Linda Phillips, Caroline Campbell, Louise Montgomery, Maureen O'Neill, Mariann Ludwig, Nancy Hines, Shirley Ussery, Madeline Barber, Coleman Tharpe, John Leonard, Bonnie Rust, Robin Sandlin, Toni Wells and Mimi Hapke.

Students with the highest averages in each house were: Anne Fleishel (609 W. Pensacola), Madeline Barber (FEA), Caroline Campbell (Selby House for Women), Bill Erwin and Bill DeVane (tie—Selby House for Men), Coleman Tharpe (402 S. Copeland) and John Leonard (641 W. Pensacola).

Lana Murray and Shirley Ussery were presented with special certificates of merit for maintaining a 4.0 average last semester.

FSU Council President Luther Kramer then concluded with the presentation of a trophy to the house with the highest overall average. The FEA Scholarship House, with a 3.16 house average, received the trophy.

NOW SCHEDULED FOR COMPLETION JULY 24, THE INSTITUTE FOR MOLECULAR BIOphysics Bldg. at Florida State University is designed to promote a maximum of communication between scientists from various disciplines having something to contribute to knowledge of life on the molecular level. In the middle of FSU's science center, it is designed so all five floors can later connect by a stair well with adjacent Chemistry and Biology Bldgs.; and two of the floors to an adjacent Physics Bldg. The structure, costing a million dollars, is being built half with FSU funds and half with funds from the U.S. Public Health Service. Scientists will use the building to pursue research under a grant of $3 million from the Atomic Energy Commission to use methods of physical science for the study of life at the smallest level, that of the molecule.

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the student body as a whole or the administration of Florida State University. Editorials represent only the opinions of staff members and the initials of the writer following the editorial.

Education Is Costly

Gov. Farris Bryant said this weekend that "University presidents are on weak ground when they say, 'give us all this money and we'll divide it up.' I say, 'Do your job and we'll see about the merit raises.' Their job is to run the universities."

We are sure that this would be fine with the university presidents, except that financial operations is the toughest part of the universities to run. And the state does not want to give them much help in doing this job.

State officials talk glowingly about the high quality of Florida education and plans for the future. They use this as a big selling point for luring industry into the state. But they shy away when it comes time to pick up the check.

AN EXAMPLE OF looking the other way when the bill comes popped up recently. The state legislature last year voted $1.3 million for faculty merit raises. But now, almost one year since, only $623,000 has been spent for faculty increases and the Board of Control, the Budget Commission, and the Governor oppose letting loose of the rest of the money.

Perhaps the Board, the Commission, and the Governor feel that because the state universities have managed to struggle ahead despite financial handicaps that these handicaps do not still exist. This is dangerous thinking, for the problems which spawned the need for faculty salary increases are still very real.

THE LURE OF BIG industry with its big salaries and big fringe benefits is still significant. Faculty members have families to feed and clothe and these companies offer a considerably higher standard of living.

But industry is not the only other competitor for top notch faculty members. Florida universities are also faced with being stripped of its best professors by other universities. The $1.3 million was originally pledged to keep Florida institutions on par with average faculty pay scales around the nation. Without all of the $1.3, Florida falls dangerously below this standard.

HIGH QUALITY education is vital to the progress and growth of Florida. No thinking person contests this. But glowing, promising speeches from political leaders will not make this a reality. Education, like anything of quality, is costly. It must be paid for in full.

Food Prices To Go Up?

The rising number of students who lend their food-plan cards to other students has prompted the Business Office to give Morrison's permission to raise their prices on all food for all students, says Mr. Zachary Skokos, manager of Morrison Food Services.

Thus far, Morrison's has not hiked the prices, hoping that the situation would correct itself, but increases are certain if students continue to abuse their food-plan cards.

MORRISON'S IS ABLE TO offer the greatly reduced rate food plan only because they anticipate that a certain percentage of students under the plan will occasionally miss meals. At an average cost of $.50 per meal, Morrison's cannot hope to break even without the percentage of students missing meals.

This is the reason for the clause in the food-plan contract which states "I will not allow anyone to use my food-plan card," and is signed by each student using the plan. Violation of this agreement constitutes a breach of contract on the part of the student.

BUT WHEN STUDENTS breach this contract and allow other students to use their cards, they are putting a burden on Morrison's that will have to be borne by other students using the food services.

Fine Music, Fine Drama, Fine Actors Mark 'The Consul'

By CHRIS CLARKE

Florida State University is distinguished for having both a fine music department and a fine drama department. Any time either of these groups gives a performance the result is sure to be above average and is usually nothing short of excellent. When the two schools combine their talents and give a show that utilizes the best of both one cannot help but be impressed. This is just what happened with last week's run of Menotti's The Consul.

THIS IS ONE of a series of works unique to this composer. It manages to combine the abstract and heartfelt emotion of music with the concrete and forceful reality of drama. What easily could have been an utter farce through careless handling was anything but that. Neither music nor drama suffered. Instead each complimented the other with superlative effect.

Honors for the best performance must go to Hedi svendsen as Magda Sorel. Her voice was brilliant and her stage presence equalled it.

CLOSE BEHIND MISS Svendsen was Virgil Austin whose portrayal of a magician who does not understand anything save his own art was convincing and well done. Especially good was his execution of a number of tricks. The audience was delighted and the applause he recieved when exiting in the middl of a scene was most deserved.

Joy Davidson as the mother took full advantage of her opportunities to show her first rate voice. Space limitations prevent a complete listing of all characters, but special mention must go to Nash Noble as the secretary, Douglas Therrell as Mister Kofner, Barbara Collins as the foreign woman, Thomas Teague as John Sorel, and Lonnie Keene as the secret police agent.

CONDUCTOR RICHARD COLLINS, along with its a[illegible]ists Doris Davis, [illegible] and Mary Ann Eve[illegible] also get thanks. They did very well under such cramped and lighted conditions.

In viewing the work one could not help but note the great similarity between the [illegible] monotony of The Consul's office and certain of our own university offices. We could understand . . . after all we go through the same things every day.

Operation Correction

By JOEDY SMITH

Again I pick up my pen in answer to Gerry Dobson. I was very surprised that Mr. Dobson missed the major issues and challenges, but even so I can answer him.

MR. DOBSON FAILED to answer the false public meeting charge, the admitted distortion of the film Operation Abolition, the charge of the commentator's slant to the film, the nature of the protest the students were trying to register, and the libertium ideals such as life, liberty, pursuit of happiness, freedom of conscience and freedom of expression.

I previously knew that the Sheriff had denied his statement later, that is why I inserted in the first article that it was recorded, which means it was tape recorded. So the Sheriff can deny it all he wants to now.

IT IS A FALLACY to say that because seven ministers seemed to think there was communist influence among the students, then it must be so. I have a statement by three ministers who say that the film was distorted and the commentary slanted. Besides, the students had the sympathy and support of many ministers. Also, what about the reporters who covered the students' protest? The reporters saw a complete different picture from your seven ministers, and they are also trained observers for such situations.

If you are concerned about learning the truth of these events, we have a recording on campus made by the students themselves. This should clear up some of the confusion.

FURTHERMORE, I WOULD like to announce to Gerry Dobson and the students that there is a new film out which is entitled OPERATION CORRECTION. This film puts the events of the happenings in the right sequence. It also has a different commentator who does not put the wrong slant on the happenings, and who understands the nature of the protest. I hope that in the near future we will have this film on campus. It is being distributed by the American Civil Liberties Union, and we are trying to get it here for the students' benefit as soon as possible. I challenge you Mr. Dobson to come and see this film if you are really interested in the truth.

In conclusion, I would just like to ask Mr. Dobson what the legal status of the film is and why the Defense Department got it off their hands.

After Hours

Half-A-Movie

By KAREN THORNTON

"Sorry, but I have to be in at eleven." "Can't stay too long, the rules you know." "Ohmigosh! I gotta run the dorm closes in three minutes."

I IMAGINE these phrases are familiar to every girl on campus living in a dorm; certainly they are familiar to each boy disgusted with hearing them. We shouldn't complain, though, since they're for our own good. This is our home away from home . . . we all used to come in at eleven in high school.

To show how mature we are take the drive-in situation. Half the cars leave in the middle of the movie each week night to get coeds from FSU home, and leaving those poor high school kids all by themselves. Their rules are so strict that they get to go home after the show is over. This shows the younger set that we are more trusted, therefore we come in earlier.

IF WE HAD NO rule about being in, we'd all stay out until two a.m. each night. We don't know any better. We weren't taught at home, so now it has to be drilled into our brains that we are too old to use discretion about such matters as hours.

Others may know what is best for us, but it sure would be nice to see a movie through one of these nights without racing to beat the blinking little light in front of the nunnery.

SEEMS TO ME that it should be up to the individual's own discretion as to what time she should return to the dorm. The university's major aim should be to teach us intellectually, not to order our social and personal lives.

'The Consul' A Misconception?

TO THE EIDTOR:

By giving "The Consul" a setting somewhere in Europe, Menotti took advantage of a widely-prevalent misconception: That the worst Soviet offenses are standard Soviet offenses. This is a basic article in the dogma of fear clogging the road to sane coexistence. Such fear only serves as a detriment to public understanding of genuine issues in the Cold War; it has no constructive value. We wonder whether programming of "The Consul" at this point is not a breach of faith with the audience whose stake in cool reason and modulated action has never been higher.

The John Birch - type "Toughs" hold nightly showings of such movies as "Communism on the Map"; is it wise to add fuel to the flames of their mindless panic? Taken within the context of current international needs, "The Consul" is propaganda — almost pure and simple. Propaganda because it seeks to strike with the confusion of horror deep into the psyche, what terror it finds lurking there it will surely heighten and intensify.

If the production and acting were skillfully handled, it still does not rescue this musical drama from our second criticism: Menotti took advantage of a widely-prevalent misconception: That the worst Soviet offenses are standard Soviet offenses. If the production and acting were skillfully handled, it still does not rescue this musical drama from our second criticism: Menotti has not created good tragedy, but inferior pseudo - tragedy. We did not see an Othello, not even a Queeg — not even in the figure of the husband. We saw cockroaches being smashed by unfeeling shoes under a trenchcoat. Far from gleaning an intimation of the splendor and sublimity of the human potential for action, we participated emotionally in the fleeing and begging of cockroaches who would not rescue their native values in the midst of temporal defeat. In our guts, we felt the great lie of the twentieth century fully affirmed. Once s[illegible] "gets" you your soul is automatically dead; your manhood naturally flees, you w[illegible] felt your potentiality to be.

This is the spiritual fa[illegible] on which blind fear and [illegible]ism today feed. Lamentably, if we believe it to be so, then is shall be so. And Menotti helped convince us.

G. J. RINGER

The Ringing Bell

TO THE EDITOR:

An editorial in the March 9 Flambeau brings me to comment on a situation that has bothered me for a year and a half: the library hours. The center of a university's intellectual activity should be its library, yet the library hours at FSU seem to have been chosen so as to discourage study and research.

My experience as a student has taught me that no effective work can be accomplished unless a student is allowed several hours of uninterrupted study every day in a quiet place, with adequate lighting, and within easy reach of the reference works he needs. Under no stretch of the imagination can any dormitory supply all of these things, and even the quietest lounges, offices, and empty classrooms fall decidedly short of the ideal. The library offers all but one of these essentials, and that is time.

Any student taking a normal load of classes and eating three meals a day finds it difficult to arrange study time during the day. Yet in studying in the evening in the library, he is faced with the necessity of finishing by eleven o'clock on week days, ten o'clock on Fridays, and the absurd hour of five o'clock on Saturdays. He also finds it useless to arise before two o'clock on Sundays.

To ensure that undergraduate students get enough sleep, it may be necessary to close up shop early (though I doubt it), but it is surely not necessary to take such precautions with graduate students or faculty. On the other hand, it is criminal for an institution of learning to halt the learning process before it halts itself, and any student knows that fruitful study cannot be turned on by command when university officials feel it should start so that it will end by eleven o'clock.

Anyone who doubts that the library would be well used if it were to stay open to twelve or one o'clock all seven days of the week need only stand outside at eleven o'clock and count the number of students being thrown out by that soul - jarring, impersonal bouncer, the ringing bell.

Why do the library hours so tantly contradict the proposition that Florida State is a great university?

PETER RICE

One-Party Man

TO THE EDITOR:

After living in FSU's residence halls for the past three years I have many times experienced the dilemma of political campaigning; I have heard criticisms of every nature during these "trying times," of which this year seems to be no exception.

This year the Student Party is receiving the greater proportion of the criticism. I cannot doubt the fact that some of this may be justified; however, I hope students will take a good look at FSU's political system before they jump to any irrational conclusions, especially those concerning the Student Party.

At FSU we have, allegedly, a one-party system, but as those of you whom attended the Student Party convention this past Tuesday night witnessed, there is another party in operation on this campus. It is lead and staffed by those persons expecting to lead our student Government next year and, supposedly, the years to come.

This "other" party has not yet publicly announced its existence; however, after Tuesday night it might as well do just that, that is unless they don't want the students to know the nature of their political tactics and the caliber of personnel and expected candidates involved therein.

If some people don't approve of the Student Party, then they, openly, should form a party of their own for the benefit of other students with similar sentiments, rather than trying to scandalize and undermine the efforts of others.

NAME WITHHELD BY REQUEST

Let's Get Serious

Off The Hook

By GERRY DOBSON

This column will be even more disappointing than usual, but it not only gives me great satisfaction but gets me off many hooks as well. All those who work for the Flambeau are committed with many people, all having announcements to be put in the paper, or having great ideas for columns. I hope this effort will satisfy all those concerned.

THERE SEEMS TO BE a tremendous new interest in politics here at FSU. In the past two or three months, several new organizations of a political nature have been in the process of formation. In addition to the ever-present and strong Young Democrats, there is a Young Republicans Club recently chartered, a Young Socialists Club being organized, and a local chapter of Young Americans for Freedom in the process of formation. As a matter of fact, anyone interested in this latter, conservative student group is invited to attend the next organizational meeting, at 8 p.m. this Wednesday in the Longmire Student Lounge. Socialists should contact Mike Cohen, I think. Not being a Republican and, still being suspicious of the actions of representatives of the Party immediately after the War of Secession, I nevertheless recommend that those interested in the Republican Party see Tom Sisco for further details. Betty Gunn is, if I am not mistaken, President of the Young Democrats. FSU has been dead politically since Jeff Poland left, so there is now hope that this situation is being corrected. I hope I have elicited no political groups; it is inadvertant if I have. I have no information on the Westcott Pool thivot throwers or the local chapter of the Algerian Secret Army.

While political activity may indicate that the campus is growing up, the hours kept by both coeds and books are still outrageous. There must be a feeling high in administration circles that the books in the Library need Saturday evening for dating or something. Books are the only ones on campus more rigidly controlled than coeds. I myself see little cause for concern about the virginity of our half million or so volumes. At the bewitching hour, the library lights blink just like those of Jennie Murphree, the Tempo and Reynolds. Why, oh why cannot a person be placed at one entrance to the library to see that no books are removed after hours, and to permit the library to remain open 24 hours a day. It would be an excellent way to raise the sagging all-men's average. It should be obvious why men's grades are so poor . . . the books and coeds have about the same hours. At least we should push for a couple of 1:30 permissions a year for our over protected tomes.

NOW COMES MORE ANNOUNCEMENT, again of a related nature. The first is that the John Birch Society is sponsoring another essay contest for American undergraduates again with a first prize of $1000.00, for the best review of the book "Nine Men Against America" by Rosalie Gordon. Those interested should inquire of the John Birch Society, Belmont 78, Mass. And a reminder that Dr. Gordon Blackwell will speak this Sunday at 7:30 in Westcott Auditorium as part of Liberal Forum Spring lecture series.

Ever feel like a rat in a maze? If not and you would like this delightful experience, try driving across campus between 8 and 5.

AND HERE'S A PERSONAL. Kay, I love you. Quit griping, cynics. Why shouldn't I get to use my own column? Besides, it's almost Spring.

Aren't there enough meeting places on campus without it being necessary for the Majors Club to hold its meetings in the pool room of Tully Gym. After all, how many pool rooms are there on campus?

AND FINALLY, Speaker-elect (of the Florida House) Mallory Horne will speak at the Library Lecture Hall this Thursday at 7:30 on the subject "Our Great American Heritage." All are invited to attend.

Coma In Court

By LESLIE POWELL

Coma got a summons. It directed her to appear before the appropriate judicial outfit at such and such a time in some unheard of corner of some defunct building.

ARRIVING AT WHAT she hoped was the proper destination, and seeing a passel of black robed and just - looking young men suffocating behind their ties and horn rimmed glasses, Coma fluffed her boa once again for effect, pared her toenails so that they would not click when she entered the hushed chamber of justice, and pasted on one more beauty spot in an area generally described as abdominable. She was ready.

Eventually some quaint soul with shoes on came and ushered her into the presence.

SHE WAS AWARE ONLY of the great wall of eyeballs and a wooden hammer. "You come at me with that thing," she said indicating the gavel, "and I'll kick you in the crew cut."

"This here, young lady," the most official looking man said, "is a lawsome court. We have yet to hit a defendent."

"That's alright." Coma said "People usually make me first."

"EXACTY WHAT ARE YOU here for," asked another judge-like type. "Have you committed an infraction of Honor?"

Drawing herself up to her full four feet, Coma thumped a stray potato bug off her boa, and said indignantly: "I should hope not! I never infractured my honor. Don't you try it neither. Honor! I should say so! Honor comes to all men in their time. Go wait someplace else, buster. You just made me miss the West Hall bus by dragging me in here.

"YOUNG WOMAN," the judiciduous looking juror said, "You must be here for some reason. This is Honor Court."

"I must indeed be here for some reason," Coma agreed.

"However, it is not to discuss my honor. What about yours? Did you ever fail to punch a time clock? Did you ever fail to return a lost subway token? Did you ever take a plastic spoon from the Soda Shop? What about your honor, hah? Huh?"

"GIRL," THE SOMBER face said, "not only have you apparently misplaced an Honor offense, but you are bulling your way through standards of all sorts."

"Keep a civil tongue in your face," Coma shouted. My honor is not offensive nor misplaced. And who's bulling who on what? Standards! Uh oh! I'm in the wrong court."

BRIGHTENING A BIT, she added, "but for the right offense tho; you see I'm supposed to go before judiciary for not wearing shoes in the hall. And your honor," Coma said, "I have to admit I do whistle in the shower."

"Well, well, well," the Presence said. "Well, here's a chick with honor. Can't tell a lie can you miss? Case dismissed."

And as Coma stumbled away from the bar to go, he jabbed her in the ribs with the gavel: "What time do you think you'll get away from house council, toots? What say we go chop down a few magnolia trees together later?"

And they trooped down the stairs entwined in the boa, which winked one big glass eye at the congregation trailing after them.

Student League

TO THE EDITOR:

When a political movement proves itself to be incapable of honesty and fair - play, it is time for a counter - movement to form.

Last Tuesday evening Florida State University saw the biggest disgrace I hope it will ever see. The Student Party deliberately broke it's own rules by allowing unauthorized delagates to participate as well as allowing two members of the same fraternity to be on the same delegation.

In essence, the Student Party is good but it has gotten into the hands of the corrupt. The "block" (sic) alternates chairmen of the Student Party. The Chairmen in turn appoint "block" majorities on each delegation, thus making honest politics impossible.

With these points in mind, the Student's League has formed. They have not formed to try to run Student Party, but to reform it. When you, the voters, cast your ballot, remember what the Student Party has degenerated into.

The Student League has given long consideration to the matter about who would be the most ideal person for office.

These candidates have proven themselves capable and honest; above all craft (sic) and corruption. Therefore the Student League wholeheartedly endoreses: Ken van Assenderp - Pres., Johnny Smith - Vice Pres., Nancy Sindon - Women's Vice Pres., Gene Brown; Men's Vice Pres.

The South Carolinians edged FSU in the 220 as Segal beat out Till and Craig Johnson with a :27.8 time.

Florida State copped the discus throw with a meet record as Jeff Clark tallied 154-8¼ feet. The Seminoles' Allen Williams came in second with Furman taking third.

The Furman squad dominated the two-mile run, taking first and third places, while Dick Roverts of FSU finished second.

Herb Kraft gave Florida State the broad jump title as he leaped 23-3¼ feet. Furman came in second, and Harold Johnson of FSU was third.

The Seminole mile relay team of Craig Johnson, Long, Davis, and Till won the event in 3:19.4.

The next track meet will be held Saturday in Columbia S. C. as the FSU cindermen take on the South Carolina Gamecocks.

In the FSU-Furman match, the frosh were whitewashed as the Carolinians took all five events. This included the 440 dash, the 100 dash, the 880 run, the 220 dash, and the mile relay.

Jim Newman and Ross winter of Florida State finished second and third respectively in the 440. Al Cato took second place in the 100 dash, while Sodenberg grabbed a second in the 880. Cato took second in the 220.

Tribe Reaches .500 Mark

The Florida State baseball team finished its first week of competition at the .500 mark, twice defeating the Georgia Bulldogs and twice falling to Auburn's War Eagles.

In the second game, which FSU won, 6-3, the Georgians moved ahead, 1-0, in the second on Jerry Templeton's single and Tommy Vandiver's double.

However, in the next inning, the Seminoles knotted the score when Buddy Teagle doubled in Gary Elliot, who had singled. Then in the fifth, Teagle homered to put FSU ahead.

Another Tribe marker was added in the sixth when Bob Madison scored on a single by Woodie Woodward.

Georgia threatened for the last time in the eighth when they scored two runs to tie the game for the second time. Mike Pickett and Paul Waldrop came across the plate after two Seminole errors, three singles, and a groundout.

In the bottom of the eighth, FSU put the victory in the bag as it tallied three markers.

The scoring started quietly as Bob Madison walked. Attempting a sacrifice, Dwight Smith was able to get aboard on an error. Then a triple to left field by Billy Williams scored two, and a pitcher's error scored another.

Winning pitcher Larry Hawkins went the entire route, surrendering six hits, walking two, and striking out four.

Bulldog Walt Strong, who relieved starter John Wyatt after two innings, was charged with the loss. The son of former major leaguer Whitlow Strong fanned two, walked three, and gave up six hits.

AUBURN SURGES, 12-7

Auburn's first victory came on sensational first, sixth, and seventh innings, in addition to four home runs.

Third baseman Wayne Fowler poled three home runs and right-fielder Bill Breakfield slapped one homer to help capture a 12-7 victory. Fowler also batted in seven men.

In the first frame, the War Eagles scored three runs, against FSU's two. In the two succeeding innings, the Auburn squad was held to one run per inninf.

The Seminoles came alive in the fourth to score three runs to tie the game, 5-5. The Tribe moved ahead by one run in the fifth when shortstop Woodward slapped one of his two homers.

However, in the sixth, Fowler whacked a deadly homer with two men aboard. Breadfield then stepped up to hit a circuit smash.

No other Seminole came near Woodward in number of hits: the shortstop tallied four hits. Seven other Seminoles claimed a high of one hit each.

Gayden White was the winning pitcher, hurling the last four innings of the game. He surrendered five hits, one run, fanned two, and walker one.

Sophomore Martin Howell was given the loss. He worked four innings also, starting in relief. Howell gave up five hits, four runs, two bases - on - balls. He struck out two. In addition, FSU sent four other pitchers to the mound.

AUBURN AGAIN, 10-2

All was quiet in the second contest until the second inning, when the War Eagles exploded for four runs.

Breakfield opened the frame with a single and then moved to third on Jim Backus' single and an error. Bases were filled after Dick Seaman singled. Breakfield and Backus came in on a single by Vic Svetlay. A fielder's choice and a single scored the other two runs.

Bachus was unable to finish the game because he broke his left wrist on a play at home plate in which he scored.

He is expected to be out for about six weeks, but could return in time for the NCAA playoff if the Eagles qualify.

Florida State began playing ball in the third when Woodward doubled in Bob Wilcox, who had singled. But the Seminoles failed to score again in the game.

Otis Bibb, Auburn shortstop, sparkled with three hits out of five attempts. One of the hits included a three - run home run. He had [illegible] RBI's.

Auburn clouted 12 hits off the five FSU hurlers against FSU's six hits off the two Eagles.

Jay Overton, the winning pitcher, lasted five innings, at which time he was relieved by Larry Berry. Overton gave up all six of FSU's hits and was tabbed with the two runs. In addition he walked four and struck out two.

Reliefer Dempsey finished the game, not giving up any hits or runs. He walked seven, however, and struck out five.

Allen Thomas was given the loss. He worked the first four innings, surrendering five hits, seven runs, and one base - on - balls. He fanned two.

The Seminoles went against the Georgia Tech Yellowjackets yesterday, but the results were not available at presstime. Full coverage will be given in Friday's Flambeau. The Tribe will battle the Jackets today and tomorrow at 3:30 p. m. on the FSU diamond.

Linkers Finish 5th In Intercollegiate

The University of Houston captured its second straight victory in the Florida Intercollegiate golf meet Saturday, leaving Florida State way behind.

Kermit Zarley established a lead in the third round for Houston and held on to finish with a 283 total, shooting a 73 on the last round. His total was five strokes better than par for the distance.

North Carolina finished second and the Florida Gators tied with Georgia for third.

Florida State was fifth with a 1,220 total, 19 behind Florida. The Florida teams relinguished the state title to Florida for the fifth time.

At the midpoint of tourney play, Florida State's best score, 153 total, was eight strokes behind Wright Garrett of Houston. Dave Philo and Bryan Bergerson were the leading Seminoles, with Manni Nordone trailing them by a stroke.

The FSU golfers will close their four - way golf meet with Georgia Tech, Springfield College, and Rollins today at 1 p.m.

Scribes Choose Three Seminoles

Three FSU players were named to either the first or second All - State college basketball teams last weekend. Dave Feder and Ray Swain were chosen on the first squad, along with Cliff Luyk, (UF), Roger Strikland (Jax), Mike McCoy (UM), and Julie Cohen (UM). Charlie Long was named to the second squad. They were chosen by the 12 Florida Times-Union sports writers.

But Defeat Pennsylvania

Netters Fall To Ga.

For the first time this year, Florida State lost an athletic contest to a Georgia college, as it was defeated twice by the University of Georgia Bulldogs in tennis competition.

The FSU netters, however, recovered enough Saturday to down the squad from the University of Pennsylvania.

The Bulldogs came through, 7-2, in the first match, allowing the Seminoles only one singles victory. Gordy Smith provided the FSU punch when he downed Charlie Benedict, 6-4, 6-2. Smith joined Paul Scarpa in the doubles to grab Florida State's only doubles win, 6-0, 6-4.

Scarpa fell, 7-5, 6-4, in the singles to Joe Manderson. Hill Griffin edged Ed Fasula, 8-6 and 6-4. Other Bulldog victories came at the expense of Jamie Jameison, Bob Berry, and Mike Dyer.

Georgia won the second match, 5-4, taking the doubles and splitting the singles.

Scarpa, Smith, and Fasula copped FSU's victories. Scarpa lost the opening set, 3-6, to Manderson, but dominated the second and third sets, 6-0 and 6-4. Smith finished 6-2, 6-1, defeating Benedict. Fasula dropped Griffin, 6-2, 5-7, 6-3.

Jameison, Dyer, and Berry once again were on the losing end of the scores.

In doubles action, Scarpa and Smith combined to capture the only Seminole win, dropping Manderson and Mac Crenshaw.

The Seminoles' first triumph of the season came when they edged the Penn netters, 5-4, in the last moments of play.

The game was decided when Fasula and Jameison downed John Kent and Jim Balder, 2-9, 11-9, and 6-3, in the last doubles match.

Another Seminole triumph in the doubles came when Scarpa and Smith defeated Cavett Roberts and Bill Reynolds, 6-4, 6-0. Berry and Wally Dale, also a basketball player, fell to John Stein and Roger Schwartz in the doubles.

Scarpa opened the singles with a 6-3, 6-0 win over Roberts. Then Smith [illegible] 6-2, 6-3. Fasula fell to Jim Balder, 6-1, 4-6, 6-1. Jameison downed Kent, 2-6, 6-2, 6-3. Stein downed Berry 6-2, 6-1, and Schwartz defeated Dale, 6-1, 6-2.

The varsity and freshman teams met the varsity and frosh from Georgia Tech yesterday, but results were not available at press time. Complete coverage will be given in Friday's Flambeau.

Stults Guides FSU Through Top Years

Florida State University is fortunate to have in Bim Stults a coach with one of the best winning percentages in the nation. Since he arrived at FSU in 1946, his swimming teams have compiled a phenomenal overall record of 111 wins against 19 defeats and two ties. He has guided Seminole squads through four undefeated campaigns—1951, 1954, 1955, and 1960.

But even more fantastic is the fact that Coach Stult's teams have only lost four dual meets in the past five years, while winning 49. This impressive record marks FSU's swimmers as one of the outstanding collegiate squads in the nation.

COACH BIM STULTS

Coach Stults, a graduate of Washington & Lee University, served as assistant swimming coach at Ohio State University before coming to FSU. Among the swimming mentor's outstanting achievements at Florida State have been the development of five All-Americans,' one of whom (diver Curt Genders) captured the national low board NCAA diving championship last year.

Other All-Americans to swim for FSU were butterflyer Buck Hiles (1956-1961), diver Bob Weber 1959-1960), breaststroker Ernie Stock (1954), and diver Roger Slater (1950-1951).

In addition, this years squad had two All-American candidates in freestylers Paul Thompson and Lee Bransford.

Seminole swimming teams under Stult's leadership, have captured many championships: Florida Intercollegiate championship in 1959 and 1960; the Florida which include the Georgia AAU in 1957, 1958, 1960, and 1961; the AAU title in 1956, 1957 and 1958; and the Southern AAU in 1962. Last year Coach Stults received the honor of being selected by National Collegiate Coaches Association, a true recognition of fellow coaches from all over the nation as president of the his outstanding accomplishments.

As is well known by anyone who has been associated with Stults, his secret of success could best be described as hard work and determination.

As a result of Stult's success here, Florida State University has become swimming conscious. The support that this "minor" sport receives from the student body is evident at swimming meets by the attendance and spirit.

The most recent example was the Florida meet here, when around 800 faithful supporters crowded the pool and at least that many were turned back because of the limited capacity of the indoor pool.

Next year, FSU may beign construction of a much needed outdoor pool, which will be as spacious and modern as any in the nation. The new pool will give FSU a better opportunity to attract the top talent in the area. This, combined with the fact that all but two of the members of this year's fine team (which compiled a 12-1 record) are returning next year in additoin to reinforcements coming up from this year's outstanding fresiman team (which finished the season with a perfect 7-0 record) gives Coach Bill Stults reason to look ahead for even brighter future at FSU.

The sign of the amateur

LESSON 5—The importance of head control

We are told that bird watchers, who always take notes while they watch, are able to keep one eye on the bird and one eye on the notebook. Eye dexterity of this type is also a great asset to the girl watcher. It enables him to watch two girls at the same time, even when the girls are sitting on opposite sides of a classroom. The beginner, who must watch the girls one at a time in a situation of this type must learn to restrict his movements to the eyeballs. The girl watcher never moves his head. Unque head-turning, particularly if it is accompanied by shouts or whistles is the sign of the amateur. (If you want something to shout about, try a Pall Mall!)

FSU Traffic Is Studied

Consultations between representatives of Florida State University and the State Road Dept regarding a traffic study for the campus and adjacent streets have been under way and are approaching the stage of definite agreements

Vice President Milton W Carothers said the plans include the employment of traffic specialists as consultants. The study will include pedestrian and vehicular traffic flow, traffic regulations, and the location and regulation of parking areas. It is hoped that the study will begin this month and that it will be completed within a period of three months after the study has started. All students, faculty and staff members are asked to cooperate in the survey

President Gordon Blackwell has approved a University Traffic Committee recommendation that parking spaces be removed on the south side of Palmetto Way between the Woodward St. underpass and Conradi Bldg. The Committee said this action was necessary because of the closing of Call St. from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m., Monday through Friday to through traffic.

The Administrative Council has approved a Traffic Committee recommendation that the parking lot on the northwest side of the Mathematics - Meteorology Bldg. be assigned to faculty parking.

The parking lot on the north side of the Student Center has been made available for unrestricted parking of all cars registered with the University until Sept. 1, 1962, or until construction is started on the new Student Union Bldg.

Senate May Vote Class Offices Out

Class officers will be abolished after the second trimester next year if Student Senate passes two bills that were referred to the Elections and Appointment Committee, Wednesday.

Sen. Ronald Jones, who introduced the bill, stated that "This is one of the first pieces of legislation that has come out that will truly effect the trimester system."

He added that the major bill would require only statutory changes to provide the procedures the officers and senators feel best under the trimester system.

HALL OF MERIT

Sen. Carl Kuttler proposed a bill which would do away with the Hall of Merit. Sen. Kuttler explained that the Hall of Merit is an ineffective award, that it sets up no criterian, and that it complicates and even detracts from other similar awards.

He added that Dean of Students E R Oglesby had strongly urged the deletion of this award. The proposal was referred to the Lab- Student Services and Education Committee.

Sen. Jones brought up from the table a bill, tabled in November, concerning termination of offices for precinct senators. He proposed an amendment which would permit precinct senators to serve until new precinct senators are elected.

This stipulation would prevent the "small Senate" at the first of each year, before election time. The amendment passed unanimously. Another amendment, clarifying the meaning of the same bill, also passed unanimously.

The bill itself, to become effective immediately upon passage, was unanimously approved by the Senate.

NEW SENATORS

Tom Haney and Chris McKuhen were sworn in as new senators by Chief Justice of Honor Court Dan Walbolt.

In other action, Senate:

Passed two bills concerning budgets of student organizations. One stipulates that no budget shall be allowed to incur a deficit without the expressed written authority of the Dean of Students with the advice of the student body president and the Budget Committee. The second specifies that the student treasurer or designated officer of each student organization receiving money from the Student Activity Fees shall be responsible for his respective budget

Passed a bill amending Student Body Statutes concerning the duties of the Secretary for Intercollegiate Affairs.

'Visiting' Bill Passes Coed Senate, 22-1

By GAYLE MOTES
Flambeau Staff Writer

Women students will be allowed to visit in men's apartments when they sign-out and are accompanied by two other women if the bill passed by Women's Senate Tuesday, is approved by the administration.

The bill, which was passed by Women's Senate 22-1 was given to Dean of Women Katherine Warren, yesterday, by Women's Vice President Mygnon Champion and a committee from Women's Senate.

AMENDMENTS

Introduced two weeks ago, the bill came out of the Social Regulations and Codifying Committee, Tuesday, with recommendations for amendments which were adopted by Women's Senate.

The amendments include the following stipulations:

1. Violation of the rule will be considered a major offense.
2. A woman student must sign-out specifying the name of the host, the other women who will accompany her to the apartment, the address of the apartment and the telephone number.
3. A woman student is never permitted to visit in one-room living quarters of men.

The only previous stipulation had been that two other women must also be present in the apartment.

The amendment with the sign-out restriction caused prolonged debate in Senate. Sen Pattie Burke was opposed to passing the bill with the new amendments. She felt that the integrity of women students is such as to allow them to go to a man's apartment without restrictions. Sen. Burke felt that if this is not the situation, women students are not ready for the bill and it should not be passed at all.

Sen. Nancy Sindon explained that the bill's restrictions were not to doubt a coed's integrity but to act as a safeguard in two ways. First, the amendment would aid in enforcement of the rule, and second, it would serve as an extra safeguard for the women students.

Sen. Clyda Stokes, who agreed with Sen. Sindon, felt that the sign - out is in the interest of each coed who is placed in an off - campus situation. "In a dilema it might be difficult to find a student, with so many apartments located close to campus," said Sen. Stokes. "It is a right, privilege, and safeguard for the University to be able to

Sen. Nancy Sindon proposed in Student Senate, Wednesday, that Senate send a letter to the FLAMBEAU and to the Dean of Women backing the amended apartment bill. The proposal passed by a vote of 35-3.

'Look Homeward Angel' Opened Last Night, To Play 'Til Sunday In Dodd Hall

An adaptation of Thomas Wolfe's Look Homeward Angel opened last night in 204 Dodd Hall for a run through Sunday night.

Written originally as a novel by Thomas Wolfe, it was adapted for the stage by Ketti Frings. For her adaptation she won the Pulitzer prize and the New York Drama Critics Circle Award.

Look Homeward Angel played successfully on Broadway with Anthony Perkins as Eugene Gant the hero in the play, Jo Van Fleet and Hugh Griffith. These roles are played here by Eddie Reid, Claire Freiberger, and Sammy Kilman. The play is directed by Sam Baker.

The play is a story of the Gant family, in Altamont, N C, which is probably representative of Ashville, N. C., where Thomas Wolfe grew up and about which he based his novel.

It involves the growing up of Eugene Gant, the obstacles he must overcome with his family and within his own personality. He realizes that he must do his own growing up, painful as it sometimes is, and he must make his own life.

The play presents Eugene's conflict with his mother, his deep love and understanding of his brother, Ben, played by Al Clark, his affair with a young boarder, Laura James, played by Julie Baldwin, and his embarassment at being treated like a child. He learns that "You are your world."

Tickets for the production are available in 115 History for $.50.

GWB Speaks Sunday Night

"The Crises and Challenges Facing Higher Education in the Sixties" is the topic Florida State University President Gordon Blackwell will discuss Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in Longmire Auditorium.

The lecture is the second in a spring series sponsored by Liberal Forum of the Unitarian Fellowship.

The question of federal aid for colleges and universities is one of the thoughts Dr. Blackwell plans to discuss. He will also explore the shortage of qualified faculty and high faculty salaries as well as new teaching methods.

Dr. Blackwell will attempt to answer the following questions. how selective should a state university be, and how does the educator see that talented young people who are dropping out of education go to college?

Political Scientist Speaks On Civil Rights, Liberties

Dr. Robert J. Harris, professor of political science at Vanderbilt University, will speak on "Individuals, Their Rights and Liberties," at Florida State University, Monday.

The lecture, the second in a series sponsored by the Government Dept., will be at 8 p.m. in the Library Lecture Hall. The lecture is free and open to the public.

Dr. Harris specializes in civil rights and Constitutional law, and is the author of the book The Judicial Power of the United States.

He graduated magna cum laude with an A.B. from Vanderbilt in 1930, received his A.M. from the University of Illinois in 1931 and received his Ph. D. from Princeton University in 1934. He has been a professor of political science at Vanderbilt since 1954. Prior to this he taught at the University of Cincinnati and Louisana State University, and has served as a visiting professor at the University of Minnesota, the University of North Carolina and Columbia University. He returned to LSU as the Edward Douglass White Lecturer in 1959.

Dr. Harris served on the special staff at the Library of Congress in 1950 working on the Constitution of the United States: Analysis and Interpretation, which was published in 1953.

Dr. Harris was vice president of the Southern Political Science Association in 1946, president in 1947, and vice president of the American Political Science Association in 1950. He was editor of the Journal of Politics, a publication of the SPSA, from 1939 to 1945, and was a member of the Board of Editors from 1945 to 1948. Dr. Harris was an associate editor of the American Political Science Review, a publication of the APSA from 1951 to 1953.

Two FSU Grad Students Sail To Denmark This Year With NSF, Fullbright Fellowships

Harry R. (Dick) Blieden and Per-Olaf Jonsson, graduate students at Florida State University, were informed this past week of fellowships which will take them both to Copenhagen later this year.

Physics student, Dick Blieden, received a post - doctoral National Scinece Foundation fellowship. Blieden, who expects to complete his doctorate on low energy nuclear physics this summer, will go to Denmark in the fall. While in Denmark he will work at the University of Copenhagen and Institute of Theoretical Physics of Dr. Niels Bohr.

WORK OF ACCELERATOR

He is among the first group of doctoral students whose degrees are being awarded for experimental work on the tandem van De Graaff accelerator at FSU, which is an identical of one located in Copenhagen. Blieden is allowed up to two years on his NSF fellowship, and he hopes to spend part of his time at Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovoth, Israel.

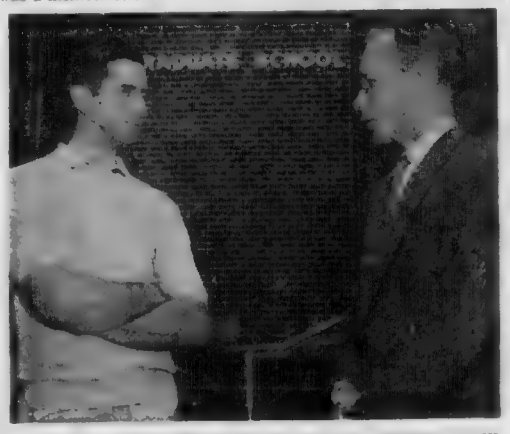
Originally from Michigan City, Ind., Blieden earned his bachelor's degree at Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1958, and his master's degree from the University of Washington in 1960. He came to FSU in the latter year to begin his doctoral program. Dr. Georges M. Temmer has been Blieden's doctoral adviser.

He is recognized as one of America's top scullers (athletes who row small racing boats) and was a member of the 1960 American Olumpics team. Last summer he won two gold medals for first - place finishes in the International Maccabiah Games at Tel Aviv, Israel.

FULBRIGHT FELLOWSHIP

Per-Olof Jonsson, who received a Fulbright Fellowship, will sail in July for an academic year's research at the Royal University of Copenhagen where he will work on a doctoral dissertation concerned with efforts to create a Scandinavian customs union. Jonsson, a history major, has minored in economics, and he has been studying post - war European economic history under the direction of Dr. Earl Beck.

A native of Stockholm, Sweden, Jonsson came to America in 1949 working for two years in Orlando, where Mr. and Mrs. Sylvan A. Birkenwald were his sponsors. After three years of army duty beginning in 1952, he enrolled in FSU and obtained a B. A degree in public administration in 1959. He received a master's degree in history in 1961.



According to Dr. Albert L. LeDuc, Fulbright representative at FSU, two other FSU people now are on Fulbrights. Gilbert Fernandez is studying history in Spain and Verlan Stahl, an alumnus, is studying Spanish language and literature in the same country.

"There are only a few Fellowships granted and we felt greatly pleased when someone from our university receives this honor. When it is considered that these awards must be spread over our country as a whole, we are very fortunate to have a fellowship winner," Dr. LeDuc said.

Open to seniors and graduate students, the fellowship has two outstanding features. Fees and living expenses, including traveling costs are paid for entirely by the grant. The average cost is around $2,500 depending upon the country the student visits. Also, the prestige connected with having achieved this honor is to the credit of the recipient, Dr. LeDuc said.

The cost of the fellowships are shared by the countries: America providing the money and the other countries the facilities. Each country permits a certain number of students to come each year, to study; some as many as a hundred, others fewer than sixteen or seventeen.

Graduates and seniors in any field may apply. Requirements include American citizenship, a knowledge of the language of the country, and a project. The student's project must be appropriate to the country concerned. Although no exact grade average to compete successfully, Dr. LeDuc said.

FLORIDA STATE UNIVERSITY GRADUATE STUDENT DICK Blieden, left, and Per-Olof Jonsson, who had never met before chat about Copenhagen, where both will go this year on fellowships simultaneously received by the doctoral candidates this week. Blieden, who also won international awards in rowing, received a National Science Foundation postdoctoral fellowship for study in nuclear physics, and Jonsson a Fulbright award for a study in economic history.

The Professor's Pay

Reprinted From The Tampa Tribune

Something more than money is involved in the current controversy over how much merit pay increases should be granted professors at Florida's State universities.

THE STATE BOARD OF CONTROL has available approximately $1.300.000 which can be used for raises. But State Budget Director Harry Smith, who apparently reflects the feeling of Governor Bryant, opposes releasing more than half this money for the professors' pay. University presidents contend that any such hold-back not only is contrary to the intent of the Legislature but will make it difficult to hire and keep top faculty members.

Governor Bryant, asked about the dispute at his press conference, said in effect that the handling of budget money is not the business of the university presidents but of the State Cabinet. It must, he said, balance all demands against all available funds and allot to any particular need only the amount of money "required to do the job." So far as university salaries are concerned, he implied he doesn't think the job requires $1,-300.000.

WE AGREE WITH the Governor that the Cabinet, which serves as the Budget Commission, must take into account all the demands for money in allocating available funds. We further agree that simply because money has been appropriated it doesn't have to be spent, and should not be spent, if the need does not exist.

There are two factors to be considered here which, in our judgment, ought to overrule strictly money-saving considerations.

FIRST, IS FLORIDA'S position in the competitive market for education talent.

. University presidents say Florida salaries are below the average for 20 comparable institutions in other states and that even if the full amount of salary money were used the Florida scale would still fall slightly under the competitive average. If this comparison is correct, it should carry weight with the purse-holders. The finest physical facilities in the world are of little value to a university if it hires only mediocre professors.

SECOND, IS THE impression given the university faculties at the time of the Legislature's appropriation. Were they led to believe that the forthcoming merit increases would be on a scale that only the $1.300.000 can provide? If so, the withholding of half the money will certainly be regarded as a breach of faith: morale could be affected to the point that a professor who receives even an equal offer from another university or private business would be tempted to take it. Nothing destroys loyalty to an institution faster than injustice, real or imagined.

No one is in better position to decide these questions than the Board of Control. Nor does anyone else have its primary responsibility to do so. The Board, on the basis of its best judgment, out to recommend whether $600,000 or $1,000,000 or $1,-300 000 should be handed out in merit raises.

THE BOARD NEED NOT be concerned with pleasing either the university presidents or the Governor. Its job is to champion what it believes, in the long run, will best serve higher education in Florida—and the public will expect it to employ whatever resolution is "required to do the job."

Students Support Bill

The controversial "Apartment Bill" is now out of student hands. Its fate rests firmly in the hands of Dean Katherine Warren, Dean R. R. Oglesby, and Dr. Gordon Blackwell. The final decision is properly theirs and the student body is anxiously awaiting the announcements of the administration's verdict.

For the most part, there is little doubt of student sentiment. The students are solidly behind it.

CAREFUL, meditative student thought has gone into this bill. It is not a spur-of-the-moment proposal. Senators Ginny Boyd, Cathy Young, Pat Doomar, Jeannie Ferlita, Nancy Sindon, Clyda Stoakes, and Jeanne Graham, some of the Senates' most respected women, have spent many hours discussing the proposal, dissecting its every facet, and strengthening its weaknesses. The bill has been to committee and a total of four amendments were added to hone the bill into its final form.

Student Senate also added its endorsement and support to the bill by a 35-3 vote.

STUDENT GOVERNMENT, however, has not been the only students suporting this bill. The "Apartment Bill" has been a keen topic of conversation among the rank and file students since its initial introduction. The bill has stirred interest in both men and women's dorms. Fraternity and sorority houses have buzzed with the topic. Gatherings over coffee have echoed with discussion of the possibility of it becoming a reality. "Letters to the Editor" have poured in, helping to change the discussion. Even graduate students have expressed opinions. And though there is negative opinion, the great mass of students are anxious to see the bill get administrative approval.

A group of students, accompanied by Rev. John Cary, former Chaplain and now Assoc. Dean of Students, discussed the bill with Dean Warren yesterday. They will call on Dr. Blackwell next Thursday.

MANY ADMINISTRATORS have stated that student opinion carries a great deal of weight with them. Their actions have borne this out on several occasions. If student thought is a genuine concern, the administration will be wise to think this bill over carefully. Students have done their best to come up with a solid proposal, and they are not going to be satisfied with anything less than thorough, fair consideration. If this bill is vetoed over strong student support, there are going to be some pointed questions asked. BCS.

'Look Homeward, Angel' Opens With Promise

By LESLIE POWELL

Les Jongleurs Studio Theatre tackled a job with Look Homeward, Angel. I think they may have tucked it away neatly after, say, the first performance before a full audience.

SAMMY KILMAN IS particularly good as the father. Claire Freiberger is perfectly capable of unbending and ripping the sets to bits (literally). Eddie Reid and Al Clarke as Gene and Ben do fairly well.

Janine Chapman is a joy. If you like your characters to feel, look and come alive just feet away from you. She should do things for the Les Jongleurs organization if it gives her the opportunity. Any moment that she's on stage is a high moment. Certainly she does a beautiful job with a role that doesn't give her a thing to work with.

A NEAT CONTRAST, and a credit to director Sam Baker, is that between the women in the play. How Miss Chapman and Julie Baldwin (Laura) manage to put across the empathy of two very different young women is what makes theatre magic. Miss Baldwin, Miss Chapman and Carolyn Johnson were all happy choices.

John McCotter is effective as Luke Maybe just lucky casting but he is believable as the sailor-come-home. Charlie Hawkins is comic as Will, as is Ken Richart as Jake Clatt. Both portray dandies of sorts and do it rather effectively.

OTHERS IN THE large cast are good, but the roles are limiting. Reville Syalden is crochety enough for the Dixieland Boarding House. As an old and obnoxious harridan, she's a standout .

Director Sam Baker, doing his first stint in that department, has assembled as interesting collection of faces and types as you are likely to see here. The staging is intimate and effective. There are drawbacks such as the shadows on the ceilings behind the set, but when the play comes alive you'll watch the Gant family and their boarders and notice little else.

Sam Baker
'Angel' Director

ONE THING TO REMEMBER, this production is staged in what is an unorthodox manner for FSU. It is easy to become part of the action, to see what the actors are doing, and you can hear without the strain that goes along with most of the productions.

Look Homeward, Angel utilizes nineteen actors. Of that number there are perhaps six major roles concerned. I think Director Baker has probably made very good use of the personalities and energies at his command. Certainly the past year has seen some new life and new blood in the FSU theatre. At least there have been some casting surprises with delightful results.

I THINK IT IS FAIR to say that with one or two exceptions the women fare much better than the men in taking the roles for Look Homeward, Angel. But when Sammy Kilman thunders in, the ladies have to hop to save their laurels. When Kilman and Freiberger decide in a moment of personal self-fury that the Dixieland should be annihilated the place goes wild. The husband-wife team break furniture and abandon and put the boarders in terror stricken flight. Kilman and Reid are good in their moments together, and Carolyn "Pie-Boy" Johnson rated a round of spontaneous applause in one of the moments of comic relief.

I am not being unkind not to mention a number of the cast members. I saw their play in dress rehearsal and lines and properties were fidgity. I think you can expect very good performances from all concerned. Al Clarke, to me is so F. Scott Fitzgerald in appearance that I sometimes forget the play is based on Thomas Wolfe's novel of the same name as the play.

I SEE ONLY ONE problem in regard to Look Homeward, Angel . . . that's finding the playhouse. It's in Room 204, Dodd hall (likewise known as the Graduate School).Tickets are on sale at the Conradi box office, so a minimum of confusion is to be expected.

Too Wit Or To Whoa?

TO THE EDITOR:

A hairy note
On Bill A," quote
The wise old fowl,
Who let out with a good size howl,
When Bill A lost its innocence.

Too late to gain?—well then—

She Took Her Tongue In Hand And Wrote

TO THE EDITOR:

Although I am not a habitual letter writer to this "fine" newspaper, I am hostile on one point and feel I can hold my "tongue" no longer. So . . . here it is.

My gripe is with the "esteem" (sic) editor of this newspaper. I have been a student here for several years, and never before have I seen a Flambeau editor that ran his picture with his editorial. I do not see the necessity of this! We all know what Mr Sharp looks like since he has forced us to look at his picture every week. (It is bad enough that we have to read his editorials.) I am sure that this space can be put to better use

I am sick of looking at Mr. Sharp's egotistical face in the Flambeau and wish he would remove same.

'Damn Foolishness'

TO THE EDITOR:

It is an indisputable fact that there are some "men" on this campus who are mentally defective and should be committed—to prison or to a mental institution is a matter for the authorities to decide. Probably everyone on this campus knows of the childish "pranks" pulled of late with firecrackers as the factor supplying "humor."

We feel that the absolute height of immaturity idiocy, and downright dam-foolishness was reached at 12:15 a.m. Thursday, March 15. At this time, some "funloving children" tossed a bomb into a third floor hall of Kellum Hall.

For Or Agin' Mr. Ringer?

JERRY RINGER:

I am surprised at you!

Are you suggesting that we cease protest against tyranny because it might be taken as ultra-right wing propaganda? Perhaps you prefer that all art forms be carefully screened for their potential ethical effect upon people as Plato would have done with certain of the modes of Greek music. But how is this different from tyranny — having to be told what we can see and think?

Of course, Mr. Ringer, there certainly IS the possibility that The Consul could be interpreted as anti-communist propaganda. It could also be seen as anti-American propaganda; it could be seen in many ways. I am sure that Menotti could have turned out a blood and guts opera in which the hero dies fighting for his cause. I am equally sure that such a work would have died a miserable death along with its hero. If you study the operatic repertory, Mr. Ringer, I think you will find that revolutionaries do not make good subjects. There is good reason calling Puccini's opera Tosca and not Cavardossi. Almost all art which carries with it a hint of social protest fares better if its commentary is indirect. Thus Menotti's opera is better named for a character who never appears — better than with a Magda Sorel who gives her life for an individual and his cause than with a Magda Sorel who dies merely fighting for her own life.

And besides, Mr. Ringer, what are you doing advocating violence — in defense of ethical principles, self, or whatver? The last time I heard, you were agin' such goings on.

you will notice that bomb was not in quotes. What other word can there be for a lighter fluid can filled with match heads, fitted with an ingenious fuse, and powerful enough to tear the metal can to pieces and drive flaming match heads under closed doors to leave rugs smoldering and students dazed with fright.

Anyone who saw, heard, or felt the destructive force of that bomb can imagine what would result from someone opening a door at the moment of explosion. Thank God no one was injured this time, but what would happen next time? We Want Action!!

Panic Program

TO THE EDITOR:

Just what is all this "thunder from the right" that we hear and see everyday? Take, for example, certain anti-communist groups on campus. Are these groups formed to undermine Communism or replace with an opposite cause? Who organizes and supports these "Projects 'operations'"?

Any idiot knows extreme Conservatism means Democratic Americanism. Any other "dupe" knows the Communists have invaded us, through internal subversion, from everywhere. Why just a few years ago they landed on the shores of San Francisco Bay. Fortunately, we had some rightists and "HUACers" clean up . . . before the incident got too far out of hand

May the heavens of Gods praise the burgeoning activities of the John Birchers, HUACers, alleged Constitutionalists, and other far right or far out groups. May their ultra-extremes reach further heights in their creation of fear and mass hysteria. May they organize more and more "Projects" of hate, awakening, and suspicion (especially liberal). And by all means, fly your colors, along with the American flag, in front of Westcott and demand equal time at "liberal forums. A positive program of panic for patriotic, protection crusaders, would not be effective without an absolutist-radical-hysteria campaign such as this.

Certainly the Founding Fathers of our oCnstitution would sanction such a cause of rebellion if they were here today. Perhaps you can be the Patriots of the "Second Republic".

Cannot, Will Not?

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

The time has come for our beloved Governor to put up or shut up on the subject of education. For years he has been warning grimly of the encroachments of the federal government into areas reserved for the states. Bryant is especially taken aback at the idea of federal aid to education, thinking that controls by the octopus in Washington might follow.

IN REALITY, THOSE who have studied state - federal relations are much more inclined to support the view of former Governor Collins. Collins denied that the federal government is usurping the powers of the states, commenting that the federal government has merely taken over those functions which the states either cannot or will not do.

As far as education in Florida goes it seems to be a case of "will not." If Florida was meeting its responsibility toward education, Bryant might have some room to talk. As it is, Florida's schools are not merely second rate; they are fourth rate. Statistics recently published in Saturday Review magazine place Florida thirty - ninth among the fifty states in support of education, ranking ahead of only the most backward areas. (Incidentally, as you suspect, Alabama was last, followed closely by Mississippi.)

IF CURRENT CONDITIONS are bad, the future looks even worse. Statistics in a recent issue of the FEA Journal place Florida forty - sixth in the ratio of new teachers being prepared to the need for new teachers And why is there no great rush to enter this lucrative profession? A look at the little old salary schedule might yield a clue. In Pinellas county, for example, a teacher with a Master's degree can expect to earn, after FIVE YEARS in the system, a whopping $4900 And Pinellas is one of Florida's wealthiest counties. In the poorer counties, things are much worse. With almost no taxable property, many counties must rely entirely upon state aid, aid which has shown no tendency to increase under the present administration.

What's more, as the crises deepens, it's no longer a matter of Florida school's being mediocre or merely somewhat less than the best. If the present rate of financial support continues, they will be the worst in the nation, not having far to go to achieve that dubious distinction. Furthermore, in just standing still, maintaining the present level of quality, Florida falls further and further behind other states.

AND WHAT HAS BEEN the administration's reaction to the crisis in Florida education? Hollow words, something - for - nothing deals, and inaction. There is talk of "education to meet the challenge of the space age" by the same people who almost succeeded in doing away with such "frills" as textbooks, and whose one gigantic accomplishment at the last legislative session was the institution of a course in "Americanism." There are something - for - nothing gimmicks such as the trimester plan, bond issues paid by student fees, "merit" salary increases designed to avoid a needed general pay raise, pathetic campaigns for donations by private citizens to public institutions, and classes of thousands "taught" by ETV. In fact, in education Florida is trying every easy - way - out gimmick in the book, while continuing to ignore the basic problem. By shirking its responsibilities, Florida is merely inviting federal aid.

If the Bryant Administration really wanted to help Florida schools, there are several obvious things it could do. First of all, it could courageously demand increased taxes to foot the bill. But the Governor recently received a no-new-tax-pledge.

SECONDLY, BRYANT could act to end the extravagant, expensive and illegal system of racial segregation in the public schools That, too, is unlikely. Bryant is an unusual product of Harvard Law School who seems not to mind at all the fact that he is probably in contempt of the United States Supreme Court. Or perhaps the Governor would care to act on a more personal and official level. Since he is not encouraging banks, business individuals to contribute to the state universities, perhaps the Governor would care to donate the $32.000 in campaign contributions which he had left over after his election.

'Apt. Bill' As Amended

By KAREN THORNTON

The new amendment to the "apartment bill" passed the Women's senate with the original bill Tuesday afternoon. The amendment caused more than a little consternation among many people, including a goodly number on - lookers there for the one session.

THE REASON FOR the turmoil is as follows: the amendment to the bill calls for (a) a girl to sign out of the dorm, although she is still within the city limits, (b) she must give the names of the two other coeds who are to accompany here, and (c) she must give the address and phone number of the apartment which she intends visiting.

This is an excellent provision. It provided a check - on - check of the coeds whereabouts in case of an emergency. We have been assured by the Senate that the measure is not for tab - keeping purposes, but to insure the personal safety of the women

THE NAMING OF TWO accompanying coeds cuts down the chance of lying (an offense in its merits and gets no sympathy) and is an inducement to abide by the rule as it would be set up. Not many women would be daring enough to sign out two friends who were not aware that they were supposed to have been in a man's apartment the night before or something. This provision might save some grief.

The giving of the address and or phone number puts some of the responsibility under the proposed measure on the male students, who should share it.

HAVING AT LEAST three girls go to an apartment at once helps put responsibility in a better balance also. For one thing it obligates the women to bolster each other if need be, and there will be another method of making the men take a bit of the burden in cases where administrative interest is aroused.

I think the administration should and will pass this just and fair bill. We cannot jump from one extreme to another, but must do things gradually. This seems to be a start in the right direction. I continue to give the Women's Senators who introduced the bill my full support.

Caribou Hunt Brings Award

Arranging and directing a Caribou hunt among the Eskimos in Alaska has won for Florida State University graduate Robert E. Carroll the Special Services Award of the Department of Interior.

Carroll received his master's degree in social welfare in 1952 after getting a bachelor's degree in 1949. He is a social worker in the Fairbanks Area Field Office of the Department of Indian Affairs.

In early summer of 1961, when it became apparent that employment would not be available to the Eskimos and Indians of the villages of Tanacross, Tetlin, and Northway, in the Fairbanks, Alaska, area, Carroll organized the hunt to help meet the food needs of these villagers, his citation said

Robert L. Bennet, Carrol's superior in Juneau, Alaska, stated that the FSU graduate had displayed "exceptional ability and ingenuity in planning and executing a very unique project."

Bennet also commented that the project resulted in better understanding by the public and communities involved regarding the objectives of the Bureau's welfare program by enlisting acceptance and cooperation from the residents, and by helping them to better their own situation.

find the apartment," she asserted.

WOULD 'FORGET'

Sen. Jeanie Ferlita yielded the floor to a guest in Senate, Toni DiCarlo. Miss DiCarlo felt that there would be the same problem as with the Reservation sign-out, since many get - togethers are last minute ideas. She felt that if a student were required to go to a dorm or sorority to sign - out she would conveniently "forget" to do so

Sen. Ginny Boyd asserted that with a sign - out, a woman student "would think a little about it before rushing off to a man's apartment "

In reply, Sen. Shirley Martin said that those women who are going to follow the rules will do so, and others will not.

Sen. Ferlita explained that Women's Senate is not only making rules, but also is playing politics. She said that as rules get more liberal, the sign-out would probably be dropped.

DEAN LYNN

Asst. Dean of Women Elizabeth Lynn remarked that the sign-out could or could not strengthen the bill, but she did not feel it was the right time to comment on her persinal opinions concerning the bill.

Women's Vice President Myggnon Champion yielded the chair to Pat Doomar and stated her convictions, "I am strongly in favor of the bill as it now stands. We must taken into consideration that when we legislate we must strongly encourage rules that will not leave loopholes to digress."

In reply to Sen. Buerke's suggestion that the bill be tabled so that senators could have forums with their constituency, Sen. Jennifer Newcomer explained that she had spoken to 90 per cent of those she represents, and that the vast majority were in favor of the bill with the amendment.

Let's Deep Six Some Cheers (?)

Now that the cheering season is gone, now that we don't have football and basketball, it's time for all loyal Seminole fans to get together and get rid of some of the cheers.

Take for instance, "two bits."

What's wrong with "two bits?"

Well, any fan with an ounce of spirit in his soul will revolt at cheering this high school . . . nay junior high school yell.

We remember the time of Clemson contest . . . when the fans were shouting for blood . . . and then the cheer leaders lustily called for "two- bits."

What happened?

We cheered, but the volume was different. It was strained and unnatural. One disgruntled fan put it properly, but silently, "I refuse to yell this damn high school cheer." He didn't.

So "two-bits" definitely needs to be given the boot.

And an another one: "sitting in a wigwam."

Barf!

It's Mickery Mouse, and furthermore it's a throwback to the Indians.

But it does have one redeeming feature: the part that goes "Sock 'em!"

This part comes naturally and unstrained to the enthusiastic fans who can sincerely scream this yell. It was almost bloodcurdling against Clemson. The angered fans by-passed the "clap-by" permission of the cheer, and vehemently screamed for their foes scalps. It was beautiful.

The best cheers can be recognized by this quality: they are directed to the crowds and not the cheerleaders.

"FSU one time" falls on the borderline. It is halfway devoted both, but still not a superior yell.

The hoky-dink and hokey cheers include such yells as:

"Beat .....Florida State."

"Hi Florida! Hi, State!"

et cetera

The cheers don't have to be complex like "Da dum Yea Team!" but often the spirit can be brought forth by a single thing like Marching Chiefs playing 'That Old Seminole Spirit," "Georgia Brown," "The Fight Song," and one other.

And this one is the height ofsincericty and simplicity (and which is not copied from Leon High): "Go, Go, Go, Go, Go."

The crowds can handle that yell with the greatest of ease.

So, how about it, whoever is in charge of putting those ridiculous yells on the programs. Let's not be so juvenile.

Seminole Shorts

On a recent trip to Gainesville, our swimmers not only were humiliated by defeat, but also had to endure the constant barrages unsportsmanlike insults of the most hostile Florida crowd. One explanation for the reaction of the 2,500 Gator fans perhaps reflects their frustration at Seminole teams this year.

Dave Fedor has been named to all-opponent teams of the University of Florida and Oklahoma City University basketball

Furthermore, Fedor, is getting a week's leave of absence from teammate Ray Swain and possible Rufus Ashworth on Jacksonville AAU's team, which will travel to Denver to compete in the national AAU tournament. And who is one of the Semi-teammates' Florida graduating senior, Cliff Luyk.

Seminole Track Team To Battle South Carolina

The Florida State University track team will go against the South Carolina Gamecocks tomorrow in Columbia, S. C.

This will be the first encounter between South Carolina and Florida State. The schools had a match scheduled last year, but a severe rain storm washed out the meet.

Florida State will rely on co-captains Quentin Till and Jeff Clark, with Herbie Kraft and Terry Long providing an extra boost. The Seminoles have not been defeated this season and have dropped the University of Miami and Furman University in matches this month.

Co - captain Quentin Till will be one of the crucial Seminole athletes against the Gamecocks Saturday. The Seminole has been an important leg on the cinder-men's relay teams.

Gymnasts Seek SIGL Victory

Florida State Gymnasts will seek their 10th Southern Intercollegiate Championship Saturday when they travel to Statesboro, Ga.

Rick Miller and Miten Wiehstock, who are the leading point winners for the Tribesmen, will be the co-captains for this meet.

FSU Tips Tech Thrice

The Florida State Seminoles met the Georgia Tech Yellowjackets this week in three baseball games and emerged victorious in each contest, although two of them went into extra innings.

The Jackets fell, 10-4, in the opener as Tribesman Ray McShane pitched his second victory of the season. McShane went the distance in the contest, striking out seven, walking two, giving up nine hits, and allowing four runs.

Florida State kicked off the game's scoring, marking up two runs in the first and second innings, while the Jackets tallied none.

Second baseman Billy Williamson started the scoring when he doubled to left to drive in right fielder Bob Wilcox, who had singled, and shortstop Woody Wooddard, who had walked.

In the next frame, Buddy Teagle got on board due to a throwing error and then reached third after a wild pitch. Left fielder Doug French walked, and both men stole — Teagle scoring.

Center fielder Bob Madison got on base due to an error, and French came home for the Seminoles' fourth run.

Third baseman George Ferguson rapped a single, scoring Mangin for the inning's third run

McShane then slapped what should have been a bunt, but Tech erred and turned it into a single, scoring Fergusson for the fourth run Florida State then had a 8-2 lead.

Georgia Tech's best inning was the fourth when two runners came across. Left fielder Charley Thompson whacked one to right and Bob Wilcox miffed the catch, allowing Tech's Billy Williamson to score.

A single by right fielder Dick Conliff scored Thompson.

A home run in the fifth by third baseman Mickey Carmack gave Tech its last point, and from then on the Seminoles padded their victory bytwo runs.

The ninth run came in the seventh when FSU's Williamson scored on a passed ball, after advancing to third via Mangin's single.

Woodward singled in the eighth totally centerfielder Bob Madison, who had walked and swiped second.

JACKETS JOGGED IN 11TH

With the bases loaded in the 11th, second baseman Willaismson hit a single to push FSU to a 9-8 victory over Tech.

Williamson's single brought home Madison, who had gotten aboard on balls. Left fielder Dwight Smith sent Madison to second on a sacrifice and Woodward followed up with a single to set the stage for Williamson's game winning single

Woodward spearheaded FSU's attack with one homer, a triple, and a homer. French, Madison, Wilcox, and Williamson got two hits apiece for Florida State

Larry Hawkins started on the mound for the Seminoles, lasting four and two - thirds innings. Hawkins fanned three, walked four, and surrendered eight hits in this period.

Then Fred Echols worked for three and one - third frames, only to give way to Allen Thomas, who lasted through the 10th.

Seminole John Tucker came on in the 11th to claim the victory. The hurler struck out one and failed to give up any bases on balls, hits, or runs.

Florida State took the third contest, 7-8 once again going into extra innings.

And Teagle once again came through for some vital hits.

In the 10th, with the score knotted, 6-6, the Florida State catcher sacrificed to bring across Williamson. The second baseman had reached second on a two - bag error by Tech's Williamson. He moved to third after Tech muffed a gounder.

Florida State led off the scoring in the first, netting one run. However, Georgia came through to score two in the third, taking a 2-1 lead. In the fourth, the Jackets seemed to have the game sewed up as they tallied three runs, but the Seminoles broke up in the seventh to score one and then tied the game in the eighth as Teagle hit a two-run homer.

Thomas hurled the last one and one - third innings for the Seminoles and was given the victory. The Tribesman fanned three men, walked two, and surrendered one hit

Peterson Begins Annual Alumni-Varsity Contest

The Spring intra-squad football game has been cancelled this year, and the athletic department has substituted an annual alumni-varsity battle.

The game will be played at 2 p.m. May 5.

The game will be played at 2 p.m. May 5.

In the past the Tribesmen have closed their spring drills with a squad game, but Coach Bel Peterson has considered the possibility of a match against alumni.

The alums will be coached by Ken MacLean, the Florida High grid mentor and a former FSU quarterback.

The grads may possibly boast strength from such pros as Bobby Renn of the New York Titans, Jack Espenship of the Montreal Canadians, Bud Whitehead of the San Diego Chargers, and Tony Romeo of the Dallas Texans.

Bob Nellums, coach of Monticello High, Tom Feamster, a Tallahassee insurance man, and Fred Pickard of Tallahassee will be available. Mighty - mite Pickard, who holds an FSU record for total rushing yardage in a career and the longest touchdown run from scrimmage, will assist in the backfield.

Nellums and Feamster will anchor the grads' line.

Another prospect is halfback Buddy Reynolds, who is known as "Bart" to television fans. Reynolds took up acting after graduating from FSU: he has made numerous TV appearances and was a regular on "Riverboat." However, because of his TVcommitments, he may not be able to compete in the varsity-alumni clash.

Hugh Adams will switch from houses to horses and assist MacLean in coaching. The FSU housing director will be joined by Walter Foy, head football coach at Quitman (Ga.) High Feamster heads an alumni committee which is contacting former players. Seniors on last year's squad, who will graduate in June, may also boost the alum's strength.

The spring semester Red Cross Senior Life Saving course will begin at 8 p. m. Monday. The class will meet Monday and Wednesday from 8 to 10 p. m. for five weeks in the women's gym.

In FSU Battles

Springfield, Tech Die

The Florida State golfers came out of a three-way meet unscathed this week, downing Georgia Tech and Springfield (Mass.) College.

In the first day of competition, the Seminoles defeated Tech, 17-10, and then went on to swamp Springfield, 30-0.

Dave Philo led the Seminoles against Georgia with a 73 score. He was challenged by the Yellowjackets' low of 74 by Frank Landrey.

Dave Philo led the Seminoles against Georgia with a 73 score. He was challenged by the Yellowjackets' low of 74 by Frank Landrey.

Philo and Jim Hill, who shot an 82, tied Bill Ploeger and Buddy Baker, who shot 77s. Joe Lane and Lanrey combined to shoot a 77 and 74 respectively to down FSU's Chuck Keating and Bryan Bergerson, who tallied a 77 and a 74.

Seminoles Manny Nordone and Doug Davis scored 76s, which were good enough to defeat Robbie Horak and Roy Humphreys. The Georgians shot an 80 and 83 respectively.

In the first contest against Springfield, Philo and Hill scored a 73 and 82 to put Florida State ahead, 9-0. They downed Al Peterson and Jim Pratt, who shot an 86 and an 89. Keating and Bergerson toured the course, shooting a 77 and 74 to down Bill Stackowitz and Bill Phelps. The New Englanders dropped in a 94 and 84 respectively to give FSU a 18-0 lead.

Nordone's and Davis' 76s were enough to shellac Tom Tyson (90) and George Munson (104). Dick Whitmire closed out the whitewashing by tallying a 75 to defeat Ole Holmes, who scored an 89.

Springhill fared little better in its second encounter with Florida State, falling 26½-2½.

Davis' 72 was best for the day, as Davis and Hill (76) dropped Peterson (81) and Stackowitz (87).

The New Englanders picked up nearly a point when they fell, 8½-½, to Nordone's 75 and Shulman's 79. Pratt and Phelps shot an 87 and 84.

Dick Whitmire and Dick Ross of FSU closed the play by scoring a 75 and 76, which bettered Tyson's 82 and Holmes' 96.

Springfield's third bid for a win was disastrous as the Seminoles romped, 27-0.

Davis and Hill shot a 75 and 76 to lead Florida State in the win and to drop Tyson and Pratt, who scored an 85 and 94. Nordone's 77 and Shulman's 80 socked Peterson (86) and Holmes (85).

Whitmire shot a 79 and teammate Ross duplicated his score to drop Phelps (89) and Stackowitz (81).

FSU Declines Detroit's 'Turtle Tournament' Bid

Student Body President Bobby Byrd announced yesterday that Florida State University has "regretfully declined" to enter the University of Detroit Spring Carnival "International Turtle Tournament."

Byrd declined comment on the reason for FSU failing to enter the tournament, but reliable sources state that lack of a suitable entry prompted the action.

The invitation to enter the contest was extended to FSU from the Tournament headquarters at the University of Detroit. The letter appears as follows:

"The birds are in the trees, spring is in the air, and the campus is covered with couples. Once again it is time for the University of Detroit Spring Carnival.

"This week of fun is kicked-off by the famous 'International Turtle Tournament.' To which it is now my priviledge (sic) to enter an official invitation to your school. This monumental event will be held May 5th, 1962, at the Northland Shopping Center, here in Detroit, and will be highlighted by colorful costumes and a spectacular racing program.

"Now to enter, your first step is to send us your champion racing turtle. WHAT?? You don't have one!! Well, send us one dollar, with name and decoration pattern for your entry. We will gladly assume the responsibility of your turtle.

"Our experts have carefully studied and perfected a training program which includes a ballanced (sic) diet, frequent exercise, and careful grooming to insure that your entry is in the peek (sic) of condition for the race.

"We will notify you of the results and be glad to return any prizes that your contestant may capture.

"We will be looking forward to your reply!

"Please return to: Turtle Keeper, care of University of Detroit Student Council, 40001 West McNichols, Detroit 21, Michigan.

"We just received word that in order to comply with the State Racing Commission, a saliva test must be run. No fear, we will make sure that your entry is in top racing condition.

"Thanking you,
I remain,

Greenwood Tells Of Changes Made In New Student Party Constitution

Seven constitutional changes have been made by the Executive Council of the Student Party, Chairman Bill Greenwood has announced.

"These changes were made in an effort to close loopholes which have existed and which might have resulted in future Student Party Conventions being turned into circuses," he said.

CHANGES

The constitutional changes include the following:

1. Residence Hall Delegates will be chosen by the executive council of each dorm. The selection committee is to be composed of at least the top four elected residence hall officers.

2. Day and Married Student Delegates will be chosen by the day student senators and the Student Party Committee in a joint session.

3. Protests may be made and can result in the removal of any delegate.

4. "Unit rule" voting is forbidden. "We feel that it is unfair for (using West Hall as an example) six people to sway eleven votes by means of a simple majority.'

5. Delegates lists must be published at least two weeks before the convention.

6. The executive council of the party no longer has the power to amend the constitution. It now can be amended only by a majority vote of all the convention delegates.

7. Party whips, who have no special powers in the party (no voting powers) will be placed in each dorm to inform the residents if news regarding the party. They will also be used to help create an interest in Student Party affairs.

NEW DELEGATES

Greenwood also announced that a new list of delegates is being chosen for the next [illegible] vention, April 10 [illegible] ing this convention, we [illegible] dent Party, hope to prove [illegible] selves as the respected [illegible] body which has existed for many years," Greenwood explained.

"If you plan to attend the convention, please come with the desire to help the party," the chairman asked. "If you plan to attend for other reasons, please stay home," he requested.

Notices have been posted [illegible] residence halls for students to sign - up if they are interested in serving as party delegates.

SHAKESPEARE DOESN'T LIVE HERE ANY MORE

A recent and most heartening development in American college life has been the emergence of the artist-in-residence. In fact, the artist-in-residence has become as familiar a sight on campus as Latin ponies, leather elbow patches, Rorschach tests, hula hoops, and Marlboro cigarettes.

And we all know how familiar that is—I mean Marlboro cigarettes. And why should it not be familiar? Why, where learning is king, where taste is sovereign, where brain power rules supreme, should not Marlboro be everyone's favorite? The same good sense that gets you through an exam in Restoration Poetry or solid-state physics certainly does not desert you when you come to pick a cigarette. You look for a flavor that is flavorful, a filter pure and white, a choice of pack or box a lot to like. You look, in short, for Marlboro—and happily you don't have to look far. Marlboro is available at your friendly tobacconist's or vending machine, wherever cigarettes are sold in all fifty states and Las Vegas.

But I digress. We were speaking of the new campus phenomenon—the artist-in-residence—a man or woman who writes, paints, or composes right on your very own campus and who is also available for personal consultations with superior students.

Take, for example, William Cullen Sigafoos, artist-in-residence at the Toledo College of Belles Lettres and Fingerprint Identification.

As we all know, Mr. Sigafoos has been working for many years on an epic poem in rhymed couplets about the opening of the Youngstown-Akron highway. Until, however, he went into residence at the Toledo College of Belles Lettres and Fingerprint Identification, his progress was not what you would call rapid. He started well enough with the immortal couplet we all know: They sped along on wheels of rubber, rushing home in time for supper . . .

Then Mr. Sigafoos got stuck. It is not that his muse deserted him—it is that he became involved in a series of time-consuming episodes: a prenatal lobotomy for Irwin, his faithful sled dog; fourteen consecutive months of jury duty on a very complicated case of overtime parking; getting his coattail caught in the door of a jet bound for Brisbane, Australia; stuff like that.

He was engaged in a very arduous job in Sandusky—posing for a sculptor of hydrants—when an offer came from the Toledo College of Belles Lettres and Fingerprint Identification to take up residence there, finish his magnum opus and, from time to time, see a few gifted students.

Mr. Sigafoos accepted with pleasure and in three short years completed the second couplet of his Youngstown-Akron Turnpike epic: The highway, as made of solid concrete and at the toll station you get a receipt.

Then a few gifted students came to visit him. They were a prepossessing lot—the boys with corduroy jackets and long, shaggy beards, the girls also with corduroy jackets but with beards neatly braided.

"What is truth?" said one. "What is beauty?" said another.

"Should a writer live first and write later or should he write and do a little living in his spare time?" said another.

"How do you find happiness—and having found it, how do you get rid of it?" said another.

"Whither are we drifting?" said another.

"I don't know whither you are drifting," said Mr. Sigafoos, "but as for me, I am drifting back to Sandusky to pose for the hydrant sculptor."

And back he went, alas, leaving only a fragment of his Youngstown-Akron Turnpike epic to rank with other such uncompleted masterpieces as Schubert's Unfinished Symphony, the Venue de Milo, and Singer's Midgets.

Take cheer, good friends, from one masterpiece that is complete. We, refer, of course, to Marlboro cigarettes. Filter and and tobacco end are both as good as tobacco artistry and science can make them.

Senate Encourages Merit Raise Release

Student Senate last night unanimously passed a resolution "encouraging the releasing of the full $1.3 million for merit pay raises."

The action was taken in a special session called by Vice President Ken van Assenderp.

Sen. Johnny Smith, who introduced the bill along with Senators Gene Brown and John Schaffner, asked for its adoption in order to "encourage professors of merit to stay in Florida universities. The sole reason that professors did not protest the switch to the trimester system is because they were promised these merit raises."

The text of Senate Resolution Number 41 is:

Whereas The Florida legislature has appropriated $1.3 million for merit pay raises and

Whereas The Faculty Senates at FSU and UF have demanded the full $1.3 million and

Whereas Up to now it is believed that it was the legislative intent and policy of the Board of Control and Board of Education to give adequate financial support for the additional work load entailed by the trimester system and

Whereas There may be an attempt to cut said pay raises below the $1.3 million available and

Whereas It would seem that an increase of 11% pay raise is considerably inadequate to compensate for a 24% heavier work load and

Whereas In order to compete with comparable institutions in other states, Florida educational institutions must maintain adequate expenditures for faculty salaries and

Whereas It would seem that educational facilities and desirable faculty salaries are directly related to the quality of higher education in the state and

Whereas The continuing growth in greatness and stature of higher education in the state of Florida bears direct positive relationship on the attraction of industry to the state and

Whereas Witholding pay increases will no doubt result in an exodus of capable university professors;

Be it Resolved That the FSU Student Senate formally encourage the releasing of the full $1.3 million for merit pay raises.

Be it further resolved That we, as representing student opinion, endorse the efforts of the faculties of FSU and UF in attaining the needed substantial merit pay increases.

BOC Executives Discuss Raises With Prexies Today

By JOAN ABBOTT
Flambeau News Editor

Possible Board of Control recommendations concerning faculty merit salaries will be discussed by a three-man executive committee of the Board with the state University presidents, today.

The committee, composed of Baya Harrison, chairman, Frank Buchanan and Charles Forman, will meet at 10 a. m. in the Board of Control Office in the Psychology Bldg. at Florida State University.

Recommendations of the committee will be considered by the full Board at a special called meeting, at which it will decide on the final recommendations to the State Budget Commission concerning the faculty salary raises.

CONTROVERSY

The current controversy is over whether the entire $1.3 million appropriated by the Legislature for merit pay raises should be used or only about half of it.

The Board of Control and Governor C. Farris Bryant have taken the position so far that the entire amount should not be used just because it is available.

Bryant, the UPI reported, said raises should be based on what can be justified within the state's ability to pay.

The university presidents have stated that they believe that it was the intent of the legislature for the entire amount to be used and that even if it all is used, faculty salaries will still not be competitive with those in comparable institutions in other states.

FACULTY RESOLUTIONS

The faculties at both FSU and the University of Florida adopted strong statements last week in favor of the state spending the full $1.3 million on merit rasies.

The FSU Faculty Senate adopted a resolution Thursday, protesting any attempt to cut merit raises below the total $1.3 million available. (See full text also on this page.)

The U of F Chapter of the American Association of University Professors met during the afternoon in Gainesville and joined FSU with a similar resolution. It requested the Board of Congrol to authorize the universities to prepare immediately budgets using full legislative appropriation.

"The various public statements concerning lesser percentages, being either the intent of the Legislature of the competitive need of the Florida universities, are in error and reflect misunderstanding of the truth of these matters," the resolution said.

WITH UNDERSTANDING

The teachers said they accepted the trimester system only with the understanding that the legislative appropriation would be followed by the Board of Control, Board of Education and the Budget Commission.

"We were shocked when the payment for the 25 per cent required increase in workload under the trimester was set at 11 per cent," the professors added.

We were interested to learn that should any professor want to continue teaching only the present full two - semester academic year, he would have approximately 13.2 per cent deducted from his present salary.

At Gainesville the UPI reported, the head of Florida's Political Science Dept. charged the state budget office was a centralized agency operating at a "horse and-buggy" rate. Dr. Janning J. Dauer made the charge to the applause of fellow professors as they adopted a strong resolution asking that the full amount of funds available be used.

"The centralization for which Washington is famed is nothing compared to the centralization which exists through the state budget office," he said, according to the UPI.

LO INCREASE

Dr. Dauer said that figures released by Budget Director Harry Smith claimed that university professors would, under the present controversial plan, receive a 27 per cent increase in salary. But Dr. Dauer said the workload under the trimester beginning in September would increase by 25 per cent, resulting in only a two per cent hike in salaries.

"Higher education in Florida is being taken care of by words and not by action," he charged. "We are willing to bring in space industry, but not to meet our own share of educational responsibility," he added.

Governor Bryant, who took issue with the claim that the year-round operation would increase the work load one - fourth, had no immediate comment, the UPI report said.

However, an aide said there is no scarcity of applications from "qualified" pesons wanting to teach at Florida universities, the UPI reported.

Blackwell

Talk Covers Crisis In Ed.

GEORGIANA BATEMAN
Guest Writer

The spread of intellectual dropout is as much a threat as atomic fallout, Florida State University President Gordon W. Blackwell said Sunday night.

Stopping this trend is just one of the challenges of higher education in the present decade, since this type of fallout is a loss to society and to this nation, Dr. Blackwell told the audience attending the second lecture in a series sponsored by Liberal Forum.

Dr. Michael Kasha, director of the Institute of Molecular Biophysics, speaks as the third lecturer Sunday, at 7:30 p. m. in Longmire Auditorium.

The crises and challenges for higher education in the sixties as Dr. Blackwell outlined them are related to three basic questions: Who shall be educated? How shall the student be educated? How shall the student's education be financed?

'STAGGERING INCREASE'

The "staggering increase" in population suggests one crisis, says Dr. Blackwell. For instance, 20,000 high school graduates will want to enroll in colleges somewhere this year.

Where will these young persons go? The junior college movement in the state will be one facet of Florida's higher education program for the high school graduate to consider.

But at FSU, housing facilities will help determine the number admitted. "This means inevitably that we will be more selective," President Blackwell said.

Dr. Blackwell feels that meanwhile there is also a responsibility to educate thousands of international students, as well as adults.

Quality of education can't be divorced from the quality of the faculty, the FSU president said, citing the attractions of academic freedom, fringe benefits and salaries as means of keeping a top - notch faculty.

CURRICULUM REVISION

Curriculum revision is one means for maintaining this quality education. FSU, in cutting out the dead wood, is planning to offer students new inter - departmental programs in Far Eastern studies, city planning, and space sciences.

"Global trends of the first half of the twentieth century," Dr. Blackwell emphasized, "dictate that those working with young people must prepare the citizen of tomorrow, not for life in a local community nor for narrow nationalism, but for life in a local community that is not less than international or global, stretching even to the outer reaches of the universe."

Another trend in quality education is the new inter - disciplinary research institute such at those at FSU in social research, child development, government research, and molecular biophysics.

Though these "show leadership and daring," Dr. Blackwell warned against the university becoming over - organized.

Student activities too must be placed in their proper perspective. Too many students attend colleges for social reasons and

Faculty Takes Stand On Salary Raise Issue, Passes Resolution

The complete text of the resolution pertaining to faculty salaries passed by the Florida State University Faculty Senate, March 22, is as follows:

WHEREAS, The faculty at Florida State University have viewed the trimester system with mixed opinions and various misgivings on academic and economic grounds;

WHEREAS, Up to now we have believed it was the legislative intent and policy of the Board of Control and the Board of Education to give adequate financial support for the additional work load entailed by the trimester sysem;

WHEREAS, We find it incomprehensible that an increase of 11 per cent should be considered adequate to compensate for what is close to 25 per cent heavier work load;

WHEREAS, We know that the system of higher education in Florida is in a far more precarious state than the public realizes in that faculty salaries are not competitive with those in comparable institutions in other states and would not become so even with the expenditure of the full amount appropriated by the legislature;

WHEREAS, We recognize that Florida has more than adequate resources to support an expanding and improving system of higher education;

WHEREAS, We insist that budget provisions for educational facilities and especially for salary schedules are directly related to the quality of higher education in the state; therefore

BE IT RESOLVED, That we the Faculty Senate at Florida State University wish to acknowledge and express in public resolution:

FIRST, our confidence in President Blackwell's understanding of what of budgetary provisions are essential to recruit and retain a first - rate faculty, to sustain and promote academic and professional curricula of recognized excellence;

SECOND, our reluctance to embark on the trimester system unless or until we have assurance that full financial support will be available to compensate faculty equitably for the over-all speedup involved in year-round operations;

THIRD, our endorsement of additional and substantial merit increases from funds already appropriated for faculty salaries by the Legislature for individual members of the faculty, considerations of merit to include superior teaching, professional research or creative activity of some renown, outstanding service to the University and to the State and

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, That copies of this statement be furnished the Council of Presidents, the legislative delegation of Leon County, the Board of Control, the Board of Education, the Budget Commission, and the Governor of Florida.

State Lags In School Cents

Florida ranked third among 16 Southern states in its public expenditures for higher education in 1961-62, but Floridians pay less—least of all Southern states—in relation to their personal income.

A report by the Southern Regional Education Board, entitled "State Support and Long-Range Goals," states "most Southern states spend less of their total state funds on higher ecucation than do states in other parts of the nation."

And, continued the report, "by 1970 the Southern region will have to spend $2.9 billion annually for a college enrollment of 1.7 million. Current expenditures are $1.1 billion a year to educate 883,000 students.

Florida appropriated $46,076,000 for higher education in 1961-62, said the SREB, an increase of almost $4.9 million over 1960-61.

FLORIDIANS PAY LESS

However, Floridians in 1960 paid $3.28 per $1,000 of personal income, lowest of all Southern states. The regional average was $4.72 and the national figure $4.42.

"Gains in support of higher education are encouraging," said Dr. Winferd L. Godwin, director of SREB, but there is evidence that the gap between regional expenditures is growing. We started from behind in the race and we cannot afford to drop still further backward."

The SREB said that while state legislatures in the South appropriate less of their general revenue for higher education than do those in other states, "it takes more of the Southern taxpayers' personal income to pay this bill."

Forms For Qualifying Test Are Available

Applications for the April 17 administration of the College Qualification Test are now available at the Selective Service System local boards throughout the country.

Eligible students who intend to take this test should apply at once to the nearest Selective Service local board for an application and bulletin of information.

Following instructions in the bulletin, the student should fill out his application and mail it immediately in the envelope provided to Selective Service Examining Section, Educational Testing Service, P. O. Box 586, Princeton, N. J. Applications for the April 17 test must be postmarked no later than midnight, March 27.

According to Educational Testing Service, which prepares and administers the College Qualification Test for the Selective Service System, it will be greatly to the student's advantage to file his application at once.

Test results will be reported to the student's Selective Service local board for use in considering his deferment as a student.

FSU Students Average Rises For Fall Semester

In releasing data concerning grades for the fall semester, 1961-62, Registrar Murray Kenna said that student averages are rising.

He said the better grades were due to (1) selective retention, whereby students who aren't profiting from classes are dropped by the University and discouraged from returning, and 2) increased selectivity in the freshman class admission requirements.

The fall semester a year ago, with 8,974 students enrolled, the overall average of the student body was 2.4281; this year, the overall average of 9,695 students was 2.4690.

Breaking these figures down, the 4,881 men students last year had an average of 2.3281, and 4,093 women students made an average of 2.5389. This year the comparative figures were for 5,237 men students, a 2.3726 average; for 4,458 women students, a 2.5742 average.

Atotal of 1,159 sorority women made an average of 2.5815 last year, as compared with this year's 2.6025 average. In 1960, 1,087 fraternity men averaged 2.1299, as compared with a 2.2107 for 1,066 fraternity men in 1961. A total of 2,246 Greeks averaged 2.3685 in 1960, to compare with a 2.4240 for 2,307 Greeks in 1961.

Graduate averages both years were much higher than the overall average of the student body. An average of 3.2972 was made this year by 1,396 graduate students, with 1,005 men making a 3.2744, and 364 women scoring a 3.3589.

Last year, comparative figures were: 1,302 graduate students, 3.2084; 950 men, 3.1823; 352 women, 3.2765.

Republican Nominee Varn Talks To Student GOP Club Thursday

By JIM SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

Wilfred C. Varn, Republican nominee for the ninth congressional district, will speak to the Young Republican Club Thursday, at 8 p.m. in Opperman Amphitheatre.

Varns' opening remarks will center around his qualifications in seeking the nomination and why he is a Republican. Mainly, he hopes to conduct a lengthy question and answer period.

TWO-PARTY SYSTEM

Varn has strong convictions on the two - party system for Florida. As a third generation Floridan and one who has spent most of his life in a traditional Democratic environment, he turned to Republican affiliation due to his belief in the two-party system as the best for good constitutional government.

He remarked on the large Republican growth that is encompassing the state and he feels that he is taking part in an important movement in politics "Too few of our voters," he said, "realize or understand that in the November General Election, regardless of party label registration, a voter may cast his vote for the candidate of his choice, whether that candidate be the Democratic nominee of the Republican nominee."

He added that a large number of people in this district are registered Democrates so that they may be able to participate in local politics. With the growth of the two party system, he believes that registrations will change considerably and allow voters to participate in local politics and a two - party system.

As United States Attorney for the Northern District of Florida, Varn believed in administering justice in strict accordance with the law. If a man were accused of a crime and the evidence gathered to convict him was obtained illegally, there would be no justification in prosecuting him by violating his basic rights as an individual citizen. "If justice is not done according to law," he said, "there is no justice."

Varn also believes in a strong and better America built on the tested foundations of Thomas Jefferson, a true conservative. He believes in the importance of the individual citizen and will work to keep government close to the people and out of the hands of an expanding bureaucracy.

His chief purpose in appearing before the Young Republican Club is to inform them of qualified Republican candidates in a Democratic area. Also, he wants them to realize that Republican candidates are in complete support of the Young Republican movement.

VETERAN

Varn is a native Floridan, attended Florida Secondary Schools and is a graduate of the University of Florida Law School. He served in the Pacific Theatre during World War II as an officer. His duties were classified and involved top secret material. He was awarded the Army Commendation Medal and presently holds the rank of Captain in the U.S. Army Reserve, Judge Advocate General's Corps.

Varn is a member of the Tallahassee Bar, the Florida Bar, the Federal Bar and the American Bar Associations. He has been admitted to practice before all courts of Florida, the United States District Courts and the Supreme Court of the United States. Currently he has a private law practice in Tallahassee

ONE OF THE TOOLS OF MOLECULAR RESEARCH, AN ULTRA VIOLET SPECTROGRAPH IS demonstrated to visiting high school seniors by Dr. Michael Kasha, director of the Florida State University Institute of Molecular Biophysics. The laboratory fills with "smoke" as kasha pours liquid air into thermos for an experiment. The four students, among 19 West Florida students touring science facilities at FSU last week under the auspices of the Florid aDivision of the American Cancer Society, are, left to right: Marcia Sapp of Vernon; Cleo Chandler of Sneads; Earl S. Reed Jr. of Marianna; and Lloyd Hinote of DeFuniak Springs.

Speak Out For Education

The Board of Control's executive committee meets today to discuss the merit pay raise controversy. Its decision will likely be a most influential one in determining whether the full $1.3 million apropriated will be released or whether only $623,000 will be devoted to faculty raises.

THIS COMMITTEE WILL weigh carefully the opinions expressed by university presidents and university faculty members. The opinion of university students rightly should be added to their list of considerations.

Issues of the magnitude of the faculty wage dispute deserve careful student thought and firm student expression. The time for that expression is now.

TO US, THE ISSUE SEEMS clear. We agree fully with Gov. Colgate W. Darden, Jr., of Virginia, who last year told the Southern Governors' Conference that "nothing is more costly to a people than inferior education. Unless we in the South are willing, and we are able to pay the price of superior education, we will seal the doom of this section. We shall end as a second-rate and mediocre section of the nation."

We would sincerely regret seeing the State of Florida, noted for its outstanding growth and progress in many areas, relegated to second rate because it refused to pick up the bill for superior education. Inferior education results in refusal of new industry to move into the state. It decreases the value of business throughout the state and lowers the state's value. More important, it leaves the citizens of the state culturally and intellectually inferior. Inferior education forces the states' more intelligent students to seek elsewhere for education. It leaves fertile minds unchallenged and unused. Inferior education breeds both cultural and commercial depression.

WITHOUT GOOD FACULTIES at the state universities, this depression seems likely. And there is little doubt that a mass exodus of university professors is in the offing if the state withholds the pay increases. This was made graphically clear in a resolution passed by Faculty Senate expressing "reluctance to embark on the trimester system unless or until we have assurance that full financial support will be available to compensate faculty equitably for the over-all speedup involved in year-round operations."

University of Florida professors expressed similar sentiments. "The various public statements concerning lesser percentages, being either the intent of the legislature or the competitive need of the Florida universities, are in error and reflect misunderstanding of the truth of these matters," stated a resolution adopted by the University of Florida chapter of the American Association of College Presidents.

The drastic effects of a mass loss of faculty members can be understood by students better than by any outsider. That thought is a frightening one.

THEREFORE, WE URGE ALL students to staunchly support the faculty and Pres. Blackwell in their request for release of merit pay raise funds. Vice President Ken van Assenderp called a special session of Student Senate last night to pass a resolution supporting merit raises. Pres. Bobby Byrd is drafting a letter with University of Florida Student Body Pres. Bruce Bullock supporting the stand taken by the faculty. These are both excellent moves.

The remainder of the student body should support their leaders in this action. Hometown legislators can be contacted. Letters can be written to hometown newspapers. The cause of better education is one that should be fought by all students and their parents.

Mr. Edwin Crawford, former Auburn Plainsman editor now with the Southern Regional Education Board, told students at a Southern Universities Student Govt. Association convention, "I think you can and should speak out about the need to attract and keep well-qualified faculty members to your university. To do this you must demand that faculty salaries in Southern institutions be made competitive with those in the rest of the nation."

As Pres. John Kennedy eloquently said at the University of California last week, "Knowledge, not hate, is the passkey to the future."

The passkey of knowledge, like anything valuable, is expensive. Students know the value of this passkey. They should speak out strongly in support of quality education.

BCS

A Matter Of Dimes

We are proud of the firm statement from the Faculty Senate of this university which was issued in resolution form March 22.

NOT OFTEN DOES our faculty feel constrained to take a stance requiring a stiff backbone . . . certainly not as a group.

We have heard it said that "faculty senate did itself proud by grubbing for more money?" Why not? The teaching profession is about the only one left that would have to grub. Grubbing or not, they need and deserve the money. They should have it without the uproar. There's not a unionized group in the state that would put up with the treatment our faculties take. The bus drivers, pilots, and any number of other professional laborers for the public would tie this state in knots should they become involved in such a fray.

IF THERE'S ANYONE LEFT who feels the college teachers have not comported themselves with dignity and restraint in the face of a pointless controversy, they should take one more long look. It's time the campus, particularly in Florida, and particularly where the faculties are concerned, were given some of that consideration the rest of this state demands, sometimes under less favorable circumstances and certainly for lesser reason.

We can be proud of the Faculty Senate. Maybe in future they will see fit to say something else from time to time. They are entitled to speak out . . . and we think they should and can without the university closing from outside pressures. The tax paying citizens of Florida have too much money tied up in educational facilities to stand by and see the state university system shot down over what amounts to a matter of dimes where state funds are concerned.

Let's Get Serious

One Hears So Much

By GERRY DOBSON

One hears much these days of the danger from the right. There are fearsome tales of liberties trampled under foot, bombs thrown, people hounded out of jobs, etc etc. Joedy Smith has summed it up neatly when he says that the "radical rightists" and the HUAC deprive people of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. I was a little surprised that he did n· also mention something about mother, God and country. But then, country is a dirty word these days.

UNFORTUNATELY, Mr. Smith and the others who appear more disturbed with those alarmed at communist success than with those who at this very moment are depriving us of freedoms which no one seems to care about have failed to quote specific instances in which the "Radical rightists" have actually deprived people of rights. He did mention the recent bombings, as yet unsolved, in California which he blamed on the "Radical rightists" were responsible. He has, if one may paraphrase the liberals, made "wild and unsubstantiated charges" for which he has absolutely no proof, in the best traditions of the imaginary rightists he piously claims to be fighting. Evidently Mr. Smith has never heard of the term "agent provocateur."

But enough of this. Let's turn to the danger from the left, more dangerous because it is less publicized, more powerful, and is at this moment destroying our hard-won freedoms under the guise of "Social reform," "welfare" and other such terms. For today in America we are trading our liberty for security . . . letting the Government do for us things we should do for ourselves, and at the same time permitting this Government to further regulate our lives. The following are a few examples of the encroachment of our "rights" which one might expect people like Joedy Smith to be screaming to high heaven about, but about which they are strangely silent. But maybe it's not to be expected. For the persons involved are not communists, their sympathizers, fifth - amendment takers, or even rioters. They are merely ordinary American citizens, obviously not deserving of liberal attention.

INNOCENT UNTIL PROVEN GUILTY? Not under our income tax laws. When a private citizen faces the Government in an income tax case, he is guilty until he proves himself innocent. He must prove that he does not owe the taxes in question, and unlike usual law cases, the burden of proof is not on the accuser, but on the accused. In addition, the government can tie up a private citizen's assets, even in excess of the amount of tax in question, until he does prove it.

Deprive a citizen of property? There are several cases in which farmers have lost thier farms for the "crime" of growing the crops they wanted to grow. In a case in Georgia, the farmer merely continued to grow the same crops he always had, and wound up in jail and with his farm gone. But after all, I suppose the "Experts" knew best.

ACADEMIC FREEDOM? There have been numerous cases in which conservative (I hope the term is not objectionable) professors have been forced out of jobs because they wouldn't knuckle under to a liberal heirarchy. Do you doubt it? Read Russell Kirk's column in this week's National Review, which may be found in the library

These are just a few examples; more cannot be listed in a short column. But Young Americans for Freedom, a new conservative student organization here at FSU is willing to air the whole question of "Danger from the right vs. danger from the left" and challenges the Liberal Forum, the Young Socialist League, or any other liberal group on campus to a public debate on the topic. We have heard all sorts of generalities and cliches emanating from the liberal camp. Let's see if they are willing to defend their position, and back up their charges in public debate.

Candidate letters for the major candidates must be not later than 5 p.m. today. Not more than 20 signatures of endorsement should be attached to any letter.

Peter And The Red Wolf

By CHRIS CLARKE

As alert Americans, we must be ever on the watch for Communist infiltration and its poisoning effect on the minds of our youth. It has come to this writer's attention that there exists in many of our public schools today a piece of music that is mrely a flimsy cover - up for the spreading of Red lies. My colleague, Dr. N. F. Falkenberg BVD, and I have reached the conclusion that Prokofieff's Peter and the Wolf is a direct attack on our Great Country. Dr. Falkenberg BVD has had one semester of Russian history and is recognized as an important political scientist and authority on that country.

LET US TAKE a look at this Communist treachery. Peter is obviously a symbol for the Communist ideology. I would question the loyalty of any American who disagrees with the statement. Those of us who are wide awake also see the fact that Peter's grandfather stands for the conservative group in Russia who are proved wrong when Peter (The Party) vanquishes the wolf (The American Way). Beyond any doubt the hunters who come to the boy's aid stand for the masses of people whom the Communists wish the world to believe are on their side

How do Peter's animal friends fit into the story? Here the Communist trickery becomes even more subtle but will be interpreted by us loyal American Birch Watchers. It is perfectly clear that the animals can only be the neutral nations of the world. Note what happens when the duck gets too close to the wolf . . . she is swallowed up. This is what the Commies are saying we Americans will do to any neutral nation that comes close to our side.

EVEN THE DUCK POND has its purpose. Clearly it stands for the Atlantic Ocean. The ocean now becomes a duck pond through the possibility of missile warfare. The woods behind the pond of course are America.

All red - blooded (excuse the phrase) Americans will immediately see the truth of this proclamation and will rally to have this filth taken away from our public schools where youth can be exposed to it. The deceit extends to such great lengths that tnat I have even seen this work issued on the Red Seal label.

After Hours

Floor Show Vs. Film

By KAREN THORNTON

In the past there has been great criticism of the campus movies and the operation of same. Mostly the gripes have concerned the technical aspects connected with the projection booth. I feel it is about time to discuss the behaviour of the "children" in attendance, not for the entertainment, but to furnish the entertainment themselves.

IF I WANTED A FLOOR SHOW, I think I might go someplace where the curriculum included a basic course in Floor Showing. It won't be offered here because the student body would exempt it en masse. Certainly if I wanted a floor show, I would not attend the campus movie . . . not intentionally, except now I know that that is where to find one

Friday night at the showing of Ivanhoe, there was more than a little unfounded "mature" childish behaviour. It was uncalled for and in poor taste. It became largely a yardstick for measuring the lack of wit among a segment of the campus long noted for a lack of anything but blind instinct.

THE LOUD BOOING comments, the whistling and stamping of feet was an asinine exhibition. The ad - libbed statements did not add to the entertainment. Heckling is not welcome at public functions, especially that conducted by overaged juveniles.

Before you jump to conclusions, these actions were not conducted by boys only. Four young women sitting behind me talked "loudly" throughout the showing of the movie. So that they might be able to identify themselves with the evening's entertainment, I wish to tell them that I did not care whether or not they had fudge shortcake for supper. Mostly I didn't care to hear about their breaking of bread during the main portion of the movie which I was trying desperately to hear

FACULTY MEMBERS and their families attend the campus movies. The students owe it to themsleves to be on their best behavior for this reason if no other.

I would like to ask the students guilty of participating in the floor show to take their normal inhibitions along to the darkened auditorium with them. To exhibit a bit of consideration for those who came to enjoy the screenplay and not the kiddie antics of the audience. Their actions may yet result in the doing away with the campus movie. I don't believe they want this to happen. But it could.

Dial 222-8000 For Fatigue

By CARL ROSENBUSH

I'm sure that most of you have experienced difficulty in using the university telephone system when calling on campus. But to those who have tried to call on from off campus have yet to experience a great delight. To call from on campus is horrible, but to call from off campus is fantastic; then you have the combined efforts of Southeastern Telephone and FSU Speakingtube to render your call into a venerable hash.

AS I AM OPERATIONS assistant at WFSU-TV, it is sometimes necessary that I call the station to rectify a mistake I've made or to give some information. Assume that the transmitter has tripped off. Then I try to call to let the announcer know so that he can get the station back on the air. So I dial 222-8000. After a few clicks and sputters, the phone rings. "Good afternoon, Florida State University."

"I would like to speak to WFSU-FM please."

"Thank you!" Buzzz . . . . . "Good Afternoon. WFSU-TV."

"PARDON ME, the operator connected me with you instead of the radio station. Would you please tell me their number?" "2104." "Thank You!"

I now dial 222-8000, again. "This is a recorded announcement. The number you have dialed is nonexistent, has been changed or has been disconnected. Consult your directory or dial 133 for information. This is a re . . . "

2-2-2-8-0-0-0, click, chunk, splat! "Floridastateuniversityholdon." Long silence. "What number do you want?" "2104, please!" Bzz. "Good afternoon, Dean of Women's Office." "Dean of Women? What number is this please?" "2140," "Excuse me. Wrong number. Goodbye."

For the third time I try to dial 222-8000. "Florida State University." "I would like the radio station, WFSU-FM, at 2104." Thank you." WHAP - Flak - SNAPP - CRA.K "I'm sorry but they're busy.,,

IT SEEMS THAT the University system thinks that it is common and dull to use a mere beeping sound for a busy signal, so they have rigged up something that sounds like Spike Jones dropping a garbage can full of pots on top of a microphone. They must have an arrangement with the local otologists to split costs for all the cases of split eardrums such noise causes.

Try number four: 222-8000. "Florida State; number please." "I would like to speak to 2104 please." Bzzz long silence. "I'm sorry but they don't answer." "I know. You only rang once for a microsecond. Maybe they didn't see the light which they use instead of a bell." "Okay, I'll ring again." Bzzz, "Good afternoon, WFSU-FM." "Hello, Bob, this is Carl. Do you know you're off the air?" "Oh yes, and we've been back on for ten minutes now."

Reflections

For The 'Longhairs'

By LESLIE POWELL

The coed dorms will be bored stiff by this column. Practically nobody else will understand it in all probability. Nevertheless, most of my male cohorts will know what is meant: if you have to get your hair cut fairly regularly, and men have since Samson's long tresses brought his career as a lover to a screeching cease, you probably have a a favorite barber and will go around an extra week passing for a sheep dog if you can't get in his chair

MY OWN FAVORITE is in a neighboring town well known on campus for its first run movies, better eating joints than Tallahassee and its courthouse on the square which is no uglier than the monstrosities the state erected among these hollow hills.

So, if some of you campus gents have missed your favorite barber from his old stand in the last few days, and if by chance his name was Joe (Muth), you might look further out on North Monroe where Joe has become affiliated with Delmar's establishment.

For you people who don't understand the bond between a barber and a regular customer, it mostly boils down to getting your chair cut like you want it. And it lessens the chances of such things as cut ears, scratched scalp and frayed tempers.

And besides, once on good terms with practically any barber, you are guaranteed tips on everything from dog races to the private lives of the hot shots, local and national. Barbers don't miss anything, have memories that would make elephants pink from embarrassment, and if they know you, never cut a gap in your hair unless some particularly striking female speciman loiters outside the window.

No Culture

TO THE EDITOR:

The following is an open letter to the Student Government and Student Body, which I hope you will be able to find of significant importance to reprint:

Perhaps the most flagrant abuse of vested power has been the inadequacy of the dormitory government of Smith Hall. Throughout the school year, those residents vested with the authority delegated through elected have undertaken no cultural projects, have failed to organize sports activities, and all [illegible] and dances have been [illegible] unsuccessful. The record clearly reflects the inadequacy of the Smith Hall dormitory officers and the pernicious abuse of vested power. The reason for the complete lack of imagination and effort on the part of those who are supposed to be representing the Hall. For instance on Feb 8 two small signs, carelessly made in crayon, were taped to the elevator doors. This was the total dorm publicity given to a party planned for Feb 28. The results of this fine planning were that seven girls showed up, and the party was another [illegible]. This is only one example of the efficiency of this obtuse, "governmental" group.

Two All Right Types

By BOB FOSS

"Man' Like what a dead Saturday, let's go down to the post office and check our mail and see who's perched atop the wrapping table eagerly awaiting a smile and salutation from the most beautiful of beautiful campus queens such as ourselves."

"FRIO!" CRIES CLOE, as she throws down her basic everyday encyclopedia," "and we could get something to eat."

"Fantabulous!" Cries Cleo, "but I have no money as I have been broke since I purchased those lights for my unicycle."

"AND THIS WORRIES you does it? I'll loan you a couple of lavaliers and some old fraternity pins which you can swap in on a cup of sassafrass and some crackers"

As one must know by this time, Cloe has one smart head atop her shouders. Why last week she sold Mickey Mouse Club Magazines at the John Birch gathering, pop corn at the preview showings of meet John Glenn week, and Florida State bycycle seat covers to the local high school crowd. Certainly nothing wrong with Cloe.

CLOE IS AN ALRIGHT type of girl, but let us not forget Cleo. If one is truly interested and takes time out from collegiate pursuits long enough to check the "Broward Hall Chart of Room Cleaning Champions" you will immediately spot thirty - seven gold stars beside no other name than Miss Cleopatra Lessler. Cleo had had the cleanest room for twenty-seven straight weeks, hasn't lost a coke bottle in her room since it was warm the last time, never has she ended a sentence with a preposition while talking to a counselor, and she always parks her unicycle in the right place

NOT ONLY DO these two Browardlings possess such assets as aforementioned, but they also date two of the sharpest guys on campus. Cleo dates the student senator that puts all other student senators to shame, Ogden Groesbeck. It just so happens that Ogg has more merit badges than anybody else in the entire Northern Florida region.

All in all Cloe and Cleo are Ogg edited the "Knowledge for College" and are presently working on a three volume collection of "Driving and Parking Procedures on the Florida State Campus".

CLOE DATES NONE other than Agnew Cutlip, who is the only person in the history of the modern world that could understand the college catalogue. Not only this, but Agnew dyes Easter eggs in the shower at Kellum for his Sunday school class and counterfeits add and drop slips on the weekends.

All in all Cloe and Cleo are really assets to the infamous glories of ole Broward hall and supberb examples for upcoming freshmen women.

Sigma Xi's Hear Lecture By Roeder

Dr. Kenneth D. Roeder of the Biology Dept. Tufts University, will lecture to the Florida State University Society of Sigma Xi Thursday at 8 p. m., on the topic, "Bats and Moths: Ultrasonic Espionage and Counter-espionage." The lecture will be in Room 101 of the Mathematics-Meteorology Bldg.

A graduate of St. Johns College, Cambridge University, Dr. Roeder began his university teaching at the University of Toronto but has held posts at Tufts University since 1931. The speaker is a fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences and a member of numerous societies, including the American Association for the Advancement of zoologists, Physiological Society, the Entomological Society of American and the Society of Sigma Xi.

He is author or co - author of 60 to 70 papers and reviews on insect brain function and behavior, insect flight, neural factors in evasive behavior, ultrasonic reception in moths and evasive behavior in moths in the presence of ultrasound.

Dr. Roeder's lecture will deal with the contest between bats and moths and the means whereby moths avoid detection of bats. The notions of ultrasonic espionage and counter - espionage will be developed as they relate to this contest. Dr. Roeder's lecture will combine discussions of natural competition and scientific information relating to the neural mechanisms of insect behavior.

Music Hall Presents Faculty Over Weekly TV Broadcast

By MARY ELLEN HARRIS
Flambeau Feature Editor

Every Tuesday night at 8:30 p.m., the WFSU-TV camera focuses on a series of intent expressions and musical instruments and Music Hall, a program featuring the faculty and students of the School of Music, is on the air.

The program, which began a year ago in September, plays once each week during the school year. Its objective is to acquaint viewers in Florida and out of state with the faculty members of the School of Music and with the various activities, organizations and programs of FSU. Music Hall is public relations in scope but, at the same time, provides a cultural and educational program of serious music for viewers of educational television stations.

EMPHASIS ON MUSIC

The format of the program is simple, with the emphasis on music, its composers and performers. To develop continuity, "program notes" are utilized and, when posible, interviews between the host and the guest performer are included in the program.

This series features individual faculty members in 30-minute recitals as well as ensemble groups, both vocal and intsrumental, and choral groups. This involves students, both graduate and undergraduate, and faculty from the areas of music education, composition and theory as well as from applied areas.

Music Hall is financed through the Florida Educational Television Commission which gives the School of Music video tape for the programs. Production costs are absorbed by the Broadcasting Services of FSU.

VIDEO TAPED

The program is presented live each week and is simultaneously video taped. The tape is sent to all the educational television stations in Florida as well as to several out of state stations, including Sacramento, Calif.; Columbus, Ohio; Buffalo, N. Y. and Albuquerque, N. M.

Host for the program is Thomas Wright, associate professor of piano and director of radio-television instruction. Wright has been associated with the NBC in New York and has appeared on several weekly shows including "Concert Hall," Musical Minatures" and the "Chevrolet Show." He was pianist and musical director of the "Song of the Stranger" radio series on Mutual Network. Wright has also appeared in piano recitals and with symphony orchestras throughout the United States.

Director of the series is Billy Bowles, a 1960 graduate of FSU who joined the staff of WFSU-TV as a producer-director. As a student, he organized and conducted a campus musical group.

VARIETY IN SERIES

The series has presented a variety of artists in a variety of selections ,including a Rachmaninoff program, excepts from "The Counsul" and a violin recital by Bela Urban.

Tonight's program presents the Tallahassee Junior Chorus conducted by Lois Schnoor. Eight programs remain: four in April and Four in May. April's series includes a voice recital with mezzo-soprano Elena Nikolaidi, a piano recital with Edward Kilenyi, a performance by the Woman's Glee Club with Betty Jane Grimm conducting and an appearance by the University Singers conducted by Dr. Wiley Housewright.

Music Hour programs for May include the FSU String Quartet, the Men's Glee Club conducted by Raymon Meyer, Bartok's "Two Pianos and Percussion" with Dr. John Boda, Edward Kilenyi and the FSU Percussion Ensemble and a program of compositions by Carlyle Floyd.

Salaries . . .

ner A. Baum said, "To my knowledge there is no flood of applications." However, he explained to the Flambeau that in "the normal working of the academic market place," teaching personnel is sought by the persons who are doing the hiring t' ough their professional connections.

"There is no doubt that there is a general scarcity of well-qualified persons," he stated. "This scarcity is more acute in some areas than others, he added.

Dr. Baum said that the "faculty turnover this past year has not been excessive." "On the basis of salary adjustments that had been made this year and were expected to be made, faculty reaction has been favorable," he added.

The dean said he could not make any numerical predictions about the loss of faculty that might result from the expected salary increases being withheld. "I am convinced, however, that there will be adverse effects," he said.

Some of these will be due to the University going on the trimester system and others because of salary schedules.

"Salaries are still movin, ahead in the rest of the country," he commented.

ADVERSE EFFECTS

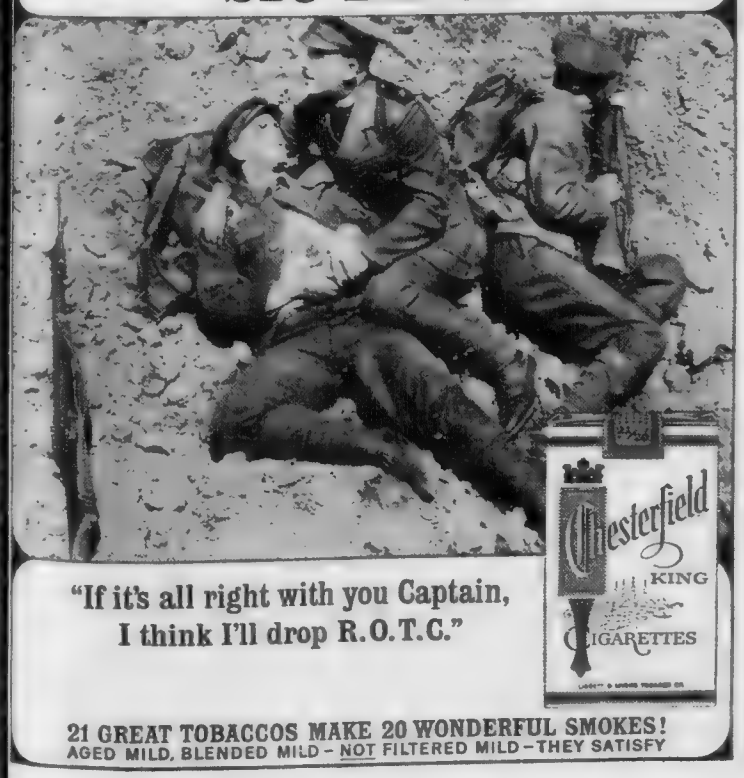
The dean explained that it was not the percentage of faculty lost, but who was lost that was important. "A dozen faculty members, if they choose to leave, would do grave damage to the educational program," he said, while the loss of 50 others might not be as grave a problem. "The real danger lies in losing the best members of the faculty," he continued. The best faculty members would be the ones that would naturally be sought by other institutions.

BRYANT'S POSITION

In explaining his position, Bryant told the UPI that the Legislature had thought the state was getting 10 months work from the teaching faculty contracts because contracts and pay were supposedly based on 10 months. He said the change to the trimester system was taken to get more productivity from the faculty.

By this shift, saying to the professors "We want you to use more of this time for which we are paying, doing this instead of that, asked the governor, "is the professor working harder?

"Perhaps he is, but I do not think he is working one-fourth harder," Bryant said.



Phi Delta Theta will observe its annual Community Service Day April 1st and 7th by completely revamping the Easter Seal Clinic for crippled children in Tallahassee.

GENE GROWN DEMONSTRATES WATER SKIING IN BARE feet, one of the feats which may appear in the water ski show during the Student Government sponsored Reservation Day. Brown is asking for skiers interested in helping with the show or in forming a ski team to contact him.

SG Sets Date, Attractions For 1962 "Reservation Day"

Florida State University's Student Government is planning to sponsor a "reservation day" in April which will feature a water ski show as one of its main attractions, it was announced recently by Gene Brown, junior class senator.

Brown, who is also past president of the FSU water skiing club, asked that skiers interested in helping with the show contact him at 2249

Brown remarked that FSU is one of the few colleges in Florida that has no organized water ski team. Florida's first college ski team, according to Brown, was formed at Florida Southern which has offered water skiing as a physical education course since 1948. Other teams are found at the universities of Miami, Florida, Stetson and Tampa These teams hold intercollegiate tournaments throughout the year.

Skiers on campus who are interested in forming a team as well as performing in the show should also contact Brown at the same extension.

Campus Chest Selects Organization For Drive

By SANDRA DIXON
Flambeau Staff Writer

The Campus Chest Committee has selected the organizations to be supported by the all-campus drive to be held April 11 through 16.

The organizations are World University Service, the Helen Keller World Crusade for the Blind, and Project Hope. Undersecretary of Student Events Betty Ann Eastridge explained that organizations seeking donations were studied according to their activities and budget, and selected on the basis of student interest.

World University Service is an organization which, with the contributions from students and teachers, carries out the stated purpose of "creating an atmosphere for learning and international cooperation within the academic community and dedicated to the ideal of a university community transcending all barriers of race, nationality and creed."

SINCE WORLD WAR II

Miss Eastridge said, "FSU has had a relation to WUS since the days of World War II. Between 1946 and 1958, the contribution from our campus dropped below $1,000 only three times." A WUS traveler has been invited to visit FSU to explain and interpret WUS to interested groups, she added.

The Helen Keller World Crusade for the blind, an organization under the sponsorship of the American Foundation for Overseas Blind, provides blind children with an education, and blind adults with training and job placement. Miss Eastridge said that FSU has contributed to the Helen Keller Crudade for several years and student interest has again convinced the committee that it should be supported.

SS HOPE

"Project Hope is a new charity which has recently created a great concern among students and has proven to be a very worthy cause," Miss Eastridge said. Sponsored by the People to People Foundation, the SS Hope is a medical hospital boat complete with hospital staff, which travels overseas to give medical aid and training where they would otherwise be unavailable.

Other organizations may be included later. Students are encouraged to suggest organizations to the Campus Chest Committee. Miss Eastridge explained, "This is the student's philanthropic cause which is to be used as they want to use it."

Blackwell . . .

"feel it is a penalty to study." Threats to academic freedom cause a great deal of concern. Dr. Blackwell pointed out that extremists must realize universities are institutions which produce material and cultural advancements.

The university should be a compass pointing the way, not a reflecting mirror to the community, he said.

As for financing educational programs, President Blackwell believes the federal government will move in with increasing amounts of money if other sources, such as the state government, alumni or private sources don't meet the educational crises.

"Education is expensive," Dr Blackwell said. "The only thing more expensive is ignorance."

Candidates:

As a service feature the Florida Flambeau will run sketches and photographs of all the candidates for major Student Government offices.

Candidates are responsible for either bringing a suitable glossy photograph to the Flambeau office or coming to the office in 213 Longmire between 7 and 8 p.m., Wednesday or Thursday, to have a picture taken.

Lobbyists

Student volunteers are needed for the student lobby committee.

The committee will be involved with meetings and conferences with state legislators concerning legislation pertinent to FSU. Anyone interested should call the student body president's office, Ext. 2100, to be notified for an interview.

For further information, call Bill Boykin, Chairman of the Student Lobby Committee at 222-5768.

Artist Lectures

Edward Hill, assistant professor in the Art Dept., will lecture in the Art Gallery, tomorrow at 8 p.m.

He will discuss drawing in general and the current exhibition, "Drawings from San Francisco."

Hill teaches drawing and has exhibited his own drawings in many parts of the country. In the Third Dixie Drawing Exhibition, now in Montgomery, Ala., Hill was awarded a prize for his drawing entitled "Owl."

Rotary Club

A free trip to New York and an audition for the Ted Mack Original Amateur Hour will be the first prize in an Amateur Show sponsored by the Rotary Club of Cairo, Ga., April 6.

Auditions for the Rotary Amateur Show will be at 3 p.m. on April 1. Those wishing to be in the show must be present for this audition. An orchestra capable of accompanying all acts will be available.

A limited number of entry blanks for the show can be obtained in the Flambeau office on the second floor Longmire Bldg Those wishing further information and entry blanks can obtain them by writing Rotary Ted Mack Amateur Show, 113 South Broad Street, Cairo, Ga

Football Shouldn't Be The Top Sport

(Editor's note: This attack against the football team was written a student who didn't quite have the nerve to sign his name the article. This page assented, nonetheless, to print his ions.)

iversities and colleges have been shackled to the yoke of Football long enough. It is time for the colleges that can't it their scholastic life with football to discard the burdensome

Florida State is no exception.

Gridiron Harms Education

Football is one of the "student activities" that harms education neral. It harms education by taking funds from where they be better used.

example of this is the terrific sum, which Florida State Uni- students pay to the King via their activity fees .Just think at could be done with all that money . . . we might even e to improve the salaries of a few professors, professors who more valuable than the dirt covered football players.

the trend continues in its present path at Florida State, and if is gain admittance to the Southeastern Conference, we can ope for more money uselessly going to a "expensive" sport.

Useless Money

Useless for two reasons: the first is that college is a place for ng and not for play; the second is that this school would be out of it a class. The SEC—with LSU, Mississippi, Alabama, —is far too powerful for puny Florida State.

Florida State is just barely superior to Southern Conference and it is not too big to avoid an upset from Virginia Tech, m and Mary, or Richmond.

rida State would fare much better by throwing its financial behind another sport, if it is to concentrate on sports. It be much better for FSU to give more basketball scholarships, money to basketball, and more money to swimming . . . plus sports in which we do better than football—baseball, track gymnastics.

Tyranny Of Football

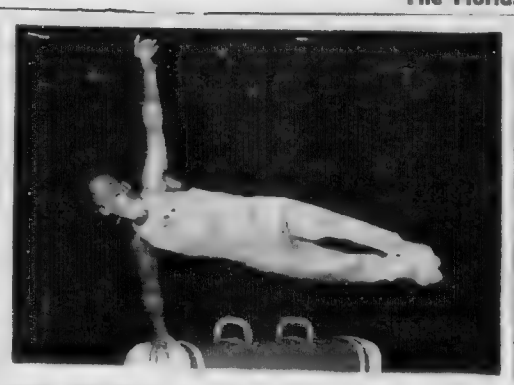
d speaking of gymnastics, here is an example of the tyranny ball. Why was gymnastics disbanded as an intercollegiate when FSU had upset the Swedish gymnasts and had been the best in the country?

The most obvious reason, but one denied by the athletic de- , is that it was done to bolster football.

tball is also a waste of time, because the majority of players elves do not contribute to the standing of the school, as the ering students of Georgia Tech do.

ne of the students close to the football team recently said the were a dumb crowd. If so, the fantastic number of scholar- which Florida State spends on the gridders would be better they were applied elsewhere.

Hope For Deemphasis



frankly, I'm of the opinion that football will not be discarded rida State. All that those who are interested in the reputation school can hope for is that the sport will be deemphasized Harvard, Columbia, Yale, etc. play down football it will probably continue. And next year, Seminole fans will a fantastic amount to see four home games . . . truly against that are basically within their class. But they will also pay ally to pad the records of Auburn, Kentucky, etc. by being on their schedule down right ridiculous—Seminole fans will be paying much to provide agreeable homegames for SEC powerhouses.

Senator Goldwater say, "Where do you stand, sir?"

(A reply to this attack on the football team will be printed Friday's issue of the Flambeau—Sports Editor.)

MITCH WEINSTOCK OF THE FLORIDA STATE GYMKANA performs in FSU's 10th victory of the SIGL.

Gymkana Grabs 10th SIGL Triumph

By ELLANOR DANIELL

Florida State captured the 10th Southern Intercollegiate Championship this weekend in Statesboro, Ga., as Coach Joe Gustic's gymnasts scored a high of 64 points.

The nearest contender was Georgia Tech and its 55 points. Other teams followed with 45 points for Georgia Southern, 39 points for the Citadel, and eight points for the University of Florida.

Co - captain Rick Miller was picked as the most outstanding gymnast at the meet and was high point man for his team (39, Miller won the all - around title, first in free exercise, first in long horse, second in tumbling, second on parallel bars, and third in still rings.

Joe (Sammy Seminole) Greene pushed the Seminoles ahead by copping first in tumbling and trampolining. He came in fifth on the long horse.

Milton McGowen was third in points with a second place on the trampoline and a fifth in tumbling. Mitch Weinstock took a second place on the rope climb and sixth on the parallel bars. Jim Hampton finised sixth in the all - around.

Until the last event, (tumbling), Florida State trailed Tech, 52 - 49. Then Greene, Miller, and McGowen took first, second, and fifth respectively to push FSU ahead.

"FSU needs full support by the student body and administration if it is to repeat this victory next year, as the meet will be sponsored by the University of Florida," Coach Gustic said.

"Also," he continued, "LSU, Furman, and the University of Georgia have asked admittance to the 1963 SIGL. All this points to the rapid growth of gymnastics in the South."

Seminoles Bop Naval Academy

The Florida State Seminoles triumphed over the Naval Academy baseball team Friday and then tied the middies Saturday in a game that was stopped by darkness.

The FSU B-team fell, 8-4, to the Navy squad on Saturday.

Led by Woody Woodward's three hits and Bill Williamson's homerun, Florida State defeated the Middies, 8 - 2, in the first contest to give FSU its fourth straight victory.

A game between FSU and Jacksonville University was rained out.

Hurler Ray McShane claimed the victory for the Seminoles, running his wins to 3-0. McShane pitched for seven innings, giving up five hits, one run, two bases on balls, and striking out four.

The Seminoles trailed, 1-0, after the first, but added one each in the second and third to move ahead. They brought two across in the fourth to lead, 4-1. Navy scored its last run in the eighth, and then Florida State padded the score with three runs when they came to bat.

TIED, 6-6

The Seminoles were unable to complete their second game when darkness cut the contest short at the end of four innings. The score of the game was 6 - 6.

Racquettes Tie Florida

The Racquettes managed only a tie in the first meeting of the Florida State and University of Florida women's tennis teams. Gail DeLozier, playing the number one position, spearheaded the Seminole attack as she downed Alice Luthy, 6-4, 4-6, 6-4.

To Meet LSU Thursday

Tribe Socks Gamecocks

Florida State's track team rolled over the South Carolina Gamecocks, 81 - 50, last weekend in preparation of their battle with the cindermen from Louisiana State University. The Seminoles won 10 out of 15 events, to capture their third dual meet without a defeat.

Co-captain Jeff Clark and sprinter Craig Johnson spearheaded the Seminoles' attack, with Johnson running the 100 in 10-flat and Clark slinging the shot 49 - 10 ¾.

Both men then went on to respectively win the 220 in 21.9 and the discus with a 151-9 measurement.

Quentin Till finished second in the 220 behind Johnson, with Deane Fowble of South Carolina coming in third. Fowble and Allen Stanford grabbed the other two events in the 100.

Florida State added more points in the 440 when Till triumphed with a 48.5 timing. Terry Long finished second for FSU and Charles Upton of South Carolina came in third.

The Seminoles completely swept the 880 as Bill Davis captured first with a 1:55.4 time, and Jack Brocksmith and Leon Smith finished second and third.

South Carolina dominated the mile run, taking first and third on the performances of Ed Cribb, who ran the course in 4:20.3, and Henry Daurgherty. Florida State's Dick Roberts came in second, however.

The South Carolinians, unopposed in the two - mile run, copped the event in 10:12.7 as Cribb, Jack Masem, and Paul Hendricks took first, second, and third.

Florida State failed to score again in the high hurdles as Charley Bradshaw finished the course in 15.1 with second and third going to Neil Atkinson and Paul Hendricks.

The Seminoles bounced back in the low hurdles with first and second places. Spike Olsen finished the course in 25.2, while FSU's Long and the Gamecocks' Atkinson completed the field.

Pole vaulter Ed Hayes soared 13-11 for first place, and then Bill Crotty of FSU took second. Ray Collins of South Carolina came in last.

Tom Cauthman of South Carolina copped first place in the high jump with a 6-2 leap. Then a tie developed for second between two Seminoles. They were Mike O'Brien and Tommy Borune.

Herb Kraft jumped 23-4 1-3 in the high jump for first place, with South Carolina taking second and third.

The mile relay team from South Carolina won their event in 3:22.9, as FSU's regular team did not run.

TIGERS ON THURSDAY

Louisiana State and Florida State tracksters will collide Thursday afternoon at 1:30 on the Florida High track and field, pairing two of the best teams in the South.

Both teams have several things at stake in the encounter, while risking their undefeated records.

For Louisiana State, which won an impressive triangular meet last week over Texas A&M and Rice, the Seminoles represent the only squad that has managed to defeat them since 1957. Here, in 1960, the FSU cindermen handed the Tigers a stunning defeat, which is regarded by many to be one of the greatest upsets in Florida State's brief athletic history.

LSU, which is also the perennial champion of the Southeastern Conference, holds the SEC's prestige at stake before the independent Seminoles.

Even though the Tigers were edged by Auburn last year for the conference championship, they are favored to capture it this year, as they normally do.

On the other hand FSU will seek revenge from the Bengals, who handed the Seminoles their only dual meet loss last year in Baton Rouge and ended FSU's nine - meet winning streak.

For both teams, the meet will prove to be a warm - up for the Florida Relays in Gainesville Satsurday. The Seminoles will have a psychological advantage in Thursday's meet because they have not lost a home dual encounter since 1957.

The Tribesmen have defeated LSU here in two previous occasions, the last time being in 1960, while losing to the Tigers twice in Baton Rouge.

The Tiger-Seminole encounter has been judged a toss - up, with interesting duels shaping up in the sprints, the weights, and 440 events.

LSU's pole vaulter, Joe Harris, has cleared over 15 feet numerous times and was recently named athelte of the year at the Memphis Relay.

Baby Tribesman Nip Troy State

The Baby Seminoles triumphed in their final event in the FSU-Try State (Ala.) track contest to win their only scheduled dual meet of the year.

They nipped the Alabamians, 65 2/3-65 1/3, after winning the mile relay on the performances of Merril Agnew, Jim Newman, Al Cato, and Ross Winter, who clocked 3:32.5. The Li'l Tribesmen have lead the series 2-1, with the mile relay being the deciding factor each time.

Cato and Winter of the relay team provided the Seminoles with double victories in the match, as Cato finished the 100 in 10-flat and the 220 in 23.5, while Winter captured the high and low hurdles in 16.3 and 26.6 respectively.

The FSU-Troy summary:

440 Dash—1. Fagan, T. 2. Agnew, FSU. 3. Newman, FSU :52.5. 100 Dash—1. Cato, FSU. 2. Clanton, T. 3. Cox, T. :10.0. High Jump—1. Delcambre, T. 2. Lorenz, FSU. 3 Maxwell, FSU. Winter, FSU. Linkers Triumph In Jacksonville 3-Way Golf Bouts

Bryan Bergeron shot a 71 last week to help push Florida State past the University of Florida, the Naval Academy, and the San Jose Golf Club in a three-way match in Jacksonville.

Florida State stayed out front with 37½ points, while San Jose was only six points behind. Florida's golfers, who were defeated in an FSU - Gator match in Tallahassee earlier, came in third with 22, while the Middies finished with 13 points.

In the second day of play, Florida State dropped Yale, Jacksonville Navy, and the Naval Academy for the second time.

This time, Dave Philo came through for the Seminoles, shooting a low of 74. Chuck Keating was three stroked behind Philo.

The linkers will compete in the Houston Invitational tournament Thursday. The University of Houston golfers recently swept all comers in the Florida Intercollegiate Gilf tourney, finishing four places ahead of the Seminoles.

FSU Splits With Navy

Florida State, after falling to Navy Friday, came back Saturday to edge the Middies, 4-3.

Paul Scarpa was Florida State's main impetus as he socked Tom Quinn, 6-1, 6-3, in the number one singles match.

Then Gordy Smith defeated Navy's Lee Pekary, 6-3, 6-1, for Florida State's second victory. Ed Fusula became the first Seminole to fall when he fell, 6-2, 6-4, to Navy's Corky Graham.

Florida State bounced back on the 6-3, 3-6, 6-0 effort of Jamie Jamieson against Sam Karabasz. Then Navy claimed a victory when Groff Kirkland socked Mike Ryder, 6-1, 6-2. Bob Teall provided the final Naval victory as he downed netter - cager sets Wally Dale, 6-0, 6-0.

Paul Milto grabbed the last victory for Florida State as he dropped Red Badgers in two 6-3

Dr. Housewright Gives 'Last Lecture'

Dr. Housewright

Dr Wiley L. Housewright, professor of music education, will be the lecturer at the Mortar Board's Last Lecture Series on April 5 at 8 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall. His topic will be "Cultural Conflicts in American Life."

Dr. Housewright, with two other editors, has just completed an 11-year period of work on a series of textbooks for teaching music in elementary school. The first three texts of the series, entitled the Birchard Music Series, were published March 14 of this year.

Last year's distinguished professor of the year, Dr. Housewright was awarded the Honorary Gold Key Award in 1961. In 1960 he received a grant from the Carnegie Corp., administered through the National Education Assn., to design programs in the arts for gifted secondary school children.

He was awarded a grant from the Conference Board of Associated Research Councils (Fulbright Act) for teaching and research in Japan (1956-57). In 1960 he was appointed to the U. S. National Commission for UNESCO.

He has been chairman of the editorial board of Music Educators Journal since 1957, and has been an editorial associate, Journal of Research in Music Education, 1953-62.

Officer, ROTC Drill Team Honored By Air Force

In ceremonies held during the drill period last Thursday, the U. S. Air Force R.O.T.C. unit at FSU recognized a regular Air Force officer and 29 cadets for outstanding service.

The officer, Capt. James J. Nelson of Tallahassee, received an Air Force Commendation medal for "meritorrious service while an aircraft commander in the Strategic Air Command from December 15 1957, to May 2, $961." He has been stationed here since June, 1961, while working for a bachelor's degree in meteorology at FSU. He was previously stationed at Dyess Air Force Base in Abilene, Tex., where he commanded a B-47 bomber.

The cadets, all members of the AFROTC Cadet Wing Drill Team, were awarded the Cadet Merit Ribbon for "exceptional service during the academic year 1961 - 62." They participated in the Sunshine City Drill Competition in Tucson, Arizona, held February 8 - 12 of this year.

The team won tenth place out of 43 drill teams in the competition and won their commander, Richard B. White, an award as outstanding drill commander.

The cadets receiving the ribbons were Burton Benson, Joseph Betts, Peter Cagle, Simon Casoria, Larry Crow, John M. Curls, Arland Eyle, David Garbrick, David Hamilton, Charles Heddon, Edward Jeffcoat, Laurence Jerome, Barry Koch, Stephen Mikler, Carson Moore, Richard Newcomb, Frank Rhoads, Jack Rowland, Stephen Shepherd, Anthony Skiff, James Spoontz, Gabe Stewart, Pete Strickland, James Tarr, Norman Thagard, Jerry Vaughn, James Warren, and Richard White.

Urban Affairs

Cook Speaks In FSU Series

The "fragmentation of government" is hindering plans to deal with the severe problems of great urban aggregations of people, according to Louis Cook, Tallahassee city planner.

Cook, addressing an American Studies lecture series audience at Florida State University last Wednesday night, said Tallahassee has a typical probelm of cities: "the Tallahassee of tomorrow is being obstructed beyond the control of the city to effectively regulate the use of land and the improvements to land."

One - third of the single family residences are beyond the city limits, he said, and the rate of construction outside the city regularly exceeds that within. Big cities have even a more severe problem of government. Atlanta, he said, with a million people, spreads into five counties with 18 spearate incorporated areas.

Having one federal agency, such as an urban aifairs department, as a coordinating agency "would be one means of overcoming many of the deficiencies of local government," said Cook. "It would also have the effect of removing local self determination from the citizen."

Cook added he had " a great personal fear of becoming a mass produced man in a mass society. One good example of national standardization is the countless subdivisions marching endlessly and drably across the face of the nation."

Another approach is the "Workable Program For Community Development" calling for a citizens' planning commission, he said, and still another plan is to have a state planning agency as coordinator for a community program. Florida has a planning department in the Development Commission, said Cook, adding:

"Some very real possibilities exist if the state would accept the challenge and recognize the value of the planning department."

Super government or metropolitan control as in Miami and Montreal are other approaches, he said. Both have experienced difficulties but appear to be functioning satisfactorily," he said.

Still another approach is "metropolitan control of a single service." An example is the Metropolitan Planning Commission of Atlanta.

Canadian Ballet Comes To FSU

By LANA MURRAY
Assistant News Editor

The National Ballet of Canada, the National Ballet Orchestra and a company of 80 will perform a program of five traditional and contemporary ballets in West- Auditorium next Wednesday night.

The performance, sponsored Gamma Phi Beta Alumnae As- tion, will begin at 8:15 p. m. tickets which are $2 for students $3 for non - students, may obtained at Westcott Ticket ce.

FIVE NUMBERS

The numbers to be performed Wednesday night are "Les Syl- "One, in Five," "Pea- Pas de Deux" from Giselle, Spring."

Another comedy number on the program, "One in Five," was created by Ray Powell, dancer-choreographer with Britain's Royal Ballet. The story is slight, five clowns on an empty stage, with a surprise ending which stems from its title.

After the premiere of "One in Five" at the London Sunday Ballet Club, the London Times said the ballet "revealed a refreshingly gay and original sense of humor — and was brilliantly matched to its music (a potpourri of the Strausses)."

"Les Sylphides," a traditional pure romantic ballet, is considered one of the most poetical of ballets of the Twentieth Century. First presented in March, 1908, by artists of the Russian Imperial Ballet, its present choreographic version premiered in June, 1909, at the Theatre Du Chatelet in Paris.

TRADITIONAL

The other two numbers on the ballet program, "Afternoon of a Faun" and "Peasant Pas de Deux" from Giselle, both are traditional ballets in the permanent repertoire of the National Ballet of Canada.

The ballet company, in its eleventh season, is directed by Miss Celia Franca of London, England. It has made many international tours and has appeared on television networks in Canada and the United States.

Among the artists performing with the company are Earl Kraul, premier danseur; Miss Lois Smith, prima ballerina, and Miss Lilian Jarvis, soloist. All three have danced at the famed Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival at Lee, Mass.

General chairman of the Gamma Phi Beta Alumnae Association project is Mrs. Morris P. Briley.

THIS PANEL OF FLORIDA STATE UNIVERSITY UNDERGRADUATES WILL COMPETE WITH a similar team from the University of the South over the CBS nationally televised program, G. E. College Bowl, in New York at 5:30 p.m. Sunday. L to R are Claire Kemper, Wendell R. Houston, Bonnie Freedman and Steve Whealton. The Sewannee team is fresh from victories over three other colleges in the wits-matching contest.

FSU Team Flies To New York Today For 'College Bowl' Show

The Florida State University College Bowl team will leave by plane today at 3:10 p.m. for New York City to compete in the nationally televised G. E. College Bowl, Sunday.

The FSU team will match wits in the question and answer game with the University of the South team, which will be trying for a third win. The program will be televised locally on channel six at 5:30 p.m., Sunday.

Members of the FSU team are Bonnie Freedman, Wendell Houston, Claire Kemper and Steve Whealton. Members of the U of S. (Sewanee) team are Henry C. Dees, Thomas B. Hall, Charles E. Steele Jr. and Richard W. Tillinghast.

TWO HOSPITALIZED

In the past week two members of the FSU team were hospitalized briefly but both of them will be able to go to New York for the show.

Mrs. Kemper was injured in an automobile accident near Starke a week ago Sunday, which destroyed the car she was riding in. Following the accident she was hospitalized briefly for a slight concussion.

Earlier this week, Miss Freedman was in the University Hospital with a case of German measles, but she was released, yesterday.

ALTERNATE

Ann Kendall will accompany the team to New York as an alternate and will replace any member of the team who is unable to appear on the show.

Dr. and Mrs. Paul J. Piccard will also accompany the team on the trip. Dr. Piccard has been coaching the team during the practice sessions.

While in New York the FSU representatives will have accommodations in the Waldorf - Astoria and will be given play tickets, probably for A Man of All Seasons.

Sunday there will be two practice sessions before the live performance. During a one-minute intermission on the program a film will be shown about FSU.

If FSU wins, the University will receive $1,000 in scholarship grants and can return to the program for up to five weeks.

Honor Court Acts On 15 More Cases

The decisions in 15 Honor Court cases were announced yesterday, by Chief Justice Dan Wabolt, which brought the total number of cases decided this year to 43.

Three of the cases concerned illegal procedures concerning football tickets. One student was found guilty of deliberate deception in the illegal use of an I.D. card for three football games. The student was sentenced to two semesters of Honor Court probation.

In two of the cases concerning football tickets students were found guilty of falsification of records by signing for football tickets not intended for their personal use. Both students received a semester of Honor Court probation, although the sentence of one of the students was suspended.

A student who was apprehended while stealing articles from the Student Center was sentenced to immediate suspension. A woman student who was found guilty of lying in using an illegal sign-out procedure in a dormitory was sentenced to one semester of Honor Court probation.

Another woman student was found guilty of deliberate deception for writing a permission note to be used in signing - out of the dormitory and was sentenced to one semester of Honor Court probation.

A student found guilty of plagiarism was sentenced to immediate suspension. The student used a book for information for a report, quoting the material verbatim without citing the source.

In two cases involving stealing and lying at Kellum Hall, students were sentenced to immediate suspension on the stealing charges, but the sentences were suspended and both were given one semester of Honor Court probation for lying.

A student charged with deception in the illegal use of late minutes was found guilty and sentenced to one semester of Honor Court probation.

In another case of stealing, a student was found guilty of stealing books from the Seminole Club and sentenced to immediate suspension.

Two students found guilty of lying to University personnel were each given one semester of Honor Court probation.

In another case of deception concerning the sign - out procedure in a dormitory a student was found guilty and sentenced to one semester of Honor Court probation.

In the most recent case tried by the Court, a student was sentenced to one semester of Honor Court probation for lying to University personnel.

Honor Court probation includes restriction from representing the University in any way, in activities or student affairs, exclusion from holding a University - administered scholarship, and any further offense while under probation may result in immediate suspension, Walbolt explained.

BOC Withholds Half Of Prof Raise Funds

University Presidents Dispute Needs For $623,000 Reserve Fund Established

By BEN SHARP

Acting on the recommendation of their Executive Committee, the Board of Control voted unanimously, Tuesday, to release $607,243 in merit pay raises for professors, to give salary goosts to academic deans, and to place the remainder of the $1.3 million legislative appropriation in reserve for the trimester changeover.

The Board of Control's ruling will go to the cabinet Budget Commission for final action, but the cabinet is expected to approve the action.

RECOMMENDATION

The recommendation called for:

1. $607,243 worth of faculty merit pay raises.
2. Raises for academic deans to be taken from the remainder of the appropriation.
3. Permission for Presidents to deduct monies for new positions previously approved by the Board from the remainder of the appropriation.

The Board also expressed that it would "like to leave the door open for isolated, individual cases where the Universities would hire an outstanding professor or keep an exceptional faculty member by granting a merit raise."

The decision was viewed by university presidents and faculty members as a setback. They had hoped to obtain the release of $1,011,000 for merit raises.

FSU FUNDS

Florida State University will receive $19,500 for deans' salary increases and $46,937 for eight new positions.

Heated discussion flowed at the Executive Committee meeting before Frank Buchanan proposed the amendment that was adopted.

Much of the discussion centered around funds available from the "May-June lapse factor." This lapse factor is figured by estimating the number of students which will be enrolled during the first half of the third trimester and trimming the faculty in accordance with that number. Money saved from not having a full faculty makes up the lapse factor.

Board member Charles Forman felt that this money should go into a reserve fund.

"As a result of study, there is no doubt in my mind that the $623,000 should be used for merit increases, but that the other monies should be used as a reserve for year round operations," said Forman.

ACADEMIC DEANS

"It would be very foolish to spend this money when we don't know how much money will be needed for year-round operation. But I believe some of this money would be used to give raises to your academic deans," concluded Forman.

President J. Wayne Reitz of the University of Florida disputed this.

"We have felt that the Legislature intended some of these monies for salary increase by indicating that a desficiency appropriation could be asked for," Dr. Reitz contended.

"In order to achieve the salary level the Legislature intended, it would seem to me that the lapse fund would be a means of achieving a salary level it is important to achieve. Considering the total intent, we should be able to use these funds to get salaries to an appropriate level," said Dr. Reitz.

President Gordon W. Blackwell, of FSU, agreed with Dr. Reitz.

"I assumed that the goal of the Board of Control was to make salary scales of Florida institutions competitive," Dr. Blackwell stated.

"I assumed that the 11 percent increase to compensate 25 per cent increase in work load with the understanding that other monies would be available for merit increases.

"If you only give 11 percent, you are in effect squeezing more work from the faculty without adequate compensation. Either they will work less weakening the education of the University or the salary scale will be weak," Dr. Blackwell said.

"I take very violent exception to this," Forman contested. "By no stretch of the imagination will professors do 25 percent more work. Students get 25 percent more education. But the man doing the research to keep up in his field will not do more research. He will do either the same or less."

"I am convinced," countered Dr. Blackwell, "that unless they decrease the quality of teaching, the professors will do 25 percent more work. They will spend more time in class and more time in preparation. I, and the professors, feel that their research and creative work will suffer. There has been no material increase in teachers in the last few years while there has been student increase. Any research done will have to come after a 45-50 hour week when a professor carries a full teaching load."

Bailey Talks On Congress As A Frontier Here Monday

"Is Congress the Old Frontier?" will be the subject of a lecture at Florida State University Monday night by Dr. Stephen Bailey.

Dr. Bailey, dean of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University, will speak at 8 p. m. in the Library Lecture Hall.

The lecture is the third in a series of eight lectures sponsored by the FSU Government Dept.

An educator and administrator, Dr. Bailey has also been active in politics and government. He served as a staff associate on the First Hoover Commission, Task Force One on the Presidency; as director of Task Force One on the Executive, Connecticut Commission on State Government Organization in 1950; as chairman of the Connecticut Democratic State Platform Committee in 1950; as administrative assistant to Sen. William Benton in 1951; and as mayor of mayor of Middletown, Conn., from 1952 to 1954.

Dr. Bailey holds five degrees, including two bachelor's, one from Hiram College and one from Oxford; two master's, one from Oxford and one from Harvard, and a Ph.D. from Harvard. He was a Rhodes Scholar at Ox-

Voting Is Tuesday For Major Student Offices, Amendments

Primary elections for major Student Government offices and voting on three constitutional amendments will be next Tuesday.

Polls will be open from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Ballots may be cast at West Hall, Student Center, Seminole Club, Bryan Hall, Library and Westcott.

Runoff elections will be Friday, April 6.

Ken Van Assenderp, student body vice president, explained that voting on the amendments to redefine lying, the honor code and Senate's position in approving campus organizations is actually a technicality. He explained that these amendments have been passed and approved by Senate and involve no revolutionary new concepts, but that it is necessary that 25 per cent of the student body vote on the amendments and a majority approve the changes to "provide legality of the articles in the Constitution."

LYING DEFINED

Van Assenderp stated that by defining lying specifically as a "deliberate falsification of facts or records," and by concretely stating what is included under this category, Senate was getting away from vague reference terms.

As of last year, the Honor Code was limited to academic dishonesty, explained Van Assenderp. "Before the change in the statues, lying and stealing were also included as offenses. Although these cases can be reported to Honor Court for jurisdiction, a student under the Honor Code is now bound to report only academic cheating," added Van Assenderp.

Van Assenderp then explained that Senate used to possess the power to approve or disapprove all student organizations except fraternities and sororities, under this amendment, religious organizations will also be exempt from Senate approval.

Nancy Sill, chairman of the Elections Committee, urged that all students show careful consideration before they cast their ballots. She also said that "the Elections committee can disqualify any candidate who makes false statements about his qualifications in print, writing, or public speech."

Harris - 'Patriotism' Action Could Pose Greater Threat Than Govt.

By JOAN ABBOTT and GAYLE MOTES

Action by groups "in the me of patriotism" may e an even greater threat il liberty than gov- ental action, Dr. Rob- Harris said Monday t.

Harris, professor of politic- science at Vanderbilt Univer- spoke on "Individuals, Their and Liberties" at the sec- a series of eight lectures red by the Florida State ty Government Dept.

ups and associations which pt to suppress freedom of cience and expression through control of the curriculum and ks in the public schools, ntimidation of college facul- and the destruction of the s faith in their churches political leadership in the of patriotism or national ly pose grave threats both ivil liberty and national se- ty," he said.

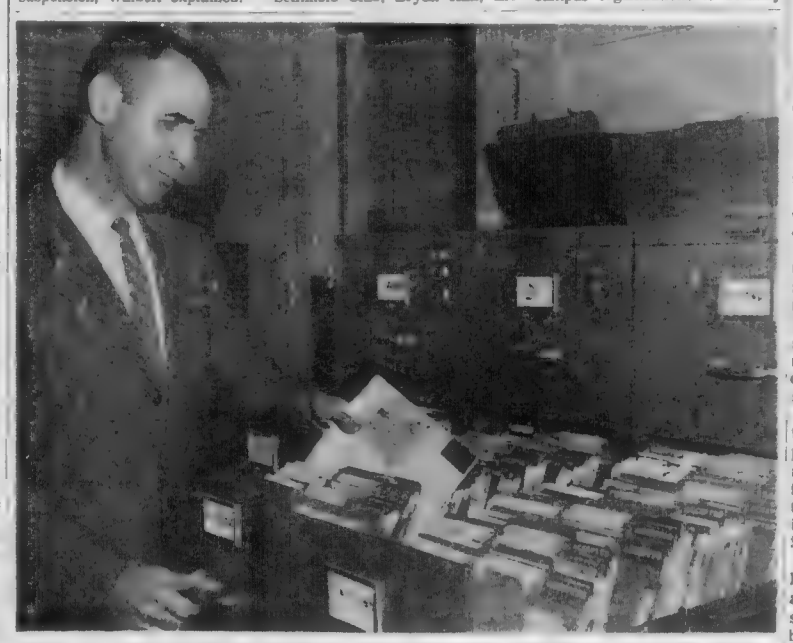
Although his lecture mainly concerned judicial action in the protection of civil rights, Dr. Harris stressed that the judiciary could not "be the only instrument of government for the protection of basic rights." The courts can only protect individual rights from encroachment by the federal government through the Bill of Rights, and through the Fourteenth Amendment can protect some of these rights from state action.

Dr. Harris

"However, the protection of individual rights against group action, social pressure and economic reprisals is a task for Congress with its broad delegation of ample powers, and not for the Courts," he explained.

Dr. Harris said that the record of the federal government on the protection of civil rights was better than that of the states, "despite any congressional encroachment upon basis liberties in the past or the exexcessive zeal sometimes displayed by federal law enforcement agencies to the detriment of basic rights . . ."

As a solution to this problem, he suggested, "If the Court is to perform effectively one of its high functions in the maintenance of civil rights, it would do well to discard outmoded and unwarranted theories of dual federalism and a hypersensitive respect for state legislatures and state courts in favor of individual rights."



WOULD BE CONSISTENT

"To do so would not only be consistent with the practical course of the Court's decisions, but also in accord with the results of four years of civil strife, the underlying purpose of the Fourteenth Ammendment and almost of a century of subsequent experience," he stressed.

Dr. Harris explained that the Court has maintained that a difference exists in the latitude allowed state and federal government. He asserted that ". . . the validity of a limitation upon free expression must to a large extent 'depend on whether the government has the power to act in the particular areas involved'."

Dr. Harris continued, "Thus, the federal government's concern for national security would place it under fewer restrictions than the states, whereas the states' primary interest with morals would place them under less rigid re-

IT'S ALREADY FLOOD TIDE TIME IN APPLICATIONS FOR ADMISSION AT FLORIDA STATE University. Here Director of Admissions Willis Caldwell checks one of nearly 4,084 applications crowding file space—a 17 per cent increase over this time a year ago. The applications are for admission next September, when FSU starts on a trimester system designed to utilize faculty, classrooms and dormitories to the miximum in meeting the demand for higher education in Florida.

Decision Opens Avenues

Since the historic 6-2 Supreme Court ruling that allows voters to sue in federal courts to correct unfair legislative apportionment, "states righters" have taken the opportunity to criticize the nation's highest judicial body.

THEY ARE ACUTELY unhappy because the court has ruled that there exist judicial grounds for considering the plea of 11 Tennesseans, most of them residents of Nashville, that unfair apportionment of their legislature denied them the constitutionally guaranteed "equal protection of the laws."

The Tennessee General Assembly, they charged, had not been reapportioned since 1901, with the result that 37 percent of the voters control 20 of 33 senate seats, and 40 percent control 63 of 99 house seats.

THOUGH THE DECISION was aimed at Tennessee, the ruling has implications for state legislatures throughout the nation. Population shifts from rural areas to the cities are a national trend, but state legislatures have refused to reapportion to allow for these changes. This refusal has caused frightful representation inequalities.

The South has been the worst offender. Legislatures in states like Louisiana, Alabama and Georgia have been dominated by the farmers while voters in New Orleans, Birmingham and Atlanta, who pay the biggest bulk of state taxes, have been tremendously under - represented.

FLORIDA, LONG DOMINATED by the "Pork Chop gang", has been as guilty of unfair representation as any. A plan for revamping the Legislature, which will be voted on in November, will give no relief to the voters of Dade, Duval, Hillsborough, Pinellas and Orange counties. Under this plan, 19.1 percent of the population can elect a majority in the House and 12.8 percent will elect the majority in the Senate.

Unless the voters reject this plan, material reapportionment will not be accomplished and the large populous counties, which pay the greatest part of the state tax load, will remain under-represented.

THE RULING OF THE SUPREME Court, however, opens an avenue down which metropolitan voters can go for relief. It is a ruling which necessity has dictated. As Justice Tom Clark, who voted for the ruling, contended, the court would not have treaded in this area if there had been any other possible relief to the voters of Tennessee.

"States righters" can have their say. They can protest that this is infringing on their state prerogatives. But their pleas ring false after their years of infringing on the rights of all the voters of their states to be equally represented.

If there is to be blame placed for this decision, it does not belong to the Supreme Court. Those who have perpetuated unfair representation are responsible, and they richly deserve any criticism. BCS

Thorough Homework

Faculty members and students, disappointed over the Board of Control's decision to withhold additional funds for faculty merit pay increases, can be proud of the firm stand taken by Pres. Gordon W. Blackwell.

Blackwell led the fight for higher faculty salaries with determination and perserverence and made his point graphically clear for the Board of Control members.

Blackwell feels that faculty members must be treated financially fairly and doesn't mind saying so. He believes that faculty wages must be put on a competitive basis and readily produces concrete facts to back up this assertion.

Observers have remarked that "Blackwell has done his homework thoroughly before he makes his stand."

This type of thoroughness has paid off. The faculty salary increase is the first Blackwell proposal that the Board has turned down.

Part of a University president's complex job is to look out for his professors. Faculty members looking for other colleges to move to will have to look a long way to find a president that will stand for their interest as firmly as Blackwell. BCS

'Preferably Unarmed'

By ROBERT SANCHEZ

Have you ever been shot at because of your beliefs? Dr. Clarence Jordan has been shot at, his home has been bombed, and his family and friends have been attacked—all because of his beliefs. Why? Because for Dr Jordan a belief is not just an abstract idea to be talked about—it is something which must be lived.

DR. JORDAN has a unique background. With a BS and MS in Agriculture and a Doctorate in Sacred Theology and Greek, Dr. Jordan [illegible] years as a Baptist minister. Conscious of the wide divergence between Christian principles and practices, he decided to try to do something about it. In 1942 he founded Koinonia Farm, a racially integrated, christian motivated experiment in [illegible] living. Located near Americus, Georgia, the 440-family project is an attempt to apply Christian idealism in daily living. It rejects the idea of private property, feeling it to be an inevitable cause of greed and hatred. Families give up their worldly possessions when they join. The guiding principle of the farm is "From each according to his ability; to each according to his need." Unlike the Soviets, who perverted this principle, the Koinonians practice what they preach.

Through the years the farm has prospered, pioneering poultry-raising, now Georgia's most profitable industry. But the jealousy of nearby farmers and townspeople has also grown. A few years ago the hatred bubbled over and a small group decided to drive "those nigger-loving Communists" out of Georgia. A complete economic boycott prevented any buying from or selling to Koinonia. Though some merchants sold to them secretly, Koinonians had to travel 150 miles to Atlanta for such vital goods as tools and fertilizer. A Columbus, Georgia, Presbyterian minister who bought 100 bags of fertilizer in their behalf was fired by his church.

WHEN THE BOYCOTT began Koinonia had 11,000 chickens. Dr. Jordan reports that when no one would buy the eggs, the Koinonians had little choice but to eat the hens. "We had chicken in every imaginable form," he said. "There was broiled chicken, boiled chicken, roasted chicken, toasted chicken, and chicken a la king, queen, jack, deuce, etc."

The boycott was followed by violence. Random shotgun blasts and bombings have harassed Koinonians and destroyed their facilities. Once, when confronted by an armed group of thugs on a lonely farm road, Dr. Jordan says "I remembered the words of our Lord to 'turn both heels,' put my truck into reverse, and broke the sound barrier in making my retreat."

IN SPITE OF THREATS and harassment, however, Koinonians remain there in south Georgia, returning love to those who hate them, above all retaining a sense of perspective. Dr. Jordan, who as a speaker reminds one of a learned Will Rogers, has spoken widely throughout the United States, and Koinonia is now supported by the National Council of Churches and several other groups who buy the beef, hams and pecans the farm now produces. This Sunday morning Dr. Jordan will speak in Tallahassee at the Unitarian Chapel, at which time it will be my privilege to introduce him. Visitors, preferably unarmed, are most welcome.

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS:

Our Florida State University is ever moving forward. I wish to work with you in this progress. Thank you for your confidence, your support and especially your friendship.

Sincerely,
KEN VAN ASSENDERP

Men's Veep

Brown

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS:

Allow us to analyze the office of Men's Vice President and explain why we have chose to support GENE BROWN for this position. The Men's Vice President is expected to be the leader and advisor of the men in Senate. His duties are as follows: Preside over Men's Senate; serve as ex - officio member of all senate committees; serve as vice - president of Student Enterprises, and as vice - chairman of the Board of Directors of that coproration; coordinate men's activities on campus and serve as advisor to the student body concerning co - educational problems.

As junior class senator this year, Gene was elected by Men's Senate as Vice President Pro tem, in this capacity he has had experience in presiding over that body. As Student Senate parliamentarian, Gene has proven himself as an expert on Senate procedure, and is very capable of leading and advising the men of Senate. His work this year as a member of the Board of Directors of Student Enterprises has prepared him for a leadership position in this corportation. Gene has served as a class officer and as a member of summer honor court; therefore he will be able to understand and coordinate the problems of all branches of student government.

Gene has shown by his diligent work in the past that he has a great desire to serve FSU, and we feel that he will be an outstanding Men's Vice President.

FELLOW STUDENTS: .. .. ..

The student Body Constitution authorizes the Men's Vice-President to coordinate men's activities on campus, to advise the Student Body on coed problems and to preside over Men's Senate. The Statutes provide that he shall serve as an ex-officio member of every committee in the student senate. It is apparent from this description of duties that the Men's Vice-President — if he has initiative and is willing to devote time and effort to the office — will be influential in representing student opinion, in providing leadership to implement student purposes, and in protecting the student body from infringements upon their rights by administrative rules and regulations.

I strongly feel that with the changes the university will be undergoing in the next year, the student body needs individuals who will represent them accurately and forcefully when decisions are being made.

I pledge to you that if elected Men's Vice - President I will strive to represent you in this manner. My campus experience as Vice - Chairman of Speaker's Bureau, a member of University Court, the Lobby Committee, and the Honors Committee have acquainted me with the many problems we face. I hope that you will allow me to serve you and that we can work together to see that student needs and opinions are presented with competence and vigor.

Payments Due

Payments are due in the Comptroller's Office April 1, from students who are paying fees on the deferred plan, Comptroller George Fortin reminded today.

Student Body Vice President

Smith

TO ALL FSU STUDENTS:

The increasing stature of FSU as a great university, and the institution of the new trimester academic system next year will require student leaders who are familiar with the problems facing student government and who have gained the experience and knowledge necessary to cope with the administrative policy changes made as a result of the trimester system.

Next Tuesday you will have the opportunity to vote for the candidates whom you feel will best measure up to these standards and who possess the qualifications which insure a sound knowledge of student government.

Basing our opinions upon these criteria, we would like to recommend JOHNNY SMITH for the office of Student Body Vice President. Johnny has served as President Pro tem of the Student Senate this year and has personally become acquainted with the duties and responsibilities of the Vice Presidential position.

Also, through serving on both the Student Government Trimester Committee and the Senate Trimester Committee, Johnny has been instrumental in formulating policy and programming the activities of student government under the new academic system.

We hope you will consider both candidates carefully and will cast your vote upon the basis of qualifications and experience.

FELLOW STUDENTS:

My name is Floyd Price, and I hope that I am your candidate for Student Body Vice President. I would like to meet each of you individually, but since this is impossible, please let me tell you a little about myself.

This is my first year at Florida State, and therefore, to many of you, I am a stranger. My freshman and sophomore years were spent at Pensacola Junior College where I had the honor of serving as Student Body President. I am now a second-semester junior and have had the privilege this year of serving the residents of Kellum Hall as their President.

Being one of the majority here at FSU, an Independent, I would like for us to have more representation within the Student Government. I am not against the fraternities, but I do feel that there should be a balance established within our Studen: Government. The Independents need more representatives, but they deserve more and will have more only if they get out and vote on Election Day.

Consider carefully both my opponent and myself, and then if you feel that I am the man to serve as your Vice President, your support and vote will be deeply appreciated.

FLOYD PRICE

Chief Justice, Honor Court

McVoy

DEAR STUDENTS:

Because of his overall Student Government experience and in particular because of his interest and experience with the FSU Honor System and the judicial branch of government, we feel that Ross McVoy is the best qualified candidate for Chief Justice of the Honor Court.

Ross has served as a Junior Justice on the FSU Honor Court, on the Executive Honor Committee and as Chairman of the Trimester Honor Court Reorganization Committee. He has also been active in various student government committees, his fraternity and intercollegiate athletics, and is presently on the Dean's List. He has shown that he can accept complete responsibility and through working with the FSU Honor System he has become thoroughly familiar with its operation.

Therefore we, the undersigned, announce our support for Ross McVoy, candidate for Chief Justice of the Honor Court, for we feel that he is exceptionally well qualified and can best serve the needs of FSU in this office.

Powell

DEAR FSU STUDENTS:

We would like to take this opportunity to remind you of the responsibility you assume when selecting a Chief Justice. The man you choose to fill this position will sit in judgment of you and your fellow students. Placing such responsibility in the hands of a man requires that the man be experienced and of proven ability. We feel that George Powell is such a man. We have had the opportunity to observe George while he served as a Junior Justice on Honor Court this year. He has a record of perfect attendance for all court meetings, which typifies his interest in the court. We feel he has been very sincere and has put a great deal of thought into his final decision as to how he will vote.

However, his term as a member of honor court is but a small phase of George's qualifications. He has a total of six years experience with honor systems. He has taught the Honor System at three state conventions and was one of the first persons to establish Honor Systems in his state's high schools. George has also attended a three-day seminar on college Honor Systems at Emory University. In addition George is a member of Gate Key Honorary, vice president of his fraternity, member of Speaker's Bureau, served on five government committees, member of Marketing Club, Dean's List, and has maintained a 2.7 overall grade average. When you vote for George Powell, you are choosing an experienced and dedicated Chief Justice.

Women's Vice President

Ferlita

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS:

We woudld like to take this opportunity to tell you why JEANIE FERLITA is our choice for WOMEN'S VICE PRESIDENT.

We believe Jeanie's three years of conscentious service in Senate alone make the better qualified candidate for the office, but she has shown her leadership and dependability in other ways.

Jeanie was the only woman senator selected last fall to chairman a standing committee in Senate, the Judicial and Rules committee which so efficiently studied the bulk of Senate's bills. She has been chairman of six Senate Committees, served on nineteen other student government committees, and introduced thirty bills and resolutions, including our Academic Honor System.

Also in her favor is Jeanie's ability to work well with faculty and administration as well as students. They have called on her on several occasions.

Jeanie's selection to the Junior Counselor Program, Garnet Key, Mortified, Speaker's Bureau, Tally Ho Staff, and Panhellenic show that others recognize her abilities and have taken advantage of them.

We are confident that Jeanie Ferlita will admirably fulfill the duties of her office if you select her to preside over Women's Senate, coordinate women's affairs on campus, and represent the women of Florida State University.

DEAR FSU STUDENTS:

This is one of the most exciting times during the year and I'd like to thank all of those who have helped me during this campaign. I hope that each of you will be as proud to say you supported me as I am to say that you are on "my team."

I would very much like to be your Women's Vice President—this is evident. The chips are down, the qualifications are out and everyone must decide for themselves. For this reason I will not try to persuade you one way or the other. All I shall do is to say . . . speak to those who know the candidates, those who have worked with them and know them. For me I would ask you to speak to the senators and other campus leaders.

As your Women's Vice President I would be your representative to many campus functions. The vice president presides over Women's Senate, coordinates the activities of women students and aids in the passage of constructive legislation concerning women's regulations. I will consider it a challenge to fulfill these duties. My past record speaks for two years, the executive as Chairman of Homecoming, and the judicial as a member of Honor Court and the Honor Committee. For these reasons I feel prepared to work hard at a job that will need hard work.

I am looking forward to meeting many of you during this election time. Good luck to all candidates and their hard working co-workers.

FSU Salary Offers Increased This Year

A survey in which Florida State University was one of 82 participating colleges has shown that beginning salary offers for technical graduates has increased over the past year from an average of $546 to $562 per month and for non - technical graduates from $452 to $473.

The salary survey was conducted by the College Placement Council of Bethlehem, Pa. James C. Hardy, director of placement at FSU, said that the survey revealed that the "most dramatic increase was one of $33 per month in offerings to liberal arts graduates and of $23 per month to students majoring in accounting."

The mid - season report showed that aircraft manufacturers made the highest offers ($567 per month). The report said:

"Electronic firms were close behind at $564 but ranked third in volume of offers. The chemical, drug and allied products field moved from seventh place to second in number of offers and to third in salary value ($555). The curriculum attracting both the most offers and the highest salaries was found to be electrical engineering at $573 per month."

The survey is based on data computed each week from actual beginning salary offers reported by the 82 colleges selected to participate in the project.

Then you'd like computer programming, the new career that makes full use of your logical talents. If you have a keen analytical and logical mind—and want to use it fully after college—then computer programming at IBM may be just the career you've always looked forward to.

A computer programmer examines a business, industrial, or scientific problem and translates it into a special mathematical-logical language for the computer. Working at amazing speeds, the computer can produce answers in minutes, even seconds. Some of these answers might actually take days to produce by other methods.

The problems are interesting and varied. IBM programmers have used computers to predict hurricanes, tell days ahead where satellites will be in space, locate the best factory sites for businessmen, and aid highway engineers in laying out roads.

No previous knowledge of computers is necessary; an intensive training course will equip you for your work. But you should have an analytical and logical turn of mind, and at least two years of college mathematics.

In computer programming you will find that the salaries are excellent, and that the future can be virtually as unlimited as the future of the computer itself. There are ample opportunities for continued education.

The IBM representative will interview on your campus. He will be glad to give you details about this fascinating new profession. Your placement office will make an appointment. All qualified applicants will be considered for employment without regard to race, creed, color or national origin. Or you may write, outlining briefly your background, to Manager of Technical Recruitment, IBM Corp., Dept. 902, 590 Madison Avenue, New York 22, N. Y.

'Forty Million Shoes' Is Presented On WFSU-TV Monday At 8:30 P M

Forty Million Shoes, a report on Brazil as seen through the lives of five of its citizens, will be presented Monday, at 8:30 p. m. on WFSU-TV.

The report shows representative Brazilians examining their hopes, their hates, their chances for happiness and their influence on events which they will affect but cannot control.

The program examines the lives of sixteen - year - old Elizabeth Barros Barreto, daughter of a wealthy Brazilian family which traces its ancestry back 400 years; Regina de Silva, an indigent young girl who lives a very different life a few blocks from the Barreto mansion in Rio de Janeiro; and Youssef, a peasant farmer who ekes out a marginal existence in northeast Brazil, without water and without hope.

Also interviewed in the program are Dr. Fernando Lee, one of Brazil's major industrialists from Sao Paulo, and Louis Alberto Bahia, the influential editor of a Rio de Janiero newspaper who was decorated by the army for helping to prevent riots during the 1960 consututional crisis.

KEY COUNTRY

Brazil as the key country of South America, contains half the land area of the continent and more than half the population One half of the population is still illiterate, goes barefoot and suffers chronic malnutrition. In Recife, the pro - communist Northeast, only half the working force have jobs. In this area 20 million Brazilians live in poverty as wretched as anywhere in the world. Life expectancy there is 30 years and the average income is only $8 a month.

This area is dominated by the Peasant League, which is infiltrated with the Communist Party, and thrives on the festering discontent of the landless and the jobless. Unless the central government moves rapidly ahead, these Fidelistas will gain dangerous support for the revolution they demand.

CRUCIAL PROBLEMS

"The problems of Brazil are clearly the crucial problems for all the long - suffering peoples of the South American Republics," said Douglas Leiterman who produced and directed the program.

"The Privileged classes who have an iron grip on the wealth and political structures of their countries are only beginning the show concern for the millions of indigent, often starving peasants and slum - dwellers who beg only the right to work and be paid for their labor," he said.

"A great awakening of the social conscience of Latin America is beginning. But the crucial question is whether it is already too late," he added.

The poor and hungry, Leiterman reports, have discovered in the example of Cuba and China that there is an alternative to the oppression they have endured for generations under what they call capitalist exploitation.

COMMUNIST LEADER

In Brazil the alternative is represented by the fast - spreading peasant leagues and their communist - oriented leader, Francisco Juliao Forty Million Shoes follows Juliao on his mission of agitation and propaganda into the drought - stricken interior provinces

The documentary also deals with the resignation of Brazil's popular and progressive president Janio Quadros and the dangerous inflationary spiral and political stalemate which has set in since he left.

Forty Million Shoes is the story of a country which exemplifies a common feature of much of Latin America. The rich are becoming richer and the poor are becoming poorer.

ONE OF THE FEATURES OF LAST YEAR'S PI KAPPA GO KART Derby was the race in which a sorority member from each team donned a crash helmet and roared around the track in a powder puff version of the regular elimination heats.

The race will consist of three elimination heats of ten laps each and a 25-lap heat between the winners of the semi-final heat.

In each race, a pace car will be used and pit stops will be permitted if they are necessary. Trophies will be presented by the Pike's to the groups sponsoring the winning car.

To protect the spectators, all curves will be lined with bales of hay and all straight-aways with bags of sawdust.

The derby will be followed by a dance from 8 p.m. to midnight in the Suwannee Room. The dance will feature the R-Dells from the Candy Stick Lounge in Miami Beach.

strictions in regulating obscenity . . ."

According to Dr. Harris, there are constant changes in Supreme Court attitude, but the most important factor concerning freedom of expression is the "magnitude of the public interests involved." Such considerations, "stated Dr. Harris, "tend to favor federal rather than state power in imposing restraints upon expression."

"Few would deny that the public interest in national security against internal subversion or external attack is greater than that of a municipality in keeping its streets free of litter in the form of handbills distributed by the Jehovah's Witnesses or of a state in compelling children to raise chubby little hands in salute of the flag."

Referring once again to the Fourteenth Amendment, Dr. Harris explained that the Supreme Court, in a succession of cases from 1876-1925, held that this amendment did not require states to have any set judicial procedure. Although there has rarely been a unanimous agreement among the justices with respect to rights which are fundamental and those which are "merely valuable and or important," he cited that since 1925 there has been a gradual process of "selective inclusion of specific guarantees of the Bill of Rights in the Fourteenth Amendment."

In reference to the Due Process of Law clause in the Constitution, Dr. Harris asserted that "despite the controversial attitude about this clause, it has remained independent of the Bill of Rights." The real problem of this clause in relation to individual rights is to realize that it is not necessary to demand to know "once and for all where the line is to be drawn, but to recognize that the Supreme Court is to draw it by the gradual and emperic process of inclusion and exclusion," asserted Dr. Harris.

PIANO RECITAL

Joyce Faggioni will present a certificate piano recital at 8:15 p.m. in Opperman Music Hall tomorrow night. Bonne Hall will also be featured in the recital. The program will include Prelude and Fugue in B flat minor from Book I of the Well Tempered Clavier by Bach, Sonata No. 2 in D Minor by Beethoven, Rumanian Folk Dances by Bartok, Etude No. 7 in C sharp minor and Scherzo in C sharp minor by Chopin performed by Miss Faggioni.

Miss Hall will present Prelude and Fugue in F minor from Book II of the Well Tempered Clavier by Bach, Sonata No. 3 in E flat major by Beethoven, Two Dances in Bulgarian Rhythm by Bartok and Ballade in G minor by Chopin.

Final plans for the "tube" party, Saturday, April 7, will be made at the meeting of the Seminole Divers on Tuesday, in 314 Science at 7:30 p. m.

Elect David Gretsch, State Senator, For Leon County

The following is Gretsch's statement on Faculty salaries which was released by him at the time of his qualifying, but deleted by the Tallahassee Democrat.

"I am greatly disturbed over the loss of top flight instructional personnel from our State Universities. I believe the solution is a substantial upward adjustment of salaries. I am for lifting all of our State Universities above the mediocrity imposed upon them years ago."

The salaries of our State Universities should be put on a par with those of highest paying schools if we plan to compete on the academic market. I will fight for: increment pay raises for each year of service with our universities up to thirty years . . . Automatic promotions in accord with academic advancement and longevity . . . Special pay incentives for outstanding teachers, researchers, and scholarly writers . . . A program of paid salatical leaves . . . Increased funds to attend scholarly gatherings . . . The complete revamping of our retirement system wherein instructional personnel who have devoted the productive years of their lives to our state institutions of higher learning can look forward to their declining years with a certain amount of security.

I realize this is a herculean task which cannot be accomplished overnight. But if these institutions are to move ahead we must take immediate steps to instute a program whereby the aforementioned problems are brought through to fruition . . .

I promise last, but not least, to assist the administration of these institutions through these trying years . . . I plan to give your officials heart, not a heart attack . . . Thank you. David Gretsch. . . .

COLLEGE STUDENTS IN THE VACATION RIOTS

What touches off the vicious vacation riots in resort towns from coast to coast? What madness causes the drunkenness, open immorality, violent battles with police? What sudden mob impulse can motivate a crowd of 30,000 educated young men and women into a rampage of destruction? Perhaps it's a new way to "let off steam" . . . a savage kind of self-expression. But why are so many college students—presumably the nation's most "adult" and sophisticated young people—involved? Why do they knowingly risk their futures, even their lives for a few hours of wild abandon? In the new April McCall's, don't miss the unbelievable, yet true, report on the spread of this insane activity . . . the terrible price you may have to pay if you're involved . . . and how you can help stop the insanity.

EDUCATIONAL TV: ITS CAUSE AND CURE

A great deal of nonsense has been written about educational television. Following is my contribution:

It has been said that television affords no desirable viewing except educational and intellectual programs. This is simply not true. For instance, you can see "The Kant and Hegel Hour" every day at 4 a.m. This excellent show is followed at 5 a.m. by "Kierkegaard Can Be Fun." For such lazy scamps as lie abed beyond that hour, there is a splendid program on Sunday morning at 7 o'clock—"Birds of Minnesota, Except Duluth." So much for the great TV gives to prime time to educational programs. Now let us deflate another canard: that TV is not eager to inject intellectual content in all its programs.

If you have sat, as I have sat, with a television planning board you would know that the opposite is true. I was privileged recently to witness a meeting of two of TV's topmost program developers—both named Binkie Tattersall.

"Binkie," said Binkie to Binkie, "if there is one thing I am resolved and determined, it is that we're going to have intellectual content in next season's programs."

"Right!" replied Binkie. "So let us put on our thinking caps and go to work."

"I forgot my thinking cap in Westport," said Binkie, "but I have a better notion. Let us light a Marlboro."

"But of course!" cried Binkie. "Because the best way to think is to settle back and get comfortable, and what is the cigarette that lets you settle back and get comfortable?"

"I said Marlboro," answered Binkie. "Weren't you listening?"

"A full-flavored smoke is Marlboro," declared Binkie.

"Rich tobacco, pure white filter, a choice of pack or box. What is better than a Marlboro?"

"A Marlboro and a match," replied Binkie. "Got one?"

Binkie had, and so they lit their good Marlboros and settled back and got comfortable and proceeded to cerebrate.

"First of all," said Binkie, "we are going to avoid all the old clichés. We will have no domestic comedies, no westerns, no private eyes, no deep sea divers, no doctors, and no lawyers."

"Right!" said Binkie. "Something offbeat."

"That's the word—offbeat," said Binkie.

They smoked and cerebrated.

"You know," said Binkie, "there has never been a series about the Coast and Geodetic Survey."

"Or about glass blowers," said Binkie.

They fell into a long, torpid silence.

"You know," said Binkie, "there's really nothing wrong with a cliché situation—provided, of course, it's offbeat."

"Right!" said Binkie. "So let's say we do a series about a guy who's a family man with a whole bunch of lovable kids who play merry pranks on him."

"Yeah, and he's also a cowboy," said Binkie.

"And a deep sea diver," said Binkie.

"With a law degree," said Binkie.

"Plus an M.D.," said Binkie.

"And he runs a detective agency," said Binkie.

"Binkie," said Binkie to Binkie, "we've done it again!"

They shook hands silently, not trusting themselves to speak, and lit Marlboros and settled back to relax, for Marlboro is a cigarette not only for cerebration, but for settling back with—in fact, for all occasions and conditions, all times and climes, all seasons and reasons, all men and women. © 1962 Max Shulman

Grid Drills To Start

By VICTOR COMOLLI
Assistant Sports Editor

Florida State's 1962 football hopefuls will begin spring football practice Saturday afternoon. The team, which follows the NCAA regulations, will have 20 days in which to hold 15 practices.

Coach Bill Peterson will rely on a corp of returning lettermen, most of whom are linemen, to provide most of the field leadership. The strongest position in the team, judging by the experienced personnel, appears to be at guard and tackle.

Leading tackle returnees include seniors-to-be Mike Blazovich, Jim Sims, Tom Slicker, and Bill Tyre. The experienced guards are Jerry Bruner, Ferrell Henry, John Levings, and Gene McDowell.

The center position will be bolstered by returnees Bruce Darsey, Chuck Robinson, and Charlie Keneip, a 260 - pound lineman who sat out last year.

Leading lettermen in the backfield will be Eddie Feely, halfbacks Tom Hillabrand and Keith Kinderman, and fullbacks Gene and Marion Roberts (no relation).

The end position appears to be weak because of a lack of experienced personnel. The best returnees at ends seem to be John McConnaughhay and John Wachtl. But several promising freshmen may give Peterson some important depth at this position.

One of the freshman will be Freddy Biletnikoff of Pennsylvania, who can run like a halfback and (according to the coach) has a tremendous pair of hands. He led the freshman squad with 156 passing yardage on eight cathces for a 19.5 average.

Another promising newcomer will be a Pensacola product by the name of Jim Loftin. The halfback speedster is considered by many as one if the finest running backs ever to come to Florida State. He led the fledglings in total yards gained with 207 yards in 25 carries for a fantastic 8.3 average. Loftin also scored the crucial touchdown in the 6 - 6 Mississippi Southern tilt.

Former Virginia prep All-American, Earl Hawkins, also appears to be a bright contender for halfback honors. He was the second leading ground gainer on the freshman team with a 5.8 average in 14 carries.

QUARTERBACK STRONG

The promising position, as far as bright newcomers are concerned, is at quarterback. The newcomers include sophomore Steve Tensi, a Ohio product with a gifted passing arm, and Ed Pritchett, who is regarded by many as one of the finest quarterback prospects in the South.

Another strong candidate at quarterback will be former Jacksonville All - Stater Jimmy Seward, who transferred here from Auburn.

Promising linemen include Woody Benson, Bob Morgan (who weighs 254), Clark Robinson, Jack Shinholser, and Terry Garvin.

Football Is Not A Great Waste

There were a couple of protests from people concerning the letter of Mr. Name Withheld (a non de plume for four students' ideas)—a letter that went to the extreme in attacking football.

And first of all, let us say we disagree with Name Withheld.

He contends that football harms education. Well, at some universities, such as Alabama, Auburn, Ole Miss, Mississippi Southern, and so forth, this may be true. But not so at FSU . . . and not likely to be so.

Gridiron Is Important, But—

We hear phrases from top college officials that bear this out. The most recent presidents have stressed the fact that football is important, but not more important than academics.

And now be most ridiculous charge of all: football players do not contribute to the standing of the school. The anti-football crowd would say the average football player is dumb—Georgia Tech being an exception.

But that's not so. Gridders do contribute to our standing. Listening to Don Fauls, Seminole sawbone, we heard him talk for five minutes naming player upon player that had left FSU to become successful managers of companies or deans at a college.

And he was talking about red shirts and injured players—most of whom were not able to rack up a tremendous record on the field.

Tech Not Tops

Are the players at Georgia Tech geniuses? Er ist nicht so, says the German uncle. About half the team is majoring in a rinky-dink thing called industrial management, which is not quite an honest-to goodness engineering degree. The players on our team, several having high averages, have to meet the academic requirement to stay in FSU.

So they aren't cheating the university—like the sorority or fraternity member that delves into a test file, or a student that fakes an English term paper, or the history major that fakes a book report, or should we go on?

We really must question one assertion by anti-grid forces: That the older and better schools don't place as great an emphasis on football as the SEC powerhouses.

If so, why did Paul Dietzel leave Louisiana State University? He said he always wanted to coach at Army. He had gone as far as he could go at LSU. There was also another reason . . . it's a six letter word, which is spelled $$$$$$. Old traditional Army offers more green stuff than little ole LSU.

Notre Dame and Harvard do not place the greater stress on football? Which draws more attention? A Harvard-Yale contest or an Alabama-Auburn contest? We thought so. It is true the Harvard or Yale administrations may not spend as much on football, may not emphasize the gridiron as much as Alabama, etc., but the alumni and its $'s make up for the deficiency.

And why do Ole Miss, Alabama, etc. spend so much on football. Prestige is the reason. Harvard doesn't need to spend so much; they have a couple of centuries of tradition and reputation behind them. But whoever heard of Alabama, Ole Miss, LSU, or Auburn except through their football teams. Furthermore, those are in poor states that need to attract students, good students that may not have ever heard of the university except via the sports page.

FSU is a good school now, and football is the thing that could quickly put it in the headlines—so that the general public may become aware of its existence.

And are the football scholarships thrown away? No. because those players work for their scholarships . . . by breaking bones, splitting lips, losing teeth, and obtaining limps that they may keep all their life. This means something to those of us that have jaundice of the backbone.

Hall Of Merit Abolished, Trimester Bills Are Passed

The Hall of Merit, an award set up just last year, was abolished Wednesday by Student Senate.

Originally the Hall of Merit was intended to honor people who have been connected with Florida State and who have won outstanding recognition for themselves and for the University.

Attorney General Mason Clark, who introduced the bill last year, said, "If it got off to a good start, it could be a good thing . . . given not by the "splinter groups" on campus, but by the student body."

It was the general opinion of Senate, however, that this honor, since it could properly be given only at homecoming or graduation, would detract from the present and established honors being awarded at those times.

It was also brought out that many groups on campus are already giving awards of this type. Furthermore, since this honor has not been given to anyone yet, the Hall of Merit has never been in practical effect.

A bill amending the statutes was also passed, which lists the members of the President's cabinet as follows: (1) Secretary of State, (2) Attorney General, (3) Secretary of Communications and Public Affairs, (4) Secretary of Finance, (5) Secretary of Student Welfare, (6) Secretary of Student Events, (7) Secretary for University Union, (8) Secretary of Elections, (9) Secretary for Internal Affairs, (10) Secretary for Intercollegiate Affairs.

Some of the above-listed offices differ somewhat in title and in duty from those in this year's statutes. The order used here is the order in which the offices and duties are to be outlined in the new statutes.

Senate also passed several bills dealing with changes in the separate offices held by cabinet members; these outlined the duties and functions of: Secretary of State, Secretary of Communications and Public Affairs, Secretary of Finance and Secretary of Student Events.

SPEAKERS BUREAU

The bill concerning the Secretary of State provides that "The Secretary of State shall have responsible to him the Florida State Gold Key Speakers Chairman." This, in effect, now places the Speakers Bureau under Gold Key. Gold Key is still, however, responsible to the Secretary of State in matters concerning the Speakers Bureau.

Senate passed a resolution introduced by Men's Vice President Carl Kuttler, which requested that a committee be set up to investigate the problem of campaign expenditures.

The purpose of limiting the amounts that may be spent on campaigns was explained by Sen. Ron Jones who said this was ". . . so everybody on campus will have reasonably equal chances to run for an office . . ."

A resolution introduced by Kuttler and Sen. Jeanie Ferlita requested that Senate send a letter to Faculty Senate, endorsing their investigation of the possibility of a new credit-non-credit basis for physical education courses.

IBM 709 Does Computing For Research

By JIM SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

The IBM 709 high speed computing system in the Florida State University Computing Center, is invilved currently in solving and processing date for over 100 research programs in about 21 departments.

The 709 computer is capable of solving problems in minutes which would take one man more than a year to solve using a desk calculator.

Six months ago, the new IBM 709 computer replaced the IBM 650. It takes the 709 one day to do the work of 120 hours of operation for the old 650.

Dr.E. P. Miles Jr., director if the Computing Center at FSU, remarked that in the beginning, using the 650, it was difficult to keep the machine in use five hours a week. Now, with all departments of the University realizing the huge research potentialities with the machine, it is in constant use throughout a 12-hour day.

During March over 130 different research programs are receiving quick answers to questions that might otherwise neve be asked. The programs include, research studies in the binding energy of deutron; the hydrogen bond angle; the determination of primary fission product yields; the attitudes toward r ental illness; and the analysis of leadership and teaching abilities of teachers and deans.

Approximately fifty machines are in current use in the United States. Thirty - five of these are in industry with the remainder in research centers and universitys. M. I. T., Yale, Ohio State and California at Berkely also have the IBM 709 available for research facilities.

The term "Electronic Brain," is carefully avoided by those using the machine. Fred Jaap, manager of the Computing Center calls it a "capable moron." "It does only what it is told," he said, "but it does this extremely well and very rapidly."

Dr. Miles remarked that a mathematical task which would take 30 years for a man to perform and which would require three years using a desk calculator takes only one minute on the 709. At any rate, said Miles, the 709 is not a "cool brain". Its heat output is enough to heat three or four houses on a cold day.

A graduate business management class is currently using the machine to play games. The UCLA executive game is designed to train young potential business executives in top level corporate decisions. The game uses two industries with nine firms, each firm producing three products. The students meet as a simulated board of directors discussing problems of prices, advertising, research and business expansions. The decisions are fed into the computer which compares the data to a model business already in existence. The machine computes a financial statement and a rough statement of the competition.

Dr. George Macesich, associate professor of economics, accumulated data on the Canadian monetary system from 1926 to 1958. The computer, fed with the proper material, analyzed valuable statistics more extensively than has ever been done before.

The Computing Center's typical day is spent performing approximately 40 routine chores for half a dozen or more departments. For example, 5,000 cards from a questionnaire that included 200 questions, were answered by 1,000 alumni. The machine processed the data in one hour and 43 minutes and printed a 127-page summary of the survey results.

The Computing Center is sponsoring their second annual faculty conference next week April 4 through 6. Hardy Says Salaries Rise

This year's starting salaries are higher than last year's according to Jim Hardy, guest speaker at the last meeting of the Marketing Club.

Hardy, placement director at Florida State University, said that there are numerous job opportunities in a variety of fields available to FSU graduating seniors.

In his speech ,Hardy gave some points on interviews. Most of his suggestions may be found in the complimentary pamphlet which the Placement Office gives to each student who registers with them.

Hardy explained the services offered by the Placement Office for graduating seniors as well as for graduates. He stated that for these students to receive the most benefit from the Office they should register at the beginning of their senior year. Doing this, he added, gives the student the opportunity to interview with all of the companies represented during the year. Some of these companies come only once, so this is especially valuable.

In closing, Hardy invited anyone who has questions about interviewing to see him in his office in Longmire

NDEA Loan Recipients

Students who now hold National Defense Education Act Loans and wish to continue receiving the loans should apply to the Financial Aid Office for renewal before April 15.

LUCKY STRIKE presents: LUCKY PUFFERS "SPRING MADNESS"

GO NEAR THE WATER. Spring is the time when students start thinking about water fun. We say: Splash up a storm. Have a lark. But please be careful. Each year, a few careless students get water on their Luckies. Imagine their remorse! Imagine yours if you were to spoil a Lucky—that great cigarette that college students smoke more of than any other regular. So have a swell time at your favorite watering hole this spring. And keep your Luckies dry.

CHANGE TO LUCKIES and get some taste for a change!

Florida State University's College Bowl Team rode to an easy first victory in the G.E. College Bowl Sunday, trouncing their opponents more than two to one.

The University of the South, Sewannee, Tenn., trying for a fourth win, more than met their match as FSU garnered 285 points to Sewannee's 130.

ONE DOWN

With one game down and a possible four to go, FSU's team will return to New York City next weekend to compete with Tufts University, Bedford, Mass. A winning team can remain on the show for up to five weeks.

Led by Claire Kemper, the FSU team brought back $1,500 for scholarships. The losing squad received $500 for this appearance, bringing the Sewannee team's total winnings to $5,000.

Other members of the FSU team are Bonnie Freedman, Bob Houston and Steve Whealton.

Mrs. Kemper is a senior history and English major; Houston a freshman history major; and Miss Freedman, a senior, and Whealton, a junior, are both math majors.

Accompanying the team to New York were Ann Kendall, a junior music major as an alternate; the team coach Dr. Paul Piccard of the Government Dept.; and Mrs. Piccard.

EARLY LEAD

FSU took an early lead in the question-and-answer game and maintained the margin throughout the game. At the half, FSU led 150 to 60. In the middle of the second half, Sewanee rallied, but could not catch up with FSU.

The Sewanee team interrupted quiz-master Allen Ludden once while he was reading a question but failed to answer, the question properly and received a five point penalty. When the question was repeated for the FSU team, Houston gave the correct response.

FSU broke in the middle of several questions, coming up with the right answer each time.

While the program was on the air, students and faculty members clustered about television sets all over campus cheering the squad on.

Yesterday, when the team arrived at the Tallahassee Municipal Airport, about 25 students and the [illegible] were on hand to welcome them. As the team stepped off the plane, FSU President Gordon W. Blackwell extended official congratulations for their winning performance.

POLICE ESCORT

All that was missing for the welcoming of the team was the royal red carpet. Student Government tried to borrow one but had to settle with a police escort and motorcade back into town. But they did obtain a sleek black limousine for the heroes. When that was filled, President Blackwell happily chauffered the overflow.

Whealton stepped off the plane carrying 22 record albums under his arm and Bonnie Freedman was still trying to wipe off her lipstick. "They made me wear it," she cried. Houston appeared wearing sunglasses as one should coming from the North and Claire Kemper wanted only to find her husband.

All the team agreed that Dr. Piccard won half the battle. He was continuously bolstering everyones' ego, they said. Piccard was extraordinarily pleased with the team. He thought that the questions were excellent and were similar to those used in the many practice sessions.

CELEBRATED

While in New York the team celebrated the victory by eating at the automat. Later, Mrs. Kemper and the Piccards saw the play, Man for All Seasons, and the rest of the team saw Porgy and Bess.

Mrs. Kemper enjoyed the play and commented on it's not being very well written, but very well played. The rest of the team enjoyed the music and orchestra of Porgy and Whealton, earlier, had gone to the Met to see La Traviata and sat next to a man who knew Carlisle Floyd and Dohnanyi.

Houston was worried at being overconfident before the show and especially concerned after being trounced at the final practice session. "It wasn't a question of not knowing the answers," he said, "our reactions were just not fast enough." Mrs. Kemper was mainly concerned about the questions and her reaction time with the bell. She didn't think about confidence in winning until after the second half began. "The team became more confident after winning the first tossup question," said Houston.

During a lunch session with Suwannee, at the Park Sheridan Hotel, the team remarked to Sewannee that Ann Kendall was along as a special secret weapon. "What do you mean?" asked Sewannee. "Well, it's obvious," was the answer. Sewannee is still puzzled.

Whealton's first impression of New York was "It's a big Boston with dirt." "It's a big San Francisco with dirt," countered Bonnie Freedman. Miss Freedman also ran into a young sales clerk in China Town who was curious at the absence of her Southern accent.

Jumping into a cab for a hurried trip to the airport, Miss Freedman yelled to the cabbie, "Hey I just saw Eddie Fisher." "See these two dollar bills," grinned the Cabbie? "They belong to him."

On the return trip by plane a fellow passenger remarked to one of the team, "Isn't that Claire Kemper? I saw her on the College Bowl."

Tomorrow Night

National Canadian Ballet To Dance In Westcott

Five traditional and contemporary ballets are on the program of the National Ballet of Canada for tomorrow night in Westcott Auditorium.

The program, sonosored by Gamma Phi Beta Alumnae Association, will begin at 8:15 p. m. Tickets are $2 for students and $4 for non - students.

Two contemporary comedy numbers, "Antic Spring" and "One in Five," will be featured, along with the more traditional "Les Syiphides," "Peasant Pas de Deux" from Giselle and "Afternoon of A Faun," when the ballet company of 80, directed by Miss Celia Franca of London, England, comes to FSU.

"Antic Spring" is the product of the invention of choreographer Grant Strate and the melodies of Jacques Iberts Trois Pieces Breves and Woodwind Quintet. It is the story of a Country Boy's visit to the world of the big city, an encounter with a Wedding Party, and his speedy retreat to his friendly nymphs.

"One in Five" involves the antics of five clowns on an empty stage. The three traditional ballets are among the permanent repertoire of the Canadian ballet group.

The company, in its eleventh season, has made many international tours, and has appeared on television networks in Canada and the United States. Included in the artists performing with the company are Earl Kraul, premier danseur; Miss Lois Smith, prima ballerina; and Miss Lillian Jarvis.

The National Ballet of Canada, one of the continents biggest theatrical organizations, was described thus in the Toronto Star by Arthur H. Franks of London, England: "There can be no mistake Canada now has a really national ballet fully deserving of the title . . . it can now rank as a fully professional group qualified to appear with acclaim in any of the world's ballet capitals . . . it is the most rapid growth in the history of ballet."

'Charity' No Longer Compulsory At FSU

"Compulsory charity" is no longer necessary at Florida State University, according to Attorney General Marion Clark.

The previously required 50 per cent kick-back to Campus Chest sponsoring fund - raising events was amended out of the Student Body Statutes by Student Senate in December, 1959.

Later that year the Statutes were renumbered and "the clause that deleted the rebate back to the University was not included in the 1960-61 revision," said Clark. He said that he believed that the error probably occurred during the renumbering process.

Earlier this year, action on the assumption that the rebate clause was still in effect, the Campus Chest Committee began trying to enforce the provision.

"However, the bill which deletes the rebate was signed by Student Body President Mattox Hair and Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby, therefore, it has been effective since it was passed even though it has not been included in the Statutes," Clark explained.

From here on out no student group will be required to contribute half of the proceeds from fund - raising projects to Campus Chest, Clark said. "Any groups who have contributed half of the proceeds from fund drives since December, 1959, may receive their funds back," he added.

"However, I personally encourage them not to do this because Campus Chest is a University charity organization," Clark stressed.

"Groups may continue to contribute to Campus Chest from fund drives, but they will have the prerogative of determining the amount or percentage that they will contribute," he added.

The attorney general said that this ruling voids section C of chapter 800.01 of the Statutes.

Candidates

The Flambeau ran all the pictures of candidates that were received in the Flambeau Office. Although all candidates were notified to bring pictures to the Flambeau. Several did not bring their pictures in.

Polls Open

Voting for major Student Government offices will begin at 9 a. m. today.

Three constitutional amendments concerning lying, the Honor Code and approval of student organizations will also be voted on.

The six polls operated by Sophomore Council will be open until 5 p. m. Ballots may be cast at the Student Center, West Hall, Seminole Club, Bryan Hall, the Library and Westcott.

Runoff elections will be Friday.

Scholars Deserve Praise

The brilliant College Bowl performance of Claire Kemper, Bonnie Freedman, Bob Houston, and Steve Whealton gave credulity to the claim that Florida State University produces students which can hold their own intellectually among the best student minds in the country.

The performance of the varsity scholars did for FSU what John Glenn's flight did for the United States. It catapulted the University into the spotlight of excellence and bound the University into a body behind the quartet of brains.

NOT SINCE THE Glenn flight have so many students, faculty members, and administrators crowded in front of television, bitten their nails and knuckles, and screamed with elation. Not since the FSU-Florida football tie has the Florida State campus rocked with celebration as it has since the University of the South was magnificently disposed of before a national television audience.

Probably never before in the history of FSU has knowledge been as much a rallying point for enthusiasm as is is presently. This is entirely a healthy situation.

THE COLLEGE BOWL has served to focus attention upon the true purpose of any university—to fertilize keen minds with facts and develop them with education. It has catapulted knowledge into a place of social prominence ahead of extra-curricular activities. The Bowl has emphasized intelligence and education by making them status symbols. And it has recognized superior students by making them heroes among their contemporaries.

THE UNIVERSITY BASKS in the magnitude of the varsity scholars performance. Their performance points up the outstanding work the University is doing in actively recruiting excellent students, admitting them before the high school senior placement tests to get the jump on other universities, and channeling them into a strong honors program to fully develop their abilities. It demonstrates that Florida State University has by virtue of strong science and liberal arts programs, the drawing power to attract some of the state's best talent.

THE COLLEGE BOWL performance also gives strength to the argument that FSU is the leading university in the state. The FSU scholars scored over 200 more points than the University of Florida did in losing to John Hopkins University several weeks ago.

Pres. Blackwell can use the College Bowl performance to back his argument that faculty pay increases are needed if quality in education is to be maintained or improved.

BUT THE UNIVERSITY'S glory is only reflected. The real achievement was made by the four fast-fingered intellectuals and their coach, Paul Piccard. They practiced for many weeks to achieve the proficiency exhibited Sunday. The praise is not the University's; it is the scholars'. And they richly deserve it.

BSC

The Polls Are Open

The polls are open today. This is your opportunity to vote on a number of candidates seeking a variety of offices. Every major elective office on campus is wide open and susceptible to your vote. Exercise your vote.

EVERY CANDIDATE we've met this year seems to us to represent a new solidity and earnestness that has been missing in candidates here for a long while. Therefore, we think you have a very real choice to make.

One or two offices will be filled by, as you might personally see it, acclamation or default. The others will require a scrappy voter turnout and a staunch bit of last minute campaigning for your choices.

GO VOTE TODAY. This spring is an opportune time to have a record voter turnout. No matter whom you elect, elect them to office with the feeling that they do represent you; that you stand behind the people you put in office.

Keep It 'Fun'

News feature stories, the kind that are looking for a campus "angle," often seem to settle on the much mistreated, much used Westcott pool. At FSU you haven't arrived yet until you've been thoroughly dunked therein.

A favorite story slant, it naturally follows, is that there have never been any serious accidents at the pool regardless of the fact that bodies are forever flying through the air to stop with a splash.

True, there haven't been any serious injuries. True also that it has come close. Close enough that in the interest of retaining the bit of "good clean fun" at the present healthy level, it may be necessary to ask that some member of the administration be on hand to supervise the dunking process.

The recent incident of the sliced open scalp and a bit of expensive dental work is a wagging finger of warning. The victim got off lightly, all things considered. We think however, it need not happen again.

Name That Game

By TOM McDONALD

The following facets are in order of progressive degeneration.

1. PRIMITIVE combative instincts are aroused within the game organization and sometimes a general primitivity pervades the audience.

2. TEMPORARY and superficial controls are needed in order to make the game more civilized. These controls are called rules and the finer more subtle incongruity, sportsmanship.

3. SUBSEQUENT remote outlet for players is at odds with ethical conduct. (An occasional beer can thrown from a car, sometimes hitting a less primate male, or the scene at the movies: the nearsighted players of the round sit well up front and boistrously cheer the fums vulgarisms implied, unimplied or non-existent. The farsighted ones sit on the balcony and heave candy missiles at one time still, unsuspecting heads. It appears that as age is not necessarily the measure of wisdom, neither is it the measure of immaturity.

4. OVERWHELMING urge to resolve conflicts by force rather than arbitration.

5. PLAYERS are puppets in the hands of power, money, prestige mad manipulators (who preach to them and to the public, weak warhorse tunes.

6. DIMINISHED aesthetic and intellectual pursuits. Titillation rather than elevation is a predominate quest.

The net results of the training of this "sport" are called "men" and the common effects of their radiation are called "human."

For those of you who have guessed the name of the game, consider the following slogans: For a utopia, "Obviate!", for realism, "De-emphasize."

The Team In New York

By BONNIE FREEDMAN
College Bowl Team Member

The Empire State Building, Greenwich Village, the Metropolitan Opera House, and Macy's all become realities along with the reality of New York City for us, as we visited there this weekend while representing FSU on G.E. College Bowl.

ARRIVING FRIDAY evening, by jet from Atlanta, the seven of us took cabs to our accommodations at the Waldorf, where we threw down our luggage and took off. There were eight in the group now, my younger brother having come up from his school on spring vacation.

We took a subway to the Village, to meet friends of Dr. and Mrs. Piccard, who took us to a Chinese restaurant where we ate pork done five or six different ways, clams, octopus, kelp, and several unidentified items.

SATURDAY WE SPLIT up to see what interested us in New York — Claire went over to Long Island to see an exhibit at the Cloisters; Ann and Bob did some shopping and much walking, and Steve, my brother Richard and I walked to the Empire State Bldg., the N. Y. Public Library, and Rockefeller Center. We tried to meet for dinner but could not, and in the evening we saw Broadway shows, with tickets provided by General Electric.

Sunday, the last lap of our vacation hit us with full force — I was suitably pessimistic about my chances of seeing N. Y. again.

WE MET ALLEN LUDDEN and the Sewanee team at the CBS studio at 11, and were briefed on the run of the game and the form of the questions. We ate lunch with the producers, during this time Mr. Ludden referred to us as Florida once. We doubt that he will make this mistake again. We then returned to the studio to play a round of the game. Sewanee had been confident of beating us up until now, but in our first rehearsal game they scored 135; we scored 145.

After a short break, we returned to the stage for another rehearsal game. Our spirits were good when we began this time, but Sewanee almost trampled over us and left us annoyed, scared, and disturbed. When the halftime score in their favor read 29 - 290. The second half we rallied a little, but the game ended 135-489.

CLAIRE, STEVE AND I remained for a few minutes to practice with the triggers, since our reaction time rather than lack of knowledge was what appeared to be holding us down.

By dress rehearsal we had come out of our depression somewhat mainly by means of Mr. Piccard's enthusiasm, and this time University of the South beat us only 185-155, with a good possibility that our playing time was cut short.

WE HAD ANOTHER BREAK during which Dr. Piccard gain suggested that he thought we had a good chance to win. I was beginning to believe it myself.

The real show came as something of a surprise to me. The situation did nothing to suggest that we were on national television, with 10 million viewers, most of whom we didn't know.

THE SCORE AT HALFTIME was 150 - 160 in our favor, with us answering five tossups to Sewanee's three. The second half of the game Sewanee got four tossups right, and three wrong, which we picked up. We scored 135 points in the half, giving us the final score of 285 to Sewanee's 130.

We celebrated, after accepting phone calls from Dean Reynolds, John Griffin, and President Blackwell, by eating dinner at an automat and seeing Porgy and Bess at the N. Y. Center. After running into Eddie Fisher and ridiculous experiences with cab drivers, we got to Idlewild which used to be a 9 - hole golf course in less than enough time to get on the plane.

You may reread this for next week substituting Tufts for Sewanee.

Mr. Denson

Dear Mr.Denson:

What?! You don't like "Two Bits?" You felt foolish yelling "Beat . . . Florida State" and "Ti, Florida, Hi, State"? (This is understandable; if that's what you were yelling you were putting on a one man show because those cheers weren't used this year.) You don't like complex rinky-dink cheers? "Scalp 'Em!" is music to your ears?

Sounds like you feel the same way the cheerleaders do.

But the cheericaders are doing something about it. Since the end of basketball season we met and gone to work ironing out cheers, discarding some, revising many, and bringing in better ones. Aside from considering the cheers themselves, we are concerned with execution of the cheers; we want to avoid the "Chorus line look," we want masculine yells for men, and we are continuing the use of motions that effectively relay the cheer to every fan in our increasing crowd.

Meanwhile, if you have some suggestions, why don't you let us know? Or, if you are really interested, why don't you go out for the squad?

Letter To The 'Gator

By LESLIE POWELL

U of F's John Grant said recently that the student body at that citadel of the Salamander had accepted the "Fact" that U of F would never be a "Great" university. It is too easy to agree with Mr. Grant. Once a swamp, always a swamp. Therefore the following letter to the Addlepater:

DEAR U OF F AND ENVIRONS:

Your student body is much better off to have accepted the "Fact" that the U of F will never be "Great." An early acceptance of "Fact" will save them sitting in the shadow of the singing silo while disappointment creeps upon them. Especially if they sit and wait for the U of F to be "great."

On The College Bowl

By LESLIE POWELL

It speaks genuinely in favor of our Presidnet Blackwell that he met the returning College Bowl Team at the Tallahassee airport. He's a busy man, but he found the time.

AN EQUALLY ELOQUENT demonstration typical of FSU, was the comment of a dorm type to a returning contestant. The comment: "How'd it go? I heard you did all right." Joy to the world, it's almost big enough for the student body and dorm personnel.

There's no reason we can't be proud of the College Bowl win. If the team should lose on the next round, or the next or what and whenever, we still have room for pride. Not only the score, but the individual performances were what you might modestly call spectacular.

EERILY ENOUGH, FSU can't take to much credit for the big sweep. One of the bowlers has been suspended on grounds that would have nullified the publicity given FSU on the College Bowl Show.

I am sorry if my face wasn't on straight when the prepared publicity blurb was read on the air.

One panelist has been under unfair pressure prior to the trip. It was a matter of knuckling under to a battery of mental castration and goat making ice or no trip to NYC, which would have been our loss. It serves to point up the fact that too many elective student posts, especially the Z-string jobbies, are merely posts that offer opportunity for personal domination. There's no good reason for not removing such persons if they make a mockery out of the facts. And it is high time the women's dorms got on the stick and clearly [illegible] the meaning of non-compulsory. Most of the world believes it means "You don't have to."

THE COLLEGE BOWL TEAM won. They put poor 'Gator [illegible] so far back in the shadows as it's painful to think about. They also prove a couple of other points: For one thing, they are good students, trials and tribulations not withstanding. For another, they proved [illegible] it as individuals. The [illegible] processes of FSU [illegible] very little to the College Bowl win. Ironic, isn't it, that the people who represented us in NYC very easily could have been representing another university . . . or could be sitting out a suspension at home. If nobody gets anything else out of the College Bowl, maybe a few of our student body, and even some of the eminent persons whose interests in the state colleges doesn't extend too far beyond headline purposes, may realize that universities are for an education. It might be nice if all of a sudden that became the goal in Florida. Unfortunately, I doubt if you can expect it.

Claire, Steve Bonnie [illegible] York did it. FSU may [illegible] certain fiscal benefits and good publicity, but you did it, and you did it for your own reasons. But I for one, hope more tangible good comes from your feat.

The Turf Worshiping, Grass-Sitting Cults

By JOHN McCOTTER

Well, it's spring again, and at FSU this could mean many different things.

It could mean, for instance, that those nasty girls that sunbathe on the balcony between Gilchrist and Broward will start making wisecracks about your dandruff as you walk by.

IT COULD MEAN that those sun dresses which are held up at the shoulders by two tiny drawstrings will once again be worn by those who have great faith in mankind.

It could mean that another playpen will be built in front of the Seminole Club to keep the football players out of the street.

ONE THING IT DOES MEAN, however, is that the student body is once again being swept by the annual urge to the turf. Yes, when it's still too cool to go to the coast and yet too beautiful outside to sleep in Longmire Lounge, nothing is better than sitting in the soft green grass with the friendly fingers of the sun kneading warmth into your recently chilled bones. There's no greater luxury than feeling a lightly honeyed breeze on your face and laughing at the thought of all those hard, raw days that have just passed. I, personally, am an ardent grass - sitter; why, in some circles, I'm known as "old green - bottom." Having thus qualified myself as something of an authority, I should like to discuss with you, some of the various cults of turf-worshippers found on campus.

The largest and most exclusive sect is known as the "moon - eyes." Included in this group are all those amorous couples found strewn around the campus in various degrees of entanglement. The moon - eyes frequent those areas of turf that are away from well - traveled sidewalks and are surrounded by wide - trunked, low - branched trees. I imagine this is to get away from sidewalk litterbugs.

ANOTHER CULT IS KNOWN as the "have-nots." These are usually homogenous groups of amorous - minded (as distinguished from amorous) persons, usually male, who intently study and comment upon, passersby usually female. Females incidentally, are most interesting this time of year beacuse it is during this season that they gradually moult from winter to summer phase. The have - nots, as would be deduced, can easily be recognized by the adjacent to [illegible] cries of: "I don't believe that chick!"

All the cults aren't alike however. There's one that frequents the area around the Science building which spends its grass-time discussing the Nitrogen Cycle and brandishing slip [illegible] in sleek leather holsters. Another group in front of the drama dept., is constantly playing cowboys—snapping their little fingers at one another, screaming, "Gotcha' Redeye!" The music building crowd giggles incessantly.

Florida State Cindermen Triumph Over LSU Tigers

By JOHN WOOD
Flambeau Sports Writer

The Bayou Boys of Lousiana State lost their footing and high Southeastern Conference standing to a hustling outfit of Unidentified Flying Objects at a March 29 track meet on Florida High's course. The objects have been tentatively identified as members of the Florida State trackmen.

The man who is responsible for giving these FSU flyboys their beginning as a unit left the meet with an 85-50 victory and a 4-0 season record to his credit.

The man responsible, Coach Mike Long, remarked as he sat viewing a followup match between two local high schools, "I am pleased at the showing of the boys and their steady progress. We knew that LSU was one of the leading teams in the SEC, and we wanted them."

He cast a glance down the track and continued, "The outstanding performances were by Craig Johnson in the dashes and Dick Roberts in his first two victories of the season."

Johnson won the 100 in 9.7, the 440, and tied LSU's Bob Yates in the 220, while Roberts ran the mile in 4:26.8 and the two-mile run in 10:20.

"Our record is commendable," Coach Long continued, "but, the going is getting rougher . . . we journey to Austin, Tex., April 6-7 for the Texas Relays. Our next home meet will be the Florida Invitational AAU meet in May 4."

Several records were smashed at the LSU-FSU encounter — including a meet, track, and school record in the shot put by Jeff Clark (58-3¼) and a meet record in the discus by Clark (180-3½), another record was rewritten in the javelin event by Leonce Castagnosi of LSU, while another mark was established in the broad jump by Herbie Kraft (27-7½). Bud Hamric of LSU set a record in the pole vault with a 14-3 effort.

The Tribe won the 440 relay as Spike Olsen, Harold Johnson, Terry Long, and Craig Johnson toured the course in 42.4. Then Mike O'Brien and George Smith tied for second in the high jump.

Allen Williams, a 210-pound sophomore from Atlanta, finished third for the Tribe in the shot put. Quentin Till followed this by running the 440 in 49.4 for first place.

Florida State won the high hurdles as junior Dave Ellis ran the course in 14.9 ahead of LSU's Sam Simonton and FSU's Bill Welch of Jacksonville.

The Seminoles swept the 880 run as Bill Davis, Jack Brocksmith, and Leon Smith finished first, second and third respectively. Davis' time was 1:56.2.

Another record was smashed as Long ran the low hurdles in 22.6 for the Seminoles, downing Sinonto and FSU's Olsen.

Florida State's Ed Hayes came in second in the pole vault, clearing 13-9¾.

Florida State closed out the meet with a mile relay victory as Ellis, Leon Smith, Brocksmith, and Craig Johnson clocked 3.24.5.

RICK MILLER, THE SOUTHEASTERN FREE EXERCISE CHAMPION, competes in the National Collegiate Gymnastic meet Friday in New Mexico. The Seminole came in 15th in a field of 56 entries.

Florida State's Free Ex Champ Finishes Fifteenth

Rick Miller of Florida State's Gymkana battled with Olympians and former national champions last week in Albequerque, N. M., to bring home the 15th place out of 56 entries in the free exercise event.

Miller, who traveled alone to the meet as Florida State's only entry, was the only athlete to compete from the Southeast.

The Seminole, who has been definitely judged the champion in the southern part of the U.S., was unable to triumph over gymnastic - conscious schools such as Penn State, Illinois, Southern California, Southern Illinois, Michigan State, and UCLA, Gymkana officials said.

Several of the schools sent entire teams and coaches to the national meet.

Bob Lynn of Southern Cal took first place honors in the free ex event as he did two years ago. In addition, Lynn took first on the parallel bars and won the coveted All - Around title.

In their high school days in California, Lynn and Miller used to compete against each other.

Swimmer Named All-American

Florida State's Paul Thompson obtained All - American status last week as he finished fifth in the finals of the 440 freestyle in the NCAA championships in Columbus, Ohio.

Thompson had set a new school record of 2:03.3 the day before with his sixth place effort in the 220 freestyle. The next day, the Tallahassean placed fourth in the 440's qualifying runs with a 4:27.0 performance.

Record breaker Lee Bransford, weakened by a recent illness, failed to qualify in the 200 and 100 butterfly.

FSU Linkers Finish Third

The Seminole golf team played with a turtle on the last day of the Houston Invitational and came in third in total strokes behind Houston and Oklahoma State.

Discovering a turtle at one of the holes, a Tribesman said, "This is going to be our good luck piece."

And sure nuff, on the next three holes the Seminoles got birdies. However, the turtle wandered off after the third hole.

Dave Philo led the Seminoles with 308 strokes and was followed by Manny Nordone's and Chuck Keating's 312. Bryan Bergeron tallied 315.

The Seminoles, who have a 12-0 record and have placed fifth and sixth in two tourneys, came in third in four - ball play and ninth in two ball play with 285 points.

The Tribesmen opened the tourney, shooting 323, which was about 24 shots more than they should have gone, Coach Bill Odeneal said. On the second day, the FSU team shot a 306. The Seminoles' low came on the third day when they recorded 304. And on the fourth day, they closed out competition against 16 of the top teams in the South and Southwest by shooting a 314.

"Our team played well on greens that were made dry by strong winds," Coach Odeneal said. "It made it tight, so that the balls ran fast like we were shooting on a sidewalk."

FLORIDA STATE RACKS UP ANOTHER RUN AS A SEMINOLE SLIDES INTO HOME PLATE IN the second inning of Friday's contest with the Clemson Tigers. (Photo by Emmette Jackson)

In 14-8 Go

Seminoles Tumble Tigers

The Florida State baseball team, after downing Clemson, 14-8, on Friday was washed out of its scheduled doubleheader Saturday.

The Seminoles met South Carolina here yesterday, but results were not available at presstime. A second game with the Gamecocks will be at 3:30 p.m. today.

Sophomore Woody Woodward sparked Friday by whacking two triples and two doubles in five trips to the plate. Woodward leads the Seminoles in batting with a .514 average.

Second baseman Bill Williamson, who is averaging .325, slammed a double, a two-run homer, and a single to drive in five runs.

Among the regulars, first baseman Hal Mangin evened his average at .400, getting four singles in five trips. Third baseman Kyle Spitzer duplicated Mangin's effort to bring his average to .500.

Catcher Buddy Teagle hit a double for the Seminoles to get his only hit in four trips. He is now averaging .387 and has hit 12 home runs this season.

It seemed like Clemson's game Friday when the Carolina team chalked up four runs in the first against FSU's two runs. In the second inning Clemson scored one run, while FSU brought home four men to grab a one-point lead. Clemson tied the contest, 6-6, in the third, keeping Florida State scoreless.

But the Seminoles exploded in the fourth to score three runs for a permanent lead. They added another in the fifth, and kept Clemson from scoring again until the eighth when two Carolinians came home. The Seminoles broke the game wide open, however, when they came to the plate in the eighth by tallying four men.

Hurler Ray McShane started on the mound for the Seminoles, lasting two innings. McShane fanned two, walked two, and gave up four hits.

He turned the mound over to senior John Tucker, who pitched 5⅔ innings. Tucker, who grabbed his second win against no losses struck out four, walked one, and gave up seven hits.

Frank Lund finished the game pitching 1⅓ innings, striking out one, not giving up any hits, runs, or bases.

Career Cues:

"The broader your knowledge, the greater your chance of success!" Edwin J. Ducayet, President Bell Helicopter Company

"As I look back, graduating from college in the depth of the depression was a blessing in disguise. It was difficult to get a job, and even more difficult to hold it. It proved to me early in life that to succeed in business requires constant struggle.

"I found that the truly successful individual never stops learning, that a formal college education is the foundation on which we continue to build the knowledge and experience required to get ahead.

"Even in today's age of specialization, a man eventually reaches a point where breadth of knowledge is necessary. The engineer must understand accounting and marketing. The marketing man must know his product. The financial man must be sympathetic to engineering development and sales programs. Management must have a working knowledge of all phases of the complex and highly competitive business world.

"Therefore, even though specializing, a student should make his college curriculum as broad as possible, and diversify his outside activities. Authoritative surveys have shown that only a small percentage of individuals end up in the field in which they specialized in college.

"Widen your world. Broaden your interests right now. Since graduation from college I've discovered that those who are really succeeding today are the ones who do more and keep on learning from what they do. The broader your college interests are now — the steadier your ladder of success tomorrow!"

Staples and Briggs have become close friends and when Ramsey approaches Staples to take the first vice presidency, Staples is confronted with a question in human ethics. 'University Party' Is Organized

By JIM SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

An informed source announced yesterday the organization of a new campus political party to be called "University Party."

The new party is planned to give the best opportunity for FSU students for fair, open and impartial chances for student body offices, the source said.

The meetings for the convention are scheduled for next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings from 7:45 to 10:45 in Opperman Amphitheatre.

The party planners have so organized the convention to make it impossible for any one campus group to be able to pack the convention into a bloc of favor- votes. The convention will be held for the purpose of selecting candidates for class offices, judiciary posts, class senators, Honor Court and Traffic Court members.

DELEGATE SELECTION

Delegates will be selected from lists that are posted today in all dormitories. Those signing the papers will meet Sunday afternoon at appointed times for caucuses to select their delegation. At the caucuses, those names from the roster will be selected by drawings with the number of delegates based on representation of one per hundred students.

In the dormitories, no member of a social sorority or fraternity will be eligible to be a delegate as each fraternal organization's delegate will represent each student of their organization regardless of his or her residence.

The party organizers wish to stress the fact that a member of a Greek organization living in a dormitory is ineligible to represent the dorm.

Lists for day student delegates are posted on bulletin boards in front of Longmire Bldg., History Bldg., and at the Student Center. Married student delegate lists

S.P. Convene Is Next Week

The next Student Party Convention will be held in the Education Bldg. Lecture Hall, next Tuesday and Thursday, beginning at 7:00 p.m. each night.

Candidates' campaign signs will be permitted inside the room. Fees for delegates are $.50, $.25 for visitors.

The Kellum delegation which was selected has been removed since five protests were received concerning the members of that delegation. New delegates are now being selected in accordance with the new constitution.

Student Party Convention delegates are as follows:

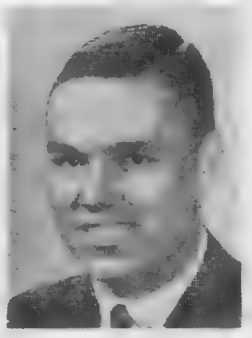
Cheerleaders Have Practice

Practice for cheerleadering tryouts will be Monday through Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. on Landis Green.

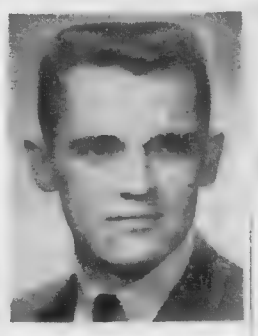
Bill Harnage, head cheerleader, said that this year a revitalizing program has been set in motion to improve student interest and backing of the cheering squad.

This program has achieved special status by the provision in the Student Body Statutes which allows cheerleaders to be governed according to the Cheerleaders' Constitution. There is now greater flexibility in carrying out aims, Harnage feels.

As a part of this program, he is interested in attracting qualified people to become cheerleaders. He is also hoping for an improved balance of men and women on the squad. "At present, we have only two men to ten women on the team," he said.



"We would like to improve this, maybe at first eight women to four men, and later a six to six balance," he added. He explained that this would give cheers the needed bigness and forcefulness.



Another facet of this program is the re-examination of the cheers which has been done just recently. "Most of all," explained Harnage, "we desire the backing and interest of the students."

Actual tryouts will be next Friday, at 4 p.m. at the Music Bldg. Amphitheatre.

Judges for tryouts will be Dr. Coyle Moore, Coach Bill Peterson, Tom Waites, Eddie Feely, Gayle Motes, and Ken van Assenderp.

FSU Four To Meet Tufts In Second Knowledge Bout

By MERRY MOREHOUSE
Flambeau Staff Writer

Pitted against Tufts University, Florida State University's varsity scholars will enter their second round of competition in the G. E. College Bowl, Sunday.

The College Bowl will be broadcast in Tallahassee at 5:30 p.m. Sunday on Channel 6.

Television sets will be available in Opperman and in the T. V. Studio for those who wish to view the show.

The FSU four, Claire Kemper, Steve Whealton, Bonnie Freedman and Bob Houston fly to New York this afternoon. Accompanying them will be their coach, Dr. Paul Piccard of the Government Dept. Lynn Witherspoon, a sophomore chemistry major with a strong background in music, will go as alternate.

ENTHUSIASTIC

After defeating the University of the South, Sewanee, Tenn., last week by more than double their score, FSU's team is enthusiastic about their chances against Tufts. "They're slightly euphoric," stated Dr. Piccard when questioned about the group's morale. "And we're extremely grateful for the response and support they've been getting," he added.

Organized practices for the scholars have not been held this week, but they have been doing some individual studying, he explained.

Tufts is a small modern university of 3,718 enrollment in Medford, Mass. Its largest colleges are liberal arts and engineering. In addition to the campus in Medford, the school includes a large dental and medical center in Boston.

The team in their last performance won $1,500 in scholarships for FSU. Definite plans for distribution of the money have not been made, but there are hopes that alumnae and supporters will match the team's winnings. In this case, a permanent endowment fund may be established to be used as gift money to outstanding studies.

MEMBERS' AGES

There has been a great deal of interest expressed in the ages of the team members. Mrs. Kemper is 21, Whealton is 18, and Miss Freedman and Houston are 19.

State Government OKs Bond Program

Approval Follows That Of Cabinet And The State Budget Commission

By HOWARD DENSON

The $25 million university bond program was declared financially sound Tuesday, by the State Board of Administration.

The approval of the board, which consists of Governor C. Farris Bryant, Treasurer J. Edwin Lawson and Comptroller Ray Green, followed the approval of the State Board of Education and the Board of Control.

Two steps remain before the bonds may be sold.

The bond program has to go through reutine validations proceedings at the Circuit Court level and at the Supreme Court level.

Leon County Circuit Judge W. May Walker said a validation suit was filed with the court, Tuesday.

The issue will come before the Circuit Court at 10 a. m. May 8. "At this time," Judge Walker said, "the bond program will be heard and all protests concerning it will be heard." He said he was not aware of any protests.

There will then be a time-lapse of 30 to 60 days, at the end of which the Supreme Court will rule on the legality of the bond program.

Walker said the state could probably hope to sell the bonds by the first part of June.

Florida State's cut from the bond issue will include $2.4 million for science facilities and $2.6 for the proposed Student Union.

The University hopes to use the bond money to complete the Nuclear Bldg., to add to the Psychology Bldg., and to build facilities related to the Physics Bldg. and the Student Union.

Only buildings that have been authorized by the State Legislature can be constructed with the bond money.

Gov. Bryant recently said that he expected work to begin on some constructions by the beginning of the Fall trimester.

The Board of Control has indicated that all $25 million could be sold at one time if the market conditions seemed favorable.

The bonds, which were issued by the Florida Development Commission, will be backed by unpledged parts of student fees that were ear - marked for the construction of buildings.

The balance of funds not needed immediately will be used in investing in securities, if the entire $25 million issue is sold.

In addition to Florida State, four other state universities will benefit from the bond sale.

Proceeds amounting to $5.3 million will go to the proposed university at Boca Raton. The money will be used to construct laboratories, television facilities, a library, and a utilities building.

The University of South Florida will get $1.5 million for the construction of a science building.

Florida A&M will receive $978,000 of which $278,000 will go for the construction of campus utilities while $700,000 will be used for an addition to the Student Union.

The University of Florida will get $6[illegible] million — $5.7 million for science buildings and $4.9 million for a student union.

Senate Approves University Budget

By HOWARD DENSON

A university activities budget of $353,791 was unanimously approved at Wednesday's Student Senate meeting, although there were dissenting cries from several senators.

The organization that set off the cries of anguish was Intercollegiate Athletics which requested $170,000. The Senate, considering the $150,000 amount approved by the Student Committee, seemed puzzled at the almost $20,000 budget increase.

Actually, Student Body President Bobby Byrd told the Senate athletics received about $13,000 extra last year from other sources, so the increase was not so great.

SPRING SPORTS

He said the increased amount would go mostly to the spring sports, which will have to maintain teams during part of the summer trimester. He then urged the Senate to pass the athletics budget so that President Gordon W. Blackwell would not approve the budget before they had time to recommend a lower amount for athletics.

This statement brought several senators to their feet.

"Just how much power does Senate have?" Sen. Gerry Dobson asked, "are we a Women's Senate that can be over - ruled? Are they merely throwing a bone to us?"

Byrd explained that the Senate's decision would be a recomendation and that, if the administration disagreed with the Senate's decision, it could justify the situation.

Byrd told them that the reason the Organizations and Finance committee of the Senate

Smithies Talks On Economics, Foreign Policy

"Economic Stakes in American Foreign Policy" will be the subject of a lecture by Dr. Arthur Smithies, Harvard University economist, Monday, at 8 p.m. in the Library Lecture Hall.

Dr. Smithies will be the fourth in a series of eight lectures brought to Florida State University this semester by the Government Dept.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

Dr. Smithies was born in Australia and studied at the University of Tasmania. He was a Commonwealth Fund Fellow to Harvard University in 1934, after which he worked with the Australian Treasury Department. The economist has taught at the University of Michigan and served as chief of the economy bureau of the U. S. Bureau of the Budget from 1943 to 1948.

The speaker has been Nathaniel Ropes professor of political economy at Harvard since 1957. He has also been a Fulbright visiting professor to Oxford University, a Rhodes Scholar and a Guggenheim Fellow.

Dr. Smithies is the author of The Budgetary Process in the United States, which was published in 1954.

'Too True To Be Good' Opens Wednesday For Four Day Stand In Conradi Theatre

By LINDA COLLIER
Flambeau Staff Writer

George Bernard Shaw's Too True To Be Good will open in Conradi Theatre next Wednesday for a four day run.

The last production of the year for the University Theatre, it will be directed by Dr. Arthur Dorlag, head of the Theatre Dept. at FSU.

Tickets will be available Monday at $.75 for students and $1.50 for non-students at the Westcott Ticket Office.

In explaining his reasons for choosing this lesser - known play of Shaw's, Dr. Dorlag said that he felt too many major writers are known only by their old standby plays, and this gives people a narrow view of their works. He feels that Shaw should be known for some of his other works that have not been produced quite so often.

CHANGE IN STYLE

"Almost all the plays for which he is well - known were written before Heartbreak House. After writing this play, he underwent a big change in his writing, which is usually thought of as 'less good' and is less well known," Dr. Dorlag said.

"In addition, this play has a bathing beauty in it, which best be left unexplained," he added.

A play of complex ideas, Shaw wrote Too True To Be Good in 1931, about ten years after World War I, as an argument for Socialism. However, Dr. Dorlag sees it as a play that "reads like today, tomorrow, or yesterday". It stands out as a search for values in the atomic age.

One of the views expressed is that the old institutions like religion, and marriage have lost their validity, but we still haven't found anything to replace them, Dr. Dorlag said. In an intellectual way, it is the view of the beatniks of today that the social structures of today are wrong

Fountain Appears In Westcott On April 16 For Two Shows

Pete Fountain, jazz clarinetist, will appear in Westcott Auditorium on April 16, sponsored by Student Artist Series.

Two programs will be presented, the first at 7 p.m., the second at 9 p.m. Tickets for the performance go on sale Monday at $2 for students and $2.50 for non-students. No seats will be reserved.

Fountain was first introduced to the FSU campus at the SUSGA conference here last spring, when he played at a closed concert for the delegates.

FOR HIS HEALTH

The 30 - year - old musician's real name, Pierre Dewey La Fountaine, Jr., echoes of his birthplace, New Orleans. He began playing twenty years ago at the recommendation of a family doctor, who advised him to take up a "wind instrument" to alleviate a respiratory ailment.

The jazz artist studied for a short while at the John Wiggs' State Band School of Music, but received most of his training in jam sessions on Bourbon Street in his native city. It was at one of these sessions that he met Irving Fazola, one of the original Bob Crosby Bobcats, who became his teacher. The death of this friend occasioned Fountain's first professional date when he was 16.

Although he spent several months playing with the Dukes of Dixieland in Chicago and two years with the Lawrence Welk TV show, Fountain has remained most of his career in New Orleans. He now owns his own club there, the French Quarter Inn. He has also played in and helped organize several small bands.

EIGHT ALBUMS

The young artist, who has been compared in accomplishment to Benny Goodman, records for Coral Records. He has recorded eight albums, the latest being "Pete Fountain's French Quarter," which was released in February, 1961.

In October, 1959, the city of New Orleans declared a Pete Fountain Day in his honor to recognize his assistance in establishing the New Orleans Jazz Festival. He has received awards this year from Playboy and Downbeat magazines.

Fountain is married, and has two small sons and a baby daughter.

Two Party System

Recent events indicate that Florida State University might be on the verge of the long-awaited and much-heralded two party system it has sought for so long. With the defeat of every opposed candidate running on the Student Party ticket, the unprecedented situation of having none of the four major offices held by SP members has arisen.

THE UNIVERSITY PARTY, a new student political party, has organized and announced its intention to nominate candidates for the second election. These students have obviously worked hard in preparing their organization, for they have included many safeguards against the stacked delegations and non-competitive elections which have characterized FSU politics for so long. They have done an excellent job and should be commended and encouraged to continue their work.

Basically, the defeat of the Student Party is due to an exodus of candidates from the group—not because the party refused to nominate them, but because the candidates had gotten tired of stacked delegations and manipulated elections.

IN A COMMENDABLE EFFORT to counteract its bad reputation before the election, new party chairman Bill Greenwood announced a list of revisions which cured many of the ills causing the party to stagger. It was, however, too late, and the independents swept the field.

If the party has faith in its reorganization, they will not accept this defeat as a death-blow. They will work, hold conventions, and nominate a slate of qualified candidates for the next election. This time, the voters went to the polls with vivid memories of what they considered a decadent organization; but with sincerity and hard work, these memories can be erased.

THE UNIVERSITY PARTY'S existence puts an additional burden on its rival, one which the Student Party has never before faced. Other "second" parties have been protest movements against the SP monopoly, but they have never been serious organizations headed by qualified officials of student government. This time, the new party constitutes a real threat, and the Student Party realizes it.

GREENWOOD AND HIS co-workers should now work even harder to keep the SP on its feet. If they withdraw, the opposing party will simply inherit the same political monopoly that the SP once had, leaving students in exactly the same undesirable situation.

With good Student Party revisions, and with the careful checks and balances written into the new University Party, the plans of both groups look good on paper. They should both be able to find qualified candidates to nominate and support. It is up to their respective members to prove their capabilities and intentions with actions.

Beginning A Series:

Contentions

By HANK JORDAN

The Supreme Court of the United States ruled last week that complaints of inequitable state legislative districting could be taken to the federal courts. As a result of this action two very important and long-debated questions have again been raised. first, is state districting as it now exists actually just or unjust, and second, if injustice does exist, is remedial action by the federal courts constitutional. These questions are important because they involve two precepts which are vital to the American system of government, majority rule and the separation of powers. These precepts are not only involved, they may well be in conflict, for if state legislative districting is unjust, and if this situation can only be rectified by unconstitutional action by the federal courts, then either violation of majority rule must continue or majority rule must be restored by violation of the separation of powers.

In order to determine if such a conflict exists it is first necessary to return to the question of whether state legislative districting is just or unjust. If this question is to be decided on the basis of whether majority rule does or does not exist the answer would surely be in the negative. In Kansas, 22.5 percent of the people can elect a majority to the state house of representatives, in Delaware 17.5 per cent, in Florida, 17 per cent, and in Vermont, 12.5 per cent. In Maryland, 13.5 per cent of the population can control the state senate, in Rhode Island, 13.5 per cent, in Nevada 12.5 per cent, and in California, 12 per cent. To look at the problem from another angle, the state senator from Georgia's Atlanta district (population 473,000) needs equal power with the representative from a rural district which has a population of only 16,000, and in Vermont two rural legislators who represent a comined total of less than 700 persons can outvote the representative of a district containing over 35,000 people. Other examples could be cited, but the conclusion is evident. Unequal representation in the form of rural minorities dominating urban majorities is flagrant in many state legislatures.

The question now arises as to why the states themselves do not take action to remedy this injustice, especially since periodic reapportionment is specifically required by many state constitutions. What reasons do opponents of redistricting offer for violating these constitutions? These reasons or excuses, are as follows, (1) in spite of the fact that they are underrepresented the cities get what legislation they require, (2) the redistricting of state legislatures would lead to urban domination with all the evils (such as block voting) which are connected with city politics, and (3) it is better that rural areas should dominate because the great virtues of the American way of life (conservatism in general) are found in the people of the country while the cities, on the other hand, are hot-beds of radicalism.

Each of these contentions seem highly questionable, both as to their accuracy and to their importance is justifications for minority rule. In regard to the first point, it is probable that representatives of the cities would be better qualified to judge urban needs than would rural legislators. Also, it is doubtful that President Kennedy would have thought it necessary to create a department of urban affairs with cabinet rank if the cities were not in serious trouble.

Concerning point two, if urban politics are in fact considerably less democratic than in rural areas, then steps should be taken to clean them up. In fact, the time to do this is now while the country still dominates the legislatures, for if and when the cities obtain their fair share of power they may be as reluctant to clean up their politics as the country now is to redistrict. Furthermore, it is doubtful if the possibility of city politics in the state legislature would be a greater evil than is the reality minority rule. In any case it is a poor system which can only control one evil by shacking it with another.

In regard to point three, even if it is accepted as true that country people are better Americans than their bretheren in the cities, the fact remains that rura. dominated legislatures are not representative of changing population structure, of changing conditions, of changing needs, and indeed, of much change at all. If rural control of state legislatures continues state government must become less and less responsive to the needs of the citizens, for in the future the gap between the dynamic society of the city and the relatively static society of the country will almost certainly widen. A state government which is not only unrepresentative, but out of touch with economic, social, and political reality as well would be a poor bargain for all its traditional American virtues.

The real reason that state governments have not put their houses in roder is the fact that the legislatures are responsible for reapportioning themselves. Since rural representatives can outvote those of the cities, and since reapportionment can only result in a reduction in the number of rural legislators, it is not surprising that they have been unwilling to vote themselves out of a job. At this point, then, the situation would seem to be as follows: (1) minority rule does in fact exist in many state governments, and (2) those who have the power to restore majority rule have put private interests above democracy. It is now possible to turn to the second of the original questions: is remedial action by the federal courts constitutional?

A Letter From The "Coach"

TO THE EDITOR:

The Flambeau and many of our friends really went all - out in welcoming the College Bowl team home. I know that I speak for the whole team in expressing a deep gratitude for your good wishes

I'm a poor loser, but I sure love to win. This victory was wonderful and I am really enjoying basking in the reflected glory of four fine students (four wonderful people!). But let us keep a sense of proportion in all of this. While we appreciate all the congratulations we have received we want to remind you that this is just a game.

Some people seem to be forgetting Allen Ludden's weekly disclaimer The College Bowl is not a full measure of a person's education. Neither is it a fit basis upon which to judge a university. Too much depends upon the run of the questions, among other non - academic considerations.

The time has come to de-emphasize intercollegiate competition in games and, as your good editorial and Leslie Powell's thoughtful column last Tuesday suggested, to get back to the serious business of strengthening education in less dramatic (and more expensive) ways.

So anyway, thanks already, you-all.

PAUL J. PICCARD

TO THE EDITOR:

My thanks to Mr. Peter Rice for his fine letter recommending that the library be kept open longer hours. And may I say what a rare pleasure it is to be able to agree totally with Mr. Dobson' And I do agree completely that the ideal situation is a library open all the time. But, realizing that such a radical change of procedure might indeed entail great (or apparently great) difficulties, why not try, as Mr. Rice suggests, keeping the library open at least til 12:00 or 1:00 . This is an idea that has been occasionally heard for a long time, and one that I, at least, feel rather ashamed at not having expressed much earlier. But let's raise the question now, at least. Student, faculty, administration, staff: How think you? Personally, I feel that keeping the Robert Manning Strozier Library open all the time would be a most fitting tribute to the man who said, "Let's make this a great university."

The following letter is a notice dated March 26 and headed: TO ALL PHYSICAL EDUCATION MAJORS:

At the last regular major's club meeting, held Wednesday, March 21, a motion, preceded by a discussion, was passed to designate every Wednesday as "TIE DAY" for all men physical education majors.

We feel that this is an excellent opportunity to erraticate (sic) some of the sterotypes (sic) associated with the physical education majors. The impressions made by smart dress upon faculty members and guests of the university are of untold value. So please, we urge you, form the habit—Remember: Slipping on a tie can be as easy as zipping your fly.

After Hours

On Mygnon Champion

KAREN THORNTON

The women, at Freshman Convocation, listened quietly and attentively as Mygnon Champion, Women's Vice President, spoke about everything from world affairs to responsibilities of the administration and studying

MYGNON STATED that students are in college to get an education and that campus activities are only supplementary. She said "A university can be no greater than the students it develops and that regimentation in one area is not conducive to freedom in another."

This was one of the best speeches ever made by a Student government official at this university. But, of course, it had to be if one notes the woman who delivered it.

MYGNON CHAMPION deserves much praise for the diligent and time consuming work that she has put forth for the women of this university. She has tried to show the importance of the ideas of the students to the administration so that the student body which she represents and the administration might be closer in some ways. She has been fair and just in every aspect concerning the student body, the administration and student government.

In a few short weeks Miss Champion will graduate, leaving behind a brillant college record and personal achievements in most phases of college life that any predecessor will be hard put to match.

AS IN THE POEM, The Bridge Builder, which Miss Champion quoted at the end of her speech, she, like the old man, has built a bridge for us, the trailing undergraduates, to cross. It is a strong and sturdy bridge, but it requires knowledge and fortitude to cross over. De we have the necessary qualifications?

Mygnon has done the best she could for the coeds on this campus. Her best has been quite a lot. It is our turn now to do our best. I think we own Mygnon Champion a vote of thanks for a job well performed, and for the sturdy support she has given the student body through her positions in student government these last several years.

New Party Announced

DEAR FRIENDS:

The purpose of this letter is to introduce to the students of FSU a new campus political organization, THE UNIVERSITY PARTY.

During the past few weeks much thought has been given to the political situation that presently exists on this campus. As a result of the findings and as a result of a great need, a new political party is on its way to making FSU a dual - party campus. As you will see in the ensuing weeks, this new party is soundly established and was formulated on the basis of serving the best interests of the students of FSU.

During these past weeks much planning has gone into all phases of the new party. We feel that we have the most democratic organizational plant that is possible! As evidenced through reading THE UNIVERSITY PARTY constitution, power cannot be held by a select few and utilized for their own benefit.

We have laid the groundwork for a truly great party but you, the students, are who must make it succeed. Our purpose is embodied in the constitution and we must emphasize that it is not our intent to destroy any existing party organizations.

We now ask that each of you make a dedicated effort to view the current political system and to apply to this system our organizational method of revision embodied in THE UNIVERSITY PARTY. Bring student government UP through supporting a democratic system of government.

DEAR FELLOW STUDENTS:

In accepting the responsibility you have entrusted to me, I wish to thank you for the opportunity to work with you in such a capacity. It is impossible to express my sentiments following your support last Tuesday.

Many of you have willingly sacrificed much toward that end, I am ever indebted to you. You have my pledge to do the best I can, to strive to meet the standards established by my predecessors and to try to be worthy of your expressed confidence. In so doing, I, indeed everyone in student government, must ask humbly for your continued support in our positions as stewards of your interests. When all of us can unite as friends and citizens in this university community, nothing but the progress thereby destined can result In this thrilling prospect I am honored to be your friend and fellow - worker. Thank you all.

The Morality Of Tragedy

By JIM SMITH

"The tragic feeling," said Arthur Miller, "is evoked in us when we are in the presence of a character who is ready to lay down his life, to secure one thing—his sense of personal dignity."

"DEATH OF A SALESMAN," he said, "is the tragedy of a man who believed that he alone was not meeting the qualifications laid down for mankind by those clean-shaven frontiersmen who inhabit the peaks of broadcasting and advertising offices."

Instructor Mike Shaara hosts the freshmen English television classes and for next week has assembled some of the university's finest actors directed by Richard Fallon, to enact the last scene of the play. Rehearsals have indicated that this program should be of interest to a wider audience. It will be aired Monday and Wednesday at 1 p.m. and Tuesday at 12 and 1 p.m.

WILLY LOMAN AS the salesman, is a tragic character who is trying to find his place in his environment. He never actually finds himself and is constantly involved in his dreams of the success he should have been. His only hope, his sons, are also tragic failures. They are like their family refrigerator which is a good machine because it has been greatly advertised. And they, like the refrigerator, constantly break down before the installments are paid.

Willy's brother, Ben, is the personification of the individualistic American conquering wild frontiers. "I walked into the jungle when I was seventeen," he said, "and I walked out when I was twenty-one. And by God I was rich."

BROTHER BEN'S JUNGLE was the timber of Alaska and the diamond mines in Africa. Willy's jungle was the concrete and steel of the cities, and the sample cases of the traveling salesman and hotel rooms away from home.

Willy's predicament is that of being torn away from the image of what he is trying to become, and not knowing what he wants to become. He is lost, but he will not give up the struggle to find his rightful place in the world.

HIS SON BIFF comes to reality as he discovers his true identity. "I'm nothing, Pop. I'm nothing. I'm not a leader of men and neither are you. I'm a dime a dozen and so are you. You were never anything but a hard-working drummer who landed in the ash can like all the rest of them. I stole myself out of every job since high schoo. And I never got anywhere because you blew me so full of hot air I could never stand taking orders from anybody."

Miller further comments that "the quality in such plays that shake us, derives from the underlying fear of being displaced Among us today this fear is as strong, and perhaps stronger than it ever was. In fact, it is the common man who knows this fear best . . . It is true that tragedy is the consequence of a man's total compulsion to evaluate himself justly, his destruction in the attempt posits a wrong or an evil in his environment. And this is precisely the morality of tragedy and its lesson."

"WILLY WAS A SALESMAN," said his friend Charley, "and for a salesman, there is no rock bottom to life. He doesn't put a bolt to a nut, he doesn't tell you the law or give you medicine. He's a man way out there in the blue, riding on a smile and a shoeshine. And when they start not smiling back, that's an earthquake. And then you get yourself a couple of spots on your hat, and you're finished A salesman has got to dream. It comes with the territory."

The Needs Of Challenge

By ALLAN DERMOTT

It is most interesting to note that men are looking deeper into what is needed to meet the challenge of Communism. Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara said, as The Miami Herald worded it, that "the application of military force alone will not automatically defeat the Communists unless there is internal economic and social reform."

CONSIDERING THE COMMUNIST challenge, Mr. Herbert V. Prochnow, president of the First National Bank of Chicago concluded his address at the Midwinter Trust Conference of the American Bankers Association this year as follows:

"Two thousand years ago a question was asked which has challenged men down through the centuries.

"THAT QUESTION WAS, for what will it profit a man if he shall gain the world and lose his own soul?"

"We may well ask today, 'For what will it profit a nation to become the greatest economic power in history if its people lose the qualities of their greatness — self - discipline, self-reliance, industry, thrift, courage, character, faith?'

"THIS IS NOT A CRISIS of economic power. We have the potential power. This is not even a crisis of defense. We have the potential strength. This is a crisis of the inward spirit of man.

"The question is — 'Have we as a people the spirit of greatness?'"

ONE OF THE GREATEST things happening today is the fact that men are beginning to see the need of not only military force and internal economic reform, but, also, an examination of the "inward spirit of man." It is clear from Mr. Prochnow's whole address that he does not feel there is no need of economic reform or a stronger defense, but that he feels an internal economic reform is impossible without, what Mr. McNamara calls, an internal social reform.

When man looks into the need of a social reform, he sees what seems to be an infinite number of things to be considered. But when he looks at the social reform through the light of what is needed for an economic reform, he sees that man needs to think less about himself and more on what is needed for the betterment of the country. With the lack of patriotism lingering over the country like a massive formation of clouds and fog, self, unfortunately, is growing more important to people rather than an altruistic concept of life. Here rests the great weakness that makes an internal economic reform impossible.

IF EVERY DAY could be like that one when John Glenn orbited the earth three times or the day of his great reception, this country would be much better off. When the people saw the greatness of the shot into space, the greatness of this country and the man himself, they humbled themselves and forgot self if, as Ben Sharp stated in his column about a month ago, this country could stay united as on the day of Glenn's shot into space, this country could never fall to Communism.

Minnie And The Polyfacetious

By BONNIE FREEDMAN

Once upon a time there was a kingdom of blind people, who had been in darkness for centuries. They kept in touch with the happenings of the world through a semi - permeable membrane. They had the "modernest" religions, and indeed began to forget some of the older ones.Even Christian ethics were falling by the wayside.

THEY KNEW ABOUT DEWEY, and his education of the mediocre; New York, and the fascination it holds for some people; and they had heard about Night with its everpresent dangers, from which they protected their girls

But as I said, this was only a semi - permeable membrane. Information could get in, but no one could find out without going there what it was like inside. And, if one found unfairness inside, there was no way to let anyone outside know.

THIS IS THE STORY of a girl who tried.

There came to this kingdom a child who could see. Minerva (Minnie) had not seen much, but she knew of kindness, and of fairness. She imagined that everyone was fair, and kind, and seeing. She came to this kingdom to see as much as she could.

THEN SUDDENLY, two years after she arrived, the blindness of the kingdom attacked her.

The leadership of this kingdom was unique. You see, it was part of a greater kingdom — A kingdom of seeing and wise people, but the thing about this smaller kingdom was that it was composed entirely of females. These women had a ruler, who was all-powerful; thirteen minor rulers, who varied greatly in number of faces — that is, they were polyfacetious; and thirteen democratically elected Dragons

NOW IN ORDER to keep this kingdom running smoothly, there were long sets of laws which no one ever saw, and now and then it was the custom to find someone breaking one of these laws and sentence her to a most horrible punishment — trial before the Dragon Court! It was rumored that once sentenced to this, nobody ever escaped.

The Dragon, a sweet girl with polished horns, named (fittingly) Swampy Sue, reminded Minerva that this palce was for the blind, that this court was never wrong, and that it overrode Everything.

SWAMPY INFORMED HER that she had missed too many unnecessary (they called them "non - compulsory") meetings—two at least!

For this heinous offense, the Court decided that Minerva should come in after dinner one night and stay in her room for the whole night.

BUT, MINERVA (MINNIE) pleaded, the reason she was in the kingdom was to see as much as she could see, and certainly she was sorry that she had missed two meetings but she had been too sick to come to one, and there were things for her to see that very night.

No matter, said the Dragon. You are here to learn how powerful we are.

Indeed, Minerva saw how powerful they were.

SHE TRIED TO TELL someone on the outside of this injustice. Well, said the person on the outside, we will have to get their side of the story too. And do you know what the other side did? The other side lied! They lied enough that the person on the outside could only decide that they were right, because she didn't know they lied.

And when the seeing girl said the decision wasn't fair because it was based on lies, Swampy said that was beside the point. And Swampy told the lies to the several - faced minor ruler, who told them to the all-powerful ruler, who said Well, if Minerva is that terrible, we must discipline her.

In the valley of the blind, the one-eyed man is king, but hte one-eyed man is king but the two eyed girl is a different party. -

Dr. Kasha Presents Lecture On Legislative Representation

By GEORGIANA BATEMAN

...eemed and competent scien... should be represented in ...ative bodies, and conse... assume more responsi... our complex and tech... society, Dr. Michael ... said Sunday night.

The head of the Institute of Molecular Biophysics and professor of chemistry suggested this idea as a means for overcoming obsolescence, in the third lecture of a series on "Crises in the Sixties," sponsored by Liberal Forum.

LECTURE RESCHEDULED

Dr. Paul Piccard's lecture on "The Crises of Public Policies For the Sixties," scheduled for Sunday has been postponed due to the College Bowl. Dr. Piccard has been rescheduled for May 6, at the Unitarian Chapel. There will be no lecture Sunday.

"We are obsolete and in danger of becoming more obsolete," Dr. Kasha emphasized. "Obviously we must do something about it."

For instance, we have an education system that was satisfactory decades ago. But in an age of great technical advances, this system needs changing.

In essence, Dr. Kasha thinks there is a need to have a sound basis in one specific area rather than general knowledge in many. The training of logical thought in one field provides a groundwork for understanding other subjects, he added.

Dr. Kasha chose several homilies to prove his point:

EXAMPLES

1. The recent accidental salt poisoning of babies through nurses' negligence in a New York hospital. Dr. Kasha believes nurses seem to be taught more bedside psychology than chemistry and biology.

2. The mixing of bleaching compounds, such as chlorox and ammonia. The chemist pointed out that the danger involved here is an elementary matter.

"Progress is catching up with us," Dr. Kasha said. "We're being exposed to tremendous hazards at an accelerated rate," he added.

He suggests that group decisions involving technology have a role at this point. And this is where the scientist's viewpoint comes into sharp focus.

The scientist is taught to study and absorb. He wants to solve a problem, works diligently and often unsuccessfully in the lab to solve it, and may suddenly understand the solution one morning while shaving.

"It's hard to tell when the subconscious meshes with the conscious," Dr. Kasha pointed out. But a solution to the problem doesn't end the investigation. The scientist re - examines his findings.

This re - examination distinguishes him from other workers in different walks of life. The soldier, for instance, is not supposed to ask "why" when given a command, he explained.

But the scientist asks all kinds of questions, says Dr. Kasha, and "is uniquely responsible for what he does" because of his training.

Dr. Kasha warns that the personal persuasion of only one man is hazardous to society. In the case of a scientist who is a national advisor on fallout, Dr. Kasha asked, "Are his ideas on minimizing hazards embarrassing reflections of his own personal relations with his job?"

What we should do is seek advice from more people, Dr. Kasha said. We must have more opinions, he added, so we can accept a judgment without a great deal of error.

'Too True...'

but no one has found a correct answer for them yet, he added.

UNDERSTANDING

Most of the characters in the play do not understand themselves or other people as the play begins. During the play they discover some of the truths about themselves and others and each undergoes some personality change in the course of the play, although no one at the end of the play has found a completely satisfactory answer. Shaw's point is that a completely satisfactory answer cannot be found.

In one line Shaw describes the characters in the play this way: "There is something fantastic about them, something unreal and perverse; something profoundly unsatisfactory. They are too absurd to be believed in; yet they are not fictions; the newspapers are full of them."

PET IDEAS

Shaw had a number of pet ideas. He was a vegetarian and he thought most of the ills of mankind could be attributed to eating meat.

In the first act of the play, the Patient is sick with the measles. She doesn't need a doctor if she could only eat right. She cures herself by becoming excited by an idea. She escapes from her mother, whom Shaw suggests is the cause of her illness, and runs away with a thief and an ex - hotel chambermaid.

Members of the cast are Linda Diz as the Monster, Pat McCoy as Mrs. Mopply, Rhett Bryson as the Doctor, Judy Harrison as the Patient, Sherry Arent as Susan, Jerry Walter as Aubrey, Bill Valle as Tallboys, David Brown as Meek, Charles Dutcher as Sgt. Fielding and Ken Richart as Elder.

Campus Chest Fund Recipient Is Explained To FSU Groups

By SANDRA DIXON
Flambeau Staff Writer

The Campus Chest Committee, the Cabinet, and other interested groups were visited by Miss Debby Jackson, World University Service traveler, last weekend, who explained and interpreted WUS, a recipient of Campus Chest funds.

World University Service is "an international service organization" supported by students and professors in forty - one countries. The basic budget is used to carry on projects set up to help universities of the world.

MUTUAL ASSISTANCE

It is a program of "mutual assistance and education concerned with providing material aid while building international understanding and cooperation." Needs vary from country to country including health service, housing supplies and scholarships. It is felt by the WUS that "in the United States university students' underdeveloped area is international concern and understanding." Thus WUS attempts to stimulate their interest.

Over five hundred colleges participate in WUS campaigns; almost 100 per cent of the state universities are included. WUS travelers visit these campuses explaining the charity, helping to set up drives on contributing in any manner to gain support from the campus and further educate donators.

Miss Jackson is a recent graduate of Pomona University where she majored in international relations. Between her junior and senior years she went to Russia as a participant in an exchange program. He home is in the state of Washington and she has traveled through much of the United States. She became interested in WUS while in college.

WUS TRAVELERS

Some WUS travelers, like Miss Jackson, are recent college graduates and some are international students or professors. Working out of the regional office in Atlanta she travels through ten Southern states. As a traveler she is a member of small carefully selected group.

"There is some difficulty in getting WUS before the public," she said, "because it is only campus supported." "Our overhead, which is about 16 per cent, is comparatively low compared with better - known charities whose overhead may run as high as 50 per cent," she added. WUS is not publicized off campus, as only students and faculty members make donations, she explained.

Miss Jackson said that the college campuses she had visited collect contributions in many ways. Some campuses have special WUS drives. She expressed interest in the manner in which FSU's drive will be held, saying that the use of soliciters at each residence would be most beneficial. These soliciters will explain the purpose of the charities to which the Campus Chest funds will be donated. "The donator will not be ignorant of where his money is going," she said.

While at FSU, Miss Jackson spoke to the Wesley Foundation, Kappa Alpha Theta and Gamma Phi Beta. Monday afternoon, she met with the Cabinet, the Campus Chest Committee and with Vice President Milton Carothers.

Sponsored internationally by the World Student Christian Federation, Pax Romana, World Union of Jewish Students, and nationally by the National Student Christian Federation, Newman Club Federation, B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation, United States National Student Association, the World University Service is non-sectarian and non - political, carrying out work without regard to race creed or nationality, and "must involve the total world university community," she concluded.

Piccard Is Selected As Honors Director

The appointment of Dr. Paul J. Piccard, associate professor of government, as director of Florida State University's Honors Program was announced today by President Gordon W. Blackwell.

The Honors Program selects outstanding students for a challenging course of study, providing them a maximum opportunity for thought-exchange with individual professors.

Dr. Piccard, who is 38, first joined the FSU faculty as a visiting professor in public administration in 1953. Prior to that he had served as a visiting lecturer in political science at the University of Alabama and as a teaching fellow at the University of Texas, where he received his Ph.D. degree in 1953.

A native of Switzerland, he has lived in this country since he was two years old. His father, Dr. Jean Piccard, a professor of engineering at University of Minnesota, made some of the early stratospheric balloon flights with a twin brother of Jean, Dr. Auguste Piccard, who died in Lausanne two weeks ago.

SERVED IN ARMY

Dr. Paul J. Piccard entered the Army after graduating from University High School in Minneapolis in 1941 and served as a combat infantryman in Germany and on occupation duty in Japan. He remained a reserve artillery officer until 1954.

He is the author of numerous publications on government. He served in the Honors Program for the Basic Studies Division, the direction of which he is now assuming. He will also be director of the Honors Program for juniors and seniors in the College of Arts and Sciences. In both he succeeds Dr. E. Laurence Chalmers, who has been appointed assistant dean of the faculties.

"I have an intense personal interest in the Honors Program in which we have made significant progress in recent years and which has benefited many students and the University community generally," said Dr. Blackwell in announcing the appointment. "I know you will serve the program with enthusiasm and energy and you may be assured of continuing administrative support," he told Dr. Piccard.

Currently Dr. Piccard is serving as coach of the G. E. College

A Remark By Nobel Prize Winning Scientist . . . . Dr. James Franck, second from left, is good for a laugh around the table before this panel did a tape in studios of WFSU-TV which will be aired at 1:30 p.m., today. Dr. Franck addressed the Southeastern Section of the American Physical Society last night. The others, all from Florida State University science faculties, are, l to r: Dr. Michael Kasha, director of the Institute for Molecular Biophysics; Dr. Georges M. Temmer, professor of physics and director of the tandem van de Graaff program; and Dr. Hans Gaffron, professor of biochemistry and plant physicology. The panel discussion was on the subject "The Trend of Modern Scencel."

Bailey Discusses Problems In New African States

No guarantee exists of a "peaceful resolution" of the problems of the newly emerging African states, according to Dr. Stephen Bailey, who is working with the establishment of an institute of administration in Kenya.

Dr. Bailey, dean of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs at Syracuse University, has just recently returned from a trip to Africa. He is working with the Agency for International Development on setting up an institune in Kenya to help with the "Africanization" of the governmental services in that state as it prepares to become an independent nation.

INSTITUTE EXPANSION

The program began last July and the volume of men being trained by the institute is increasing rapidly as the physical facilities are completed, he said. The program was initiated in an effort to try to prevent "a repeat of the Congo," he said.

The natives are being given instruction in administrative organization, comparative government and economic development. The program is being run in conjunction with the program in East African Studies at Syracuse, which is the first of its kind in the U. S.

Dr. Bailey said that the countries that seem to stand the best chance of peaceful change to native rule are Nigeria and Tanganyika.

Nigeria is fairly rich in natural resources and has a sizeable number of native leaders who were trained in Britain. The major problems may arise from cultural differences within the country, he said. However, the fact that "traditional British law is very firm in Nigeria" will act as a "stabilizing force," he added.

AFRICAN LEADERSHIP

Tanganyika, Dr. Bailey said, "has some very enlightened African leadership," a factor which may greatly help in the transition period. Also, the fact that there are no large cities in Tanganyika will make it "hard to mobilize" groups for action, he said.

The population of Tanganyika is greatly scattered and the people live on small farms rather than in villages as is typical of the rest of Africa, he said.

There are also not so many persons in this area who will lose power under the new government, he added. In some of the other states this factor has helped cause disruption when native chieftains as well as former white leaders lost their power under the new regime. The relationship between the native and white populations in Tanganyiki have also been "reasonable," he added.

CONSTITUTIONAL PROBLEM

One of the major problems in Kenya is somewhat similar to the problems of the small vs. the large states when the Constitution of the United States was being written, Dr. Bailey said. Kadu, an association of small tribes, wants a small decentralized government, while Kanu, composed of larger tribes, wants a strong centralized government.

The role of the U. S. as the new African states emerge should be one of technical and economic assistance, Dr. Bailey said. Assistance in the development of educational programs is particularly needed, he added.

Congressional Redistricting Is Topic Of Bailey's Talk

By JOAN ABBOTT
Flambeau News Editor

Congressional redistricting, a re-examination of existing rules and procedures and a study of problems of campaign finance and conflicts of interest are needed if Congress is to function most effectively in the present age, Dr. Stephen Bailey said Monday night.

The dean of the Maxwell Graduate School of Citizenship and Public Affairs was the speaker at the third in a series of eight lectures sponsored by the Florida State University Government Dept.

"Is Congress the Old Frontier?" was the subject of Dr. Bailey's lecture. Congress is the old frontier in the sense that it is steeped in tradition, there is a great deal of continuity in the membership of both houses and the leaders in Congress have generally held office over a long period of time, he explained.

"No matter what the chronological age of the President, he is always dealing with a legislative branch whose leaders have served with many Presidents," Dr Bailey said. "In this sense, Congress is inevitably the Old Frontier," he added.

MORE IMPORTANT ISSUE

However, he said, "The issue is not that Congress is the old frontier." "The issue is that Congress must free itself from those obsolescent myths and practices which keep it from performing effectively the great tasks which history now rests on its shoulders; to relate the particular to the general, to resolve conflict with the majority's interest especially in mind, to keep the bureaucracy and the executive accountable, and by protecting minority rights, to keep all of us free," he asserted.

" . . . the issue before us is not that Congress has failed to respond to overt needs in such fields as national defense. The issue really is that existing congressional organization, procedures, and patterns of representation have tended to foster an unwarranted division between national security policy on the one hand and policies designed to strengthen national freedom, prosperity, and welfare on the other," Dr. Bailey continued.

"Many congressional leaders seem unwilling to understand or — if they understand — to admit that domestic questions such as racial inequality, unemployment, urban slums, inadequate education, and a shocking waste in the use of natural resources, are intimately and inexorably related to the fact and quality of our national survival," he continued.

Dr. Bailey pointed out that "many legislators seem incapable of sensing the relationship between economic programs on the one hand and the on-going diplomatic and military policies of the United States on the other."

SUGGESTIONS

Action by the president in the area of "selection and support of congressional candidates with a broad view of the world," was one of the steps suggested by Dr. Bailey for improving congressional efficiency. A corollary suggestion was that the base of support for congressional campaigns be increased.

Congress itself should take the lead in making other changes that are necessary in order to increase efficiency.

In the area of reapportionment, the United States Supreme Court "broke a constitutional and political log-jam," when it decided Baker v. Carr last week, Dr. Bailey said. The decision that Federal District Courts have the "right to determine whether city voters are unconstitutionally discriminated against in the apportionment of legislative seats," also has implications for Congress, he said.

"More equitable representation within state legislatures as between rural and urban interests will in turn be reflected in the future drawing of congressional district lines," he explained. "Actually, I see no reason why the Supreme Court's judgment should not be applied at once to inequities among congressional districts themselves," he added.

It would be better if Congress took the lead in this area itself however, he said.

NEED CONSIDERATION

Among the items that Congress needs to consider in a "re-examination of existing rules and procedures" listed by Dr. Bailey are some of the unanimous consent rules, rules governing unlimited debate in the Senate, the seniority system, the committee and subcommittee system, congressional practices which impinge directly upon the internal procedures and operations of executive agencies," and the annual appropriations of executive agencies," and the annual appropriations process which limits long-range planning.

"The third main area of congressional introspection should deal with problems of campaign finance and with problems of conflict of interest," he stressed.

Congress not only needs to study the effects of campaign contributions by special interest groups, but also the "question of personal economic interests of individual legislators, and how the effect of these personal interests can be minimized in the formulation of public policy," he explained.

S.G. Officers

Newly elected Student Government officers will receive their certificates of election within one week after they have filed their expense statements.

Forms for the statements are available at the Main Desk in Longmire. Miss Nancie Sill, secretary of elections, urged that all winning candidates turn the expense statements in at the Main Desk in Longmire as soon as possible.

FSU Gears Up For Change To Year-Round Operation Plan

Florida State University is gearing up to change from the semester system to the new trimester plan of year - round operation next September, when a record enrollment crush is sure to push the student body well beyond the 10,000 mark.

Applications for admission by new students next September already number 4084, a 17 percent increase over the same period a year ago, according to Registrar Murray W. Kenna.

Freshmen entering FSU at that time will have an opportunity of completing their work toward a bachelor's degree in two and two-thirds years instead of the usual four, provided they utilize each trimester and attend classes almost constantly from September through mid - August.

Dean of Students R. R. Oglesby says it is his guess that only perhaps 20 percent of the regularly enrolled students will pursue such a rigorous course. Only the abler students, he thinks, will be able to hold to an accelerated schedule of this sort, and of those who are able, some doubtless will find it financially impossible An estimated half of the present student body pays part of college expenses by earnings during vacation, earnings while in school or savings.

The question most frequently asked by prospective students applying for admission, said Registrar Kenna, is whether attendance at all three trimesters is compulsory. The answer is, of course, that it is not, although the university will encourage three - trimester attendance.

Next most frequently asked, said Dr. Kenna, is how much credit a student can earn during a trimester. The answer is the same as he can earn now during the longer semester — typically 15 to 18 hours.

TWO TERMS

Another question by prospective students concerns the third trimester which has a special two-term schedule unlike the others. In explaining this, Dr. Kenna outlined the schedule for the first year of the trimester plan which will replace the present system of two semesters and a summer session:

First trimester: Sept. 5-8, registration; Sept. 10, classes begin: Dec. 15 - 21, examinations, followed by the Christmas vacation Dec. 22 - Jan. 2.

Second trimester: Jan. 3-5, registration; Jan. 7, classes begin: April 13 - 19, examinations; April 20, conferring of degrees, followed by the spring vacation, April 20 - 24.

Third trimester: April 25-27, registration; April 29, classes begin; June 14, first term classes end; June 15 - 19, full trimester recess; June 15 - 18, first term examinations: June 17, second term registration; June 20, classes begin; Aug. 8 - 10, examinations.

The two short terms will schedule concentrated courses, with class sessions of a three-hour course meeting daily six times a week. While these short terms are in progress, a full-term schedule with class meetings three times a week will be in progress Kenna said inquiring students have been told they can take courses in both the long and the short patterns provided there is no conflict.

Kenna said it is expected many students regularly enrolled during the first two trimesters probably will want to continue their studies at least through the first half of the third trimester Prospective teachers who get their degree in April will be encouraged to utilize the third trimester for graduate study which can be pursued before their teaching job starts in the fall.

Regularly employed school teachers, who will be unable to enroll for the first term of the third trimester, are expected to attend classes heavily during the second term, fulfilling graduate study and accreditation requirements.

Kenna said estimates are that Term 1 of Trimester III will have between 50 and 70 percent of the fall - winter enrollment. The second term is expected to have an estimated 4000 to 5000 students, more than the number now attending summer school.

COSTS ESTIMATED

One question frequently asked, said Kenna, is the cost of a trimester of study. The registration fee for a trimester, he said, will be the same as for the present semester, $113 for Florida residents. Housing also will be the same, $110 for a typical room, and the laundry charge (for women students only) will be the same as for the semester, $17

The university estimates that if a student buys his food on a pay - as - you - go basis, it will cost $210 for a trimester, compared with $234 for the two-week-longer semester. On the prepaid food plan in university cafeterias, the cost will be $162, compared with $183

The heavy file of applications has nothing to do with the trimester plan, said Kenna, but this expected bulge in enrollments is what led to a decision for year-round use of state universities so more students could be accommodated annually.

Kenna said applications from transfer students, many of them now completing work in junior colleges, are up 32.6 percent. Applications from prospective freshmen now number 3067, an increase of 16 percent. This already is more freshmen than can be accommodated at FSU, but since the university has a policy of selective admissions, applicants with good high school records are encouraged to apply.

If applications continue heavy, said the registrar, FSU can expect to enroll several hundred more students than the 9835 registered last September

A limiting factor will be the housing. Two new sorority houses and an arrangement for using 45 rooms in women's dormitories for three instead of two occupants will add 110 spaces for women, bringing the total to 3-145, according to Miss Edith McCollum, director of housing. There are 1740 spaces for men and 148 for graduate students, and Alumni Village is expected to be ready to accommodate 185 additional families of married students. It now has 288 units and there are 100 in Mabry Heights, another village for married students

PRIORITY GIVEN

In September for the first time, FSU will utilize a new regulation requiring that admission and housing priority be given abler students. Those making high scores on the Florida 12th grade test in addition to having good high school records will have priority.

The academic pressure is going to be heavy on students. They will attend classes which will be seven minutes longer than the 48 - minute classes now held And the class work which has occupied 16 weeks in the semester will be crowded into 14 weeks of the trimester.

This will mean an estimated 20 per cent increase in the amount of out-of-class work, and will mean that extracurricular activities which have been spread through the week will now be crowded into weekends

Those having to work part-time to help pay their way will have less time for such work. But it will be possible, if a student takes one of the trimesters off for a job, to have a longer earning time than the summer beretofore available.

Dr. James Carr, director of student financial aid, thinks there will be more demand for loans. The pinch here is that funds available to the university for such loans about half a million dollars are already overtaxed. Another $10,000 could have been loaned this year. Scholarship funds are even less plentiful — about $117,000 for 400 scholarships not counting 450 teaching scholarships and 30 nursing scholarships

Faculty will work 10 months instead of the usual nine, and will have an estimated 25 percent heavier load. Staff in the registrar's office, counseling and various student services will have increased duties without additional personnel

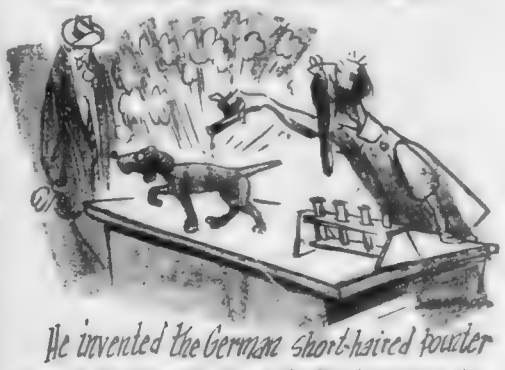
CRAM COURSE NO. 1:
MODERN EUROPEAN HISTORY

The school year draws rapidly to a close, and it's been a fun year, what with learning the twist, attending public executions, and walking our cheetahs—but are we ready for final exams? Some of us, I fear, are not. Therefore, in these few remaining columns, I propose to forego levity and instead offer a series of cram courses so that we may all be prepared at exam time.

We will start with Modern European History. Strictly defined, Modern European History covers the history of Europe from January 1, 1962, to the present. However, in order to provide employment for more teachers, the course has been moved back to the Age of Pericles, or the Renaissance, as it is jocularly called.



The single most important fact to remember about Modern European History is the emergence of Prussia. As we all know, Prussia was originally called Russia. The "P" was purchased from Persia in 1874 for $24 and Manhattan Island This later became known as Guy Fawkes Day.

Persia, without a "P" was, of course, called Ersia. This so embarrassed the natives that they changed the name of the country to Iran. This led to a rash of name changing. Mesopotamia became Iraq, Schleswig-Holstein became Saxe-Coburg, Bosnia-Herzegovina became Cleveland. There was even talk in stable old England about changing the name of the country, but it was forgotten when the little princes escaped from the Tower and set fire to Pitt, the Elder

Meanwhile Johannes Gutenberg was quietly inventing the printing press, for which we may all be grateful, believe you me! Why grateful? I'll tell you why grateful. Because without Gutenberg's invention, there would be no printing on cigarette packs. You would not know when you bought cigarettes whether you were getting good Marlboros or some horrid imitation. You could never be sure that you were buying a full-flavored smoke with a pure white filter, a cigarette that lets you settle back and get comfortable—in short, a Marlboro. It is a prospect to chill the bones and turn the blood to sorghum—so if you are ever in Frank-furt am Main, drop in and say thanks to Mr. Gutenberg. He is elderly—408 years old last birthday—but still quite active in his laboratory. In fact, only last Tuesday he invented the German short-haired pointer.

But I digress. Back to Modern European History. Let us turn now to that ever popular favorite, France

France, as we all know, is divided into several departments.

He invented the German short-haired pointer

There is the Police Department, the Fire Department, the Gas and Water Department, and the Bureau of Weights and Measures. There is also Madame Pompadour, but that need not concern us because it is a dirty story and is only taught to graduate students.

Finally, let us take up Italy—the newest European nation. Italy did not become a unified state until 1848 when Garibaldi, Cavour, and Victor Emmanuel threw three coins in the Trevi Fountain. This lovely gesture so enchanted all of Europe that William of Orange married Mary Stuart and caused a potato famine in Ireland. This, in turn, resulted in Pitt, the Younger.

All of this may seem a bit complicated, but be of good cheer. Everything was happily resolved at the Congress of Vienna where Metternich traded Parma to Talleyrand for Mad Ludwig of Bavaria. Then everybody waltzed till dawn and then, tired but content, they started the Thirty Years' War. © 1962 Max Shulman

Today you can buy Marlboros all over Europe, but you might have to pay a premium. In all 50 of these United States, however, you get that fine Marlboro flavor, that excellent Marlboro filter, in flip-top box or soft pack at regulation popular prices.

National Conference Lauds 'The Last Days Of Lincoln'

The Last Days of Lincoln, a play which was originally produced at Florida State University last October, has received the highest award of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, which announced a series of awards in the field of mass communications.

Mark Van Doren, Pulitzer prize-winning poet and critic and author of the play, his first, was on hand to receive the award at a nationally televised ceremony in New York City, March 27. FSU later will be given a Certificate of Recognition for its production of the play selected from among all off - broadway productions of 1961.

UNIVERSITY THEATRE

The play recounts the activities of Lincoln from a few weeks before the end of the Civil War until his death. It was produced by the Eddie Dowling University Theatre Foundation and FSU University Theatre with student and professional actors and with Jim Campbell playing the part of Lincoln.

Richard Fallon, associate director of the University Theatre at FSU and director of the production, went to New York for the presentation and Dowling also was there.

A gold medallion encased in a lucite block was presented with the National Brotherhood Media Award, one of 21 presented to various individuals and institutions in the mass media field "for outstanding contributions to good human relations."

'DEEPLY MOVING'

The Van Doren play was cited "for a deeply moving, dramatic portrait of our greatest president which probes the moral and ethical values that guided and sustained him in his final days of struggle."

The Broadway production receiving the same award was "A Man For All Seasons" by Robert Bolt. There also were awards for the outstanding books, photographs, television and radio programs, motion pictures, magazine work, cartoons, advertisements, and other productions.

Twenty - one received the National Brotherhood Media Award, highest recognition conferred in the media field. Two Special Brotherhood Awards "for outstanding achievements over a period of years" were presented along with 11 Certificate of Recognition.

Student Senate . . .

had not gotten a break - down of the athletics funds earlier was that he himself had received the break-down at the first of the week.

COMMITTEE OF WHOLE

The Senate, acting as a committee of the whole, temporarily dropped the athletic budget question. To alleviate the problem, Sen. Ron Jones suggested the budget be sent to committee for a week's study, while another senator suggested an extended session.

Byrd, saying that it would be all right with him if the Senate sent the budget to committee, reiterated the fact that the budget might be approved before Senate could act.

"The Senate will lose its system of checks and balances," Sen. Ginny Boyd said in a fast, staccato voice. She emphasized the fact that the Senate should have had the financial records accessible and that it should send the bill to committee.

Moments later, Sen. Johnny Smith, who is also the vice president elect, asked, "Just how much power do we have? Is this to no avail?"

Once again, Byrd repeated the answer.

"We've got to realize," Men's Vice President Carl Kuttler, "that in any university, this issue is touched with fire . . . because it involves the prestige of the school."

After the secretary of finance and the undersecretaries read the break-down, the athletic budget passed.

BREAK-DOWN

Intercollegiate athletics' budgetary break - down is as follows:

Administration	$76,000
Baseball	$10,100
Basketball	$15,500
Misc	$19,000

Longmire Administration, which received $23,800 last year, was allotted $35,000, which was $56 less than requested. The increased amount will be used to cover expenses caused by the trimester system.

Group Activities, a slush fund including 42 different sections, was allotted $12,000, which was $2,000 less than requested. The organization received $8,000 last year under the semester system.

The Artist Series, which received $16,196 last year, was alloted $18,616 — the amount requested. The spacing of performances and the shortness of the third timester were causes of the $2,000 increase, Byrd said.

The University Chaplain, who received $9,420 this year, was presented $6,370, which was nearly $3,000 less than the $9,100 requested.

Extra traffic due to the trimester system, an added bus service, and replacing a burned cottage were some expenses that caused the Senate to raise the Reservation's allotment from $19,500 a year to the requested $21,825.

The Florida State Circus, which was able to buy a tent this year because the Senate underwrote a bond for $5,000, received $12,000. The Cirus was alloted $7,000 last year.

The $45,000 requested by activities administration was approved. Almost all of the money will go for salaries and for a small merit raise, Byrd said. Last year, the organization was given $37,900.

A budgeting reserve of $27,795 was established in the budget. The amount is high, Byrd said, because the activities budget is based on anticipated revenue. Last year, there was no reserve, he added.

"What is to keep athletics from sucking up the reserve," Sen. Dobson sked.

Byrd said there were hopes of using the reserve's money in constructing a hospital building. He admitted there was a possibility athletics might use the money.

Notice

A shortage of tape for use in recording current programs has forced WFSU-FM to erase lectures, recitals and interviews recorded prior to September 1961.

Faculty members and staff interested in buying the master tapes of programs in which they have participated will be able to do so by notifying WFSU-FM in writing before April 15. A seven inch tape (one-half hour program) will cost $2 and a ten inch reel (one hour program) will cost $4.

Speaker's Bureau Gives Talks On FSU's Honors Program

By NANCY OLSON
Flambeau Staff Writer

The Florida State University Speaker's Bureau has begun speaking to alumni groups of outstanding high school seniors that are eligible for the Honors program at FSU.

"The main purpose of the Bureau," according to chairman, Lyman Fletcher, "is to present programs before high school students to tell them about FSU and the many various programs and activities here. In addition, the members have been speaking with the prospective honor students from the prominent high schools in the state.

Johnny Smith, in a recent trip to Sarasota, spoke before the honor students in connection with the Alumni Association. The Alumni said that "had the trip not been made, only three or four of the students whould have come to FSU, whereas about 75 per cent of the students (about 30 present) are now planning to enroll here," according to Fletcher.

MORE TRIPS

Fletcher commented that more of this type of work will be done next year in trips to Atlanta, Jacksonville, Sarasota, Pensacola and Orlando. The next scheduled meeting will be a coffee sponsored by the Alumni Group of Atlanta next Tuesday. Fletcher, along with Dr. Lawrence Chalmers, head of the FSU Honors Program, will present information about FSU and the Honors Program. Color slides of the campus and activities will also be shown.

Beginning next fall, under a recent bill passed by Senate, the Speaker's Bureau will be placed under the jurisdiction of Gold Key, instead of Student Government as is the present case. In the past, one of the main problems has been the lack of continuity because of the changing Student Government administrations.

COMMUNICATION

For this reason chairmen have been selected and they [illegible] policies in each administration to get effective co-operation [illegible] the high schools a definite [illegible] nel of communication can be [illegible] up by Gold Key more effectively in that it will have [illegible] ous control of communications [illegible] the high schools. Fletcher said Gold Key will be [illegible] selection of members for the Bureau, although they do not have to be Gold Key members. Gold Key representative Gene Brown said.

The present officers [illegible] man Fletcher, chairman, Jim Blue, vice chairman; Miles Williams, treasurer; and Beverly Archer, secretary.

The next meeting will be held April 12, at 4 p. m. in Longmire for all members and those interested in the program.

A Dissertation On A Wigwam

It is possible to be as ridiculous as some of the cheers are (and he is referring to some in use and not those, discarded. Take one in a Wigham, for instance.

Somebody, please take it.

This cheer is perfectly horrible until it gets to two words . . . Scalp Em. So let's go through the first parts of this cheer and see what's wrong with it.

Sittin' in a Wigwam."

Now at Florida State, we're Seminoles, and according to the Encyclopaedia Britannica "wigwam" is a word used by the Algonquin Indians of the Wyoming area.

Schizophrenic Seminole

So now we have a Wyoming Indian sitting in a wigwam, but pretending to be a Seminole. Pedhaps he's a spy or a schizoid.

"Beating on a tom-tom."

True Indians (which we profess we are) do not beat their tom-toms in wigwams. They beat them outside, usually in a ceremonial dance. There's absolutely no reason for a buck to beat his tom-tom . . . unless he were a jazz musician or practicing for the Big Horn Band and Early Evening Left Toe Society.

Actually, "tom-tom" is a Hindustan word, not used by Indians at all (unless our Indians were schizoids that went to Hindu High School.

"Who come?"

"We come."

That is stupid, because, if we're beating a tom-tom in a wigwam we're already here. Totally illogical.

"Everybody will come."

How can everybody come into a wigwam. That is, unless we're going to use a Chicago Wigwam for a convention hall like Honest Abe did in 1860. But since we're honest injuns and not dishonest paleface, we assume we're using a wigwam. In that case, how we going to get 22,000 football fans in a tent? We can't even get 22 football players plus four or five referees in a tent?

Scalp Em! (clap, clap) Scalp Em! (clap, clap) etc."

Tent Turmoil

Now really! Here you have 22,000 schizoids in a tent and all of a sudden you commence to scalp them. With 22,000 people in a tent you'd poke your eyeball out if you tried to wield a tomahawk (an Algonquin word).

Now if we'd left out all that junk before Scalp Em we would have a good cheer . . . a great cheer.

But if people still want all that hokey jazz before Scalp Em, I submit a cheer based on Scalp Em which has an Indian flavor. Our effort (modest, to be sure):

Standin' on a battlefield,

Feathr on a wagon wheel.

Who come?

(Insert the team's name, such as, "The University of Southern Mississippi's Southerners," also allow break for a swift gin and tonic)

Scalp Em! (clap, clap) Scalp Em! (clap, clap) etc."

Now that this is through, we can take our tongues out of our cheek and relay an invitation to the student body.

The invitation comes from the cheerleaders, who are cute as the teddy bears, as Men's Veep Carl Kuttler says (except the cheerleaders whom we haven't considered). The gals and guys tryouts will be held this month at the Opperman Amphitheatre and those interested should attend.

They're still practicing Sitting in a Wigwam though.)

Ed Hays, who will compete in the Texas Relays, clears 13-9¾ to set a school record. (Photo by Emmette Jackson)

Seminoles Enter Texas Relays

The Florida State track team will compete in the Texas Relays in Austin, Tex., today and tomorrow.

The coach, Mike Long, and seven team members will attend the meet. The FSU athletes include co-captains Craig Johnson and Quentin Till, Ed Hays, Bill Davis, Terry Long, and Jack Brocksmith

Johnson, a 20-year-old junior from Houston, Tex., won the 100 and tied for first - place in the 220 in the recent LSU-FSU encounter. Johnson ran the 100 in 9.7.

Undefeated in outdoor competition in the 440, Till has been slowed by a pulled muscle last week. He is expected to be up to par for the Texas Relays. The 21-year-old senior from Coral Gables also is a member of the mile relay squad

Hays, a 6-1 senior from Georgia, smashed a school record in the Tiger - Seminole meet by clearing 13-9¾ in the pole vault. Hays was involved in a six-way tie for second in the Florida Relays.

The Seminoles received a boost in the 880 run of their last dual meet by the winning efforts of Bill Davis, who finished the course in 1:56.2.

Long rewrote a school record in the Seminole-Tiger encounter when he ran the low hurdles in 22.6. Long, the son of the coach, also runs in the mile relay.

Brocksmith, a 150-pound senior from Atlanta, is a distance runner and grabbed a second place against Louisiana in the 880 run.

The cindermen are undefeated this season, having downed Miami, Furman, South Carolina, and LSU.

Seminole Netters Bop Three Foes

The Florida State tennis team, after adding three wins to its record this week, will face the powerhouses from the University of Miami tomorrow at 10 a.m. on the FSU courts.

The Seminoles' victims this week were Furman, Hope College of Michigan, and Amherst College

Paul Scarpa spearheaded the attack against Furman by dropping Steve Watson, 6-3, 75 Gordy Smith then defeated Furman's Jim Boykin, 6-0, 6-1. Ed Fasula edged Furman's Dewey Varn, 4-6, 6 - 4, 7 - 5. Jamie Jamieson grabbed the last FSU singles victory by defeating Stuart Skadden 6-2 2-6 6-2 Then Furman rallied with Charlie Connelly dropping Bob Berry, 6-2,6-1. Ed Christmas closed out Furman's singles wins by defeating Mike Dyer, 4-6, 6- 2, 6-3

In the doubles FSU captured laurels on the efforts of Scarpa Smith and Fasula - Jamieson Wally Dale and Dyer fell to the Palladins.

HOPE DOWNED

FSU swept all but two of the singles matches in the 6-3 meet with Hope College as Scarpa Smith, Fasula, and Jamieson kept the Michigan team from winning a set. Dale and Dyer fell to Hope

The teams of Scarpa - Smith and Fasula - Jamieson claimed doubles victories, but Berry and Dale fell to Hope.

AMHERST EDGED

The netters nipped Amherst, 5-4, as Scarpa, Smith and Fasula came out on top. But Jamieson, Berry, and Dale were defeated in the single.

Florida State grabbed 2-of-3 of the doubles matches. The first came as Scarpa and Smith dropped Norm Hess and Arlyn Lanting, 6 - 4, 6 - 3. The other victory came on the 6 - 4, 6 - 2 efforts of Fasula and Jamieson against Stan Bugereen and All Tigelaar. The loss came at the expense of Dale and Dyer.

Scrimmage Is Scheduled

The tribes of the Florida State Seminoles will wind up their first week of football practice with a game-like scrimmage tomorrow at the FSU practice field.

The drills are open to the public The Seminoles will also be practicing today.

During the week drills were held on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday

Relegating freshmen to third or fourth squads, Peterson has arbitrarily set up first, second, and third teams.

On the first and second days, the Seminoles primarily ran through fundamentals, and Coach Bill Peterson said he was pleased with the squads' performances.

After each day of drill, the squads have been exercising via isometric tension—pulling or pushing on bars to give the muscles strength. Peterson said the exercise was used at Louisiana State University, where he was formerly an offensive line coach.

For several weeks, the football players have been exercising with weights in the gymnasium to get back into shape An NCAA ruling forbids the team to use a football during such a period.

Practice will be climaxed by a Varsity-Alumni game in May.

P. E. Library Is Dedicated

Dedication of the Katherine W. Montgomery Memorial Library was held Tuesday in Montgomery Gymnasium. Dr. Kenneth D. Miller gave the dedicatory address.

Included in the library is the personal library of Dr. Katherine W. Montgomery, former head of the department of physical education for women. Her collection was formerly kept in the main office at Montgomery Gym. It contains an extensive collection of physical education books as well as works from other fields. Other books have also been donated to the library by students, faculty and staff.

The library is the project of the Upsilon Chapter of Phi Delta Pi, national honorary sorority for women in physical education. Work was begun last fall by the members in securing the room in which the library is now housed.

The new pledges of Phi Delta Pi were tapped last week and having been helping with the preparation of the opening library. The pledges that may be assisting in the library are Donna Ashling, Lynda Baxter, Sydney Betz, Phyllis Eichert, Dona Gaskins, Dianne Hall, Sandra Hansford, Emily Haymes, Betty Jo Henry, Karen Klisch, Nancy Kropp, Jackie McKenzie, Joann Perryman, Linda Philips, Marie Riley, Page Williams, and Joan Wilson.

Furman Scalps FSU, 7-2; Hawkins Keys 21-9 Win

After receiving a 7-2 spanking from the Furman Palladins, the Florida State baseball team bounced back Tuesday to shellack Furman, 21-9, in an eight inning marathon.

FURMAN WINS

The Palladins exploded in the second inning of the first game to score three runs for a 3-0 lead on five singles and a Seminole error.

In the third frame, the Seminoles tallied third baseman Kyle Spitzer and second baseman Bill Williamson. The second bagger led the Seminole attack with three hits out of five trips to the plate, while Spitzer was 1-for-4.

The Seminoles failed to score again in the contest.

The Palladins scored another in the fourth and fifth to drive FSU pitcher Ray McShane from the mound.

McShane suffered his first loss of the season against three victories after his 5⅓ mound stint. McShane surrendered nine hits, one run and one base. He struck out two batters.

Allen Thomas releieved McShane, to finish out the inning by throwing one pitch — a pitch that keyed a double play which retired the side.

When John Tucker came on in the seventh, Furman was leading 6-2. The Seminoles finished the game, allowing one run, four hits, and one base-on-balls. He fanned one batter.

SEMINOLES SURGE

Seminole twirler, Larry Hawkins, not only pitched seven innings of his second victory of the year, he also slapped a double and a home run.

Florida State tallied two runs in both the first and second innings to grab a 4 - 0 lead. When Furman did score, in the fifth inning with the score 6-0, it brought home four runs.

However, when the Seminoles came to bat in the fifth, they stretched their lead to eight points by scoring six runs. Florida State sent one across in the sixth and then exploded again in the seventh to score five runs, after Furman had gotten two seventh-inning runs. The score was at 18-6 when Hawkins left the game.

The Seminole pitcher had given up 13 of Furman's 16 hits In addition, Hawkins gave up three runs. He struck out one batter and walked none.

Thomas finished the eighth inning, giving up three hits in the 3½ - hour game. Thomas did not give up any runs or bases. He fanned one.

The Furman squad sent three pitchers to the mound, Bud Hasher receiving the loss. Hasher lasted five innings and gave up four earned runs. He walked eight and surrendered seven hits.

Outstanding Seminole hitters include Hawkins, shortstop Woody Woodward, Bob Wilcox, Dwight Smith, and Bob Madison.

Woodward, who has gotten a base hit in 11 consecutive games, rapped two singles out of five trips to the plate. Wilcox, a sophomore from Melbourne, knocked three straight hits, while Smith collected a double in one of his two trips to the plate. Madison went 1-for-2, hitting a double and scoring two runs.

Horseback Riding Course Is Added

The Physical Education department is considering adding a horseback riding course to its curriculum. The course will cost students $70 per trimester for three hours of riding a week.

Interested persons should signup in the lobby of Montgomery Gym or fill out a piece of paper with the following information: name, box number, have you ridden before, are you a beginner. The form, which is only an expression of interest and not a commitment, should be sent to the main office of Montgomery Gym.

Frosh Coach Switched To Varsity End

Charlie LaPradd, formerly the coach of the freshman football team, has been switched to assistant line coach. LaPradd will assist Head Mentor Bill Peterson by coaching the varsity end.

A new freshman coach has not been named yet.

LaPradd, who transferred from the Air Force to FSU five years ago, coached the freshman for three years and compiled an undefeated record.

The Baby Seminoles had a 2-0-1 record this year, the tie coming at the hands of the Mississippi Southern's B-team during the week the frosh helped the varsity tie Florida.

A former All - American tackle at the University of Florida in 1952, LaPradd opened his collegiate coaching career with a 4-0 record in 1959. The next year the fledglings had a perfect 5-0 mark.

The assistant coach came to Florida State University as a graduate assistant in 1956.

LaPradd, a native of St Augustine, has been working on his doctorate for the past few years.

Theatre Dance Gives 'Evening Of Dance'

By SANDRA DIXON
Flambeau Staff Writer

The Theatre Dance Group will present the eleventh annual performance of "An Evening of Dance," Tuesday and Wednesday nights at 8:15 in Westcott Auditorium.

The dances, created by the faculty directors and members of the Theatre Dance Group will be presented in two parts. Five dances will comprise the first part, and the second part will be the presentation of a dance drama of the opera Orpheus and Euridice accompanied by the University Symphony, conducted by Robert Sedore.

DANCE DRAMA

The Theatre Dance Group presented the ballet in the Opera Guild's presentation of Orpheus and Euridice last November. Miss Nellie - Bond Dickinson explained that the dance drama will be "a repeat of the ballet with short dances to carry the theme of the story."

The orginal lead singing parts in the opera will be taken by dancers with Barbara Gleason as Orpheus, Mary Ann Middleton as Euridice and Jodi Manni as Amor, the God of Love. Soloist dancer will be Robin Leeger.

Lighting changes, will indicate changes in scene while the action will be continuous.

Accompanying the dancers in the first part of the program will be Lester Bruch, musical director of the dance group, and guest pianist Lowell Roddenberry. The music for two dances, "Mobile" and "Undercurrents" was created by Bruch. Roddenberry will accompany dances with music by Ravel, Prokofiev, and Bach.

"Lyric Landscape," created by Miss Dickinson, premiered last year. She described the sense of the dance as that of "dynamic motions of growth — a sequence of seasons."

Student choreographers are Mignon Trice, a senior, and Miss Leeger, who is in her third year with the group. Mrs. Trice created the dance "Mobile," an abstract dance with a modern approach to art. Miss Leeger is the choreographer of "Time Held Me Green and Dying."

Miss Dickinson said that this presentation is a combination of words, music, and movement, extending the ideas of the poem, "Fern Hill," by Bylan Thomas. Dancers will be Denise Edwards, Annette Williams and Miss Holly Chapman, Asst. director of the dance group.

An abstract number, "Quarter", will be a mature presentation by four members who have been in the Dance group for some time. Miss Dickinson said. The dancers representing four melodies will present a visual image of the movement of themes as they are set against one another, she added.

Choreographed by Miss Dickinson, it is being presented for the third time. Dancers are Miss Leeger, Mrs. Trice, Lynn Raymond and Sandy Myrick.

UNDERCURRENTS

Miss Chapman is the choreographer of "Undercurrents" which is a dance with jazz qualities. Miss Leeger is soloist.

Other performers in "An Evening of Dance" will be Nancy Walker, Caroline Magee, Missy Wightman, Barbarar Robertson, Fairfax Smathers, Marsha Jones, Elva Mae Rozman, Lin Pollard, Chris Christman, Eda Stoltz and Dee Cummingham.

The Theatre Dance Group is a performing group of dancers who are chosen from try-outs each fall. The group has appeared this year in the ballet in Orpheus and Euridice, presented in November, and in two half-hour television shows. They will also perform with the University Symphony, May 11.

President of the group is Miss Myrick and vice president is Miss Leeger.

Students will be admitted to the performance by showing their I.D. cards, tickets for non-students are $.75. There will be no reserved seats, therefore ticket holders will be seated as they come. It is requested, out of consideration of others, that seats not be held for late arrivers.

Miss Dickinson said the "Evening of Dance" will be performed again Friday night, at Douglas Ga., under auspices of the Douglas Concert Association.

Dr. Housewright

Creative Individual Is Hope For Nation

By LANA MURRAY
Assistant News Editor

"The creative individual, be he musician or scientist, government official or businessman, is the hope of the nation, our link with posterity," Dr. Wiley L. Housewright declared last night.

Dr. Housewright, professor of music education, is this year's Most Distinguished Professor. He spoke last night on "Cultural Conflicts in American Life" in conjunction with Mortar Board's Last Lecture Series.

Worthwhile meaning can be obtained from music by the involvement of the individual "as a composer, as a performer or as a consumer," Dr. Housewright declared. "It is high time we accepted the principle that our cultural growth must match our economic growth," he said.

EMPHASIS ON SCIENCE

He noted that the history of this nation was rooted in commercial success, great wealth and power, but he asserted that many Americans sense a need for cultural development. He pointed out that youthful nationals of other countries study technology or science in the United States, but prefer to obtain cultural development in countries where art and music are held in more esteem.

In the past, he said, the good life has been considered one of financial security. Today, when financial security is obtained with time to spare for leisure activities, the good life may be redefined in terms of man's activities in these leisure hours, he declared.

He cited some of the conflicts of American life which should be examined and resolved individually, as to their role and meaning in cultural life.

The first conflict he mentioned was the old vs. the new. He pointed out the arts are concerned equally with history and with modern developments.

"For while today's science is unquestionably better than that of two centuries ago, today's music is not," he said. The important thing is that the individual relate what he knows of any art to his life, his times and his society, he asserted.

TWO-EDGED PROBLEM

One of the chief problems of professors, Dr. Housewright said, is how to keep minds open to learning and at the same time acknowledge that today's values and judgments are tentatively changing. However, the curiosity of man leads to continued experimentation and change, which should not be viewed as threats to well-being.

In discussing the conflict between regional and universal preferences, Dr. Housewright said that any piece of art must meet universal requirements and be judged against similar creations. He declared that regionalism is rapidly declining, but that individuals will not lose their identity in this decline if they "have something worthwhile to say and say it well."

'HIGHEST STANDARDS'

He pointed out that only in the twentieth century has the United States produced Nobel prize winners or world-famous composers. Eventual success, he said, is due not only to rigorous discipline, but also to "our striving for nothing less than the highest universal standards."

In contrasting simple and monumental tastes, Dr. Housewright declared that American standards were inherited European tastes and ideals. Unfortunately, he added, "we were not selective," and Americans have tended to value the spectacle over the substance, as witnessed by a series of showmen from P. T. Barnum to Cecil B. DeMille.

Finally, he noted, the conflicts between the practical and the aesthetic in American life have become well known abroad. Although many Americans suspect that a materialistic, pleasure - bent state is on the road to disaster, still they cling tenaciously to the ideal of the "hard-headed businessman," by whom this nation was founded.

Yet the choice today, declared Dr. Housewright, "is not between money and culture, between the man of action and the thinker, between the businessman and the artist. The complexity of our society demands that we make room for all of them."

NOT UNIQUE

These conflicts, Dr. Housewright declared, are not unique to America — they are present in every society, and they occasion a periodic re - examination of the cultural life of each nation. Cultural goals, he added, are easily stated, but slowly and difficultly accomplished.

The individual himself must not only approach the sensory stage of art enjoyment; he must also make a conscious study of the social forces and traditions behind the art forms. Culturally under - developed areas should be identified just as economically under - developed areas now are, and programs of aid should be proposed to improve their condition.

The presence — or absence — of arts and the degree to which they are developed is an index of the maturity of a society, Housewright asserted.

"Upon the values we have, the money we spend, the interests we pursue will we be judged by our neighbors and by the world," he declared.

NOMINATIONS

Candidates will be nominated by name only from the floor of the convention. Each candidate will be given two to three minutes to accept the nomination and to state his or her qualifications, purpose for running and plans for the office.

The informed source said that the party "will afford for all students at FSU the best opportunity possible to participate in selecting competent individuals for student body offices." He added that the convention is purposefully designed to be small to insure that the power in the convention can not be held by a select few who would use the power for their own benefit.

The purpose of the party as stated in its constitution is to provide through its organization a means of promoting more interest and participation in good Student Government on the FSU campus. And, to provide through its organization, an opportunity for qualified individuals to advance their candidacy for student body offices.

Any duly registered student at FSU intending to subscribe to these purposes is eligible for membership in the party.

Greenwood then listed the Student Party platform as follows:

FSU Is Defeated By Tufts In 2nd College Bowl Battle

The Florida State University College Bowl Team's hopes of duplicating last week's crushing victory over the University of the South were defeated Sunday by challenging scholars from Tufts University, Medford, Mass.

Rallying from a half - time handicap of 115 points, the FSU four attempted to overtake their opponents, and by the final bell had reduced the margin to 40 points, with Tufts scoring 195 points and FSU, 155.

The team returns with $500 which will be added to the $1,500 winnings from the previous contest. It has not been definitely decided at this time what will be done with the $2,000, but it is possible that it will be combined with contributions from backers of the team to establish a scholarship fund to attract outstanding students to FSU, said Dr. Laurence Chalmers, former director of the honors program.

One of the most interesting of these contributions arrived in the office of Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, FSU president, last week. An anonymous note, postmarked Buffalo, N.Y., read "Please apply to your Scholarship Fund." Attached to the note was a $100 bill.

Members of the team, Claire Kemper, Steve Whealton, Bonnie Freedman and Bob Houston, returned to Tallahassee yesterday afternoon, accompanied by their coach Dr. Paul Piccard and Dr. Alan Thomson. They returned to Tallahassee late yesterday after being delaped in Atlanta due to bad weather.

"We're very proud of the team's performance," Dr. Piccard said, "luck was against us in the last few seconds."

The FSU team lost all three practice rounds to Tufts.

The Tufts team will return to the G..E. College Bowl next week to defend their place against Manhattan College, New York City.

Asst. Attorney General Is Keynote Speaker At Tonight's Newly Organized Party Meet

By JIM SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

State Assistant Attorney General Sam Spector speaks tonight as convention keynoter for the newly organized University Party.

His speech on "The Two Party System in Student Government" kicks off the convention at 7:30 p.m. in The Women's Gym.

Kelly Reid acting as temporary chairman will conduct the conventions election of officers for chairman, vice chairman, corresponding secretary, recording secretary, treasurer, publicity director, campaign director and platform committee chairman.

The first order of the convention tonight will be to ratify the Constitution. Copies are available in the ground floor of Longmire. At 7 p. m. tonight the registration of delegates will begin. Fees are $.50 for all three nights while admission to the gallerys for each night is $.15.

The new party organizers stress that candidates will be nominated from the floor of the convention. They will then be given three minutes to speak and present their qualifications and goals to the delegations who will vote on the candidates the party will support for Student Government offices.

Ron Jones, one of the party organizers, said the main objective of the new party "is to promote more interest and participation in good Student Government on the FSU campus." He added that, "all students are invited to attend all concention meetings tonight, tomorrow and Thursday nights." "They are invited to participate in any meeting, delegate or not," he added.

The order of nominations for student body offices are Honor Court, Judiciary, Traffic Court, Class Senators and class officers. For Honor Court, two men and three women are nominated from each of the sophomore, junior and senior classes. For Traffic Court, two men and two women are nominated from both the sophomore and junior classes. Two men and two women are nominated from each of the sophomore, junior and senior class as for senate and for class officers candidates are nominated for president, vice president, secretary - treasurer and social chairman.

President - elect of the Student Body, Ken van Assenderp, had this to say on the formation of the new party. "I think that the efforts of students to form a second party is opportune and commendable." "A two party system is definitely a need at this university," he said, adding "I heartily encourage both parties, whose members ever stand for the betterment of the University, to regard with optimism this new development."

The Constitution of the University Party submits a three fold purpose to its candidates. One, to provide through its organization a means of promoting interest and participation in sound Student Government on the FSU campus. Two, to provide through its organization an opportunity for qualified, competent students to advance their candidacy for student body offices. And three, to provide for the students through its organization an educational insight and experience into the functions and operation of government on the FSU campus.

Physicists Hold Annual Meeting

About 400 physicists from a dozen Southern states attended the 28th annual meeting of the Southeastern Section of the American Physical Society held at Florida State University April 5 through 7. The Southeastern Region of Sigma Pi Sigma, national physics honor society, held its annual conference Friday and Saturday in conjunction with the APS meeting.

Dr. Hans Plendl, chairman of the local committee on arrangements, reported that nuclear physics, in which FSU is a leader among southern institutions, was one of the principal subjects of the conference.

About 20 invited papers and 110 shorter contributed technical papers were read at the meetings held principally in Longmire. Contributed papers were also presented at the Sigma Pi Sigma sessions.

Another conference held simultaneously was the second conference on instrumentations sponsored by the Oak Ridge Institute of Nuclear Studies.

Thursday night a public address was given by Nobel prize winning physicist James Franck in Westcott auditorium. The 79-year-old German - born scientist now a professor emeritus of Physical chemistry at the University of Chicago, gave a talk entitled "Reminiscences of an Ancient Physicist."

Franck and a co-worker in Germany won the Nobel Prize for the Franck - Hertz experiment, which was performed in 1913. This experiment was one of those confirming in an experimental way Max Planck's earlier hypothesis of the quantum nature of energy.

Dr. Franck also appeared with three FSU scientists on a panel discussion over WFSU-TV Friday. Dr. Georges Temmer, professor of physics and director of the tandem Van de Graaff program, was moderator. Others on the panel were Dr. Michael Kasha, professor of chemistry and director of the Institute of Molecular Biophysics, and Dr. Hans Gaffron, professor of biochemistry and plant physiology.

Friday evening Dr. E. T. Booth of Columbia University and Laser Inc spoke at the banquet held in the Suwannee Room. Dr. Gordon W. Blackwell, FSU president, welcomed the guests.

Cheerleaders Hold Tryouts

Cheerleading tryouts will be Friday at 4 p.m. at the Music Bldg. Amphitheatre.

Five places are open on the squad. Judges for the tryouts are Dr. Coyle Moore, Coach Bill Peterson, Gayle Motes, Ed Feely, Ken van Assenderp, Tom Waites and Bill Harnage, head cheerleader.

Practice for tryouts, which started yesterday, will continue through today and Wednesday at 3:30 p.m. on Landis Green.

It is not necessary to have attended yesterday's practice in order to tryout, Harnage said.

All students are welcome to the tryouts, Harnage added. He said that student interest is important since those chosen will not only be leading the student body in cheers, but also will represent it in the many away games next semester.

Rep. Horne Is To Speak On Fla. Reapportionment

Reapportionment in Florida will be discussed by Mallory E. Horne, Speaker of the House Designate, in a talk sonsored by the Young Democrats Club, Thursday at 7:30 p. m. in the Library Lecture Hall.

Rep. Horne has been touring the state speaking on the subject of reapportionment, which has met with increased interest since the recent Supreme Court decision, which may effect Florida's reapportionment. Rep. Horne's talk is expected to be of interest to the FSU campus.

Rep. Horne has served in the Florida House of Representatives since 1955. He was elected Speaker Designate at the beginning of the 1961 session. While serving in the House, he has been a member and chairman of various major committees. He served as Chairman of the Rules Committee in the 1961 session.

...Requiem Mass was written ... memory of Alesandro Man... a literary figure in Italy ... friend. The composition was first performed in 1847 at St. Mark's in Milan.

Verdi's setting of the Mass is strikingly operatic in character. He is said to have considered opera as the highest form of all musical art. He applied the operatic techniques to the interpretation of his deep religious feeling in the Mass. His dramatic power and imagination is expecially marked in the Dies Irae.

The Choral Union, established in 1946, has on Palm Sunday traditionally presented a major choral work on a religious theme. The Verdi Requiem will be presented in its entirety, Gunter said.

Officers of the Choral Union are: Jack McCord, president; James Jaygood, vice - president; and Patricia Pipvin, secretary. Russell Wilson, graduate student, is accompanist and assistant director.

GIUSEPPI VERDI'S REQUIEM MASS

Flambeau Editorials

FLAMBEAU editorials do not necessarily reflect the opinion of the student body as a whole or the administration of Florida State University. Editorials represent only the opinions of staff members and the initials of the writer following the editorial.

We Need Two Parties

The formation of the new University Party offers FSU the opportunity to have its student politics function in something akin to a two party system. We think this is good. Therefore, we are not in favor of seeing the old Student Party go down the drain.

IF STUDENT PARTY is allowed to fold in the wake of the University Party bandwagon, then the whoops and hollers of rejoicing will quickly enough turn into identical claims and counterclaims of the type that plagued Student Party and helped to bring it to its present kneeling position.

Student Party and University Party both owe the students at this university the privilege of being allowed to vote on the best candidates available for any position, regardless of party affiliations. If either party does less than nominate and back the best candidates, it does not deserve support in any capacity. The new University Party would be wise to keep in mind the idea that it will be all too easy to fall into the entangling fraternal alliances that brought such hearty condemnation to the Student Party. If it flubs its opportunity, it can expect to go the way of any other novelty. It can count on maybe three or four years of power on campus if it allows itself to be maneuvered and mishandled. Student Party may be better off to have come out the little end of the horn in the last elections.

MAYBE WHAT STUDENT Party needed was pruning back. It may blossom out again in the near future without the favoritism and deadwood fringes that were never good for anything but a bloc vote at the polls. It may find that it has transferred many of its shortcomings to its new rival with the flight of the mutineers.

The 'Music Majors' Show Off

The successful, enjoyable exposition of talent that makes up the occasional Sunday afternoon Coffee Concerts in Longmire Lounge are plenty of proof that FSU currently houses a number of highly talented and hard working people in the field of music.

SUNDAY'S CONCERT was well received with good reason. It featured original works by six student musicians and the instrumental know-how of ten men and women. A packed lounge evidenced approval of the scores and the performances; we think the Coffee Concerts well deserve the praise they have reaped so far, and the praise we expect them to receive in the future.

THE SCHOOL OF MUSIC at Florida State University goes on and on with quality as its minimum effort. It has withstood storms of an infinite variety. It manages somehow to keep an excellent complement of faculty staffers and dedicated, serious students in spite of the spite often shown it.

THE COFFEE CONCERTS are just one way to show off the School of Music to the student body. We think that that purpose is being well served. Certainly the concerts provide an opportunity for the student body to see for themselves just what the "music majors" are doing. And we might add, the "music majors" have been showing what they can do. As a department, they are offering more than probably any other to enrich this campus locally and nationally.

Part II—Conclusion

Contentions

By HANK JORDAN

It would seem that when state governments impede the effective functioning of democracy it is the proper duty of the federal government to correct the situation. However, it is questionable whether the Supreme Court is the proper branch of government to do this, and as recently as 1946 the Court ruled that it was not. Equitable representation, the Court declared, "is of a peculiarly political nature and therefore not meet for judicial determination." This conclusion was based on Article 1, Section 4 of the United States Constitution which, the Court decided, "gave Congress exclusive authority to secure fair representation, equitable representation (being) but one of the many constitutional injunctions that are not enforceable by the courts."

THE SUPREME COURT decision of last week, on the other hand, was based on a clause of the Fourteenth Amendment which states that no State shall "deny to any person within its jurisdiction the equal protection of the laws." The Court reversed its 1946 decision on this basis and declared that federal courts could rule on cases in which legislative apportionment denied citizens the equal protection of the laws.

From a strictly legal point of view, the question to be decided is which of these decisions [illegible] in accordance with the Constitution. The answer to this is, in my opinion, that both decisions can be justified on the constitutional basis, but that the original decision conforms more closely to the letter of the Constitution than does the ruling of last week. Article 1, Section 4 is relatively explicit on the subject of elections, while the Fourteenth Amendment is not. Thus in order to rule on the question of legislative apportionment the Court was had to lean over backwards to justify itself on a constitutional, if not moral, basis. Furthermore, it could be argued that even though the 1946 and 1962 decisions can both be justified on a constutional basis, one of them must still be unconstitutional for the simple reason that the decisions reached in the two cases were exactly the opposite. Hence the least justifiable decision must be the one which is unconstitutional, and the least justifiable decision, in my opinion, was the one handed down last week.

However, if the Court's recent ruling is not fully in accord with the letter of the Constitution it is certainly in conformity with its spirit. Thus, while the position of those state legislators who claim the Court's decision is unconstitutional may be accurate, it is also somewhat revolting in that these individuals are using the highest law of the land to negate, rather than promote, democracy.

THE DUTY TO REMEDY the situation has thus fallen to the Supreme Court, the only body other than the state legislatures and Congress which possesses the requisite authority. That this authority was exercised with reluctance is apparent from the Court's 1946 decision, and from the fact that the problem of inequitable apportionment has existed for a very long time (Iowa has not reapportioned since 1911, Oklahoma since 1907, Alabama since 1901, Delaware since 1897, and Vermont since 1793).

It is now to be hoped that the state legislatures will redistrict themselves with as little additional federal pressure, and stretching of the Constitution, as possible. Majority rule will thus be restored, but the separation of powers has been dealt another body blow. The failure of the states to exercise their responsibilities has resulted in the loss of an additional "states right," and the blame for this loss, as well as for the hyperbolization of the Constitution) rests squarely on the heads of those state legislatures who have blocked reapportionment. Although these gentlemen will rant and rave (with some justification) about states rights and judicial legislation, it may at least be hoped that their constituents will remember on election day where all the evils of the reapportionment issue were originally spawned. Perhaps the great lesson to be learned from this Supreme Court decision will be remembered too: "ye who violate the law beware, for either ye destroy the law, or by the law ye shall be destroyed."

Ulmer Observes Peace Corps Life

Al Ulmer, former Florida State University football star, leader in the Newman Club, and member of Omicron Delta Kappa, is now serving in Africa as a member of the Peace Corps.

Ulmer, one of the most outstanding and popular men ever to graduate from FSU, made interesting observations of his area in a letter sent to ODK members in newsletter form. These observations are worth repeating.

"I arrived in Lagos, the Federal capital, from New York on the 29th of December," Ulmer relates. "After spending New Year's Eve in Lagos, I traveled to Kaduna and then on to Enugu, the Eastern capital, by coal-burning train. The trip took three days and the sights were tremendously different from mile to mile. First tropical rain forest, then tundra, and then semi-desert.

"I stayed in Enugu for three days, ate my first Nigerian food (Jolof rice and fish), saw the sights, and then moved to my present location, a small town called Emene.

"I'm teaching at a small school under the auspices of the Holy Ghost Fathers, a missionary group from Ireland. Emene is what the people call bush here in Nigeria, but it is really quite nice. I have to go only 20 miles to get to Enugu, which is a town of 75,000.

"I am teaching an interesting subject load that includes Physics, Chemistry, Biology, Math, and English Literature.

"I like my students very much and after five weeks of teaching them I can best sum it up by saying we both have a lot to learn. I think one of the real drawbacks for them is of coruse to have to learn everything in a foreign language. The native tongue here is Ibo, which is a tri-tonal language that is very difficult to learn, I find.

"Being a minority group member is very different, to say the least, but I became acclimated quite soon and there is little or no discrimination here. I have found myself not even noticing the colors of skin in a person but looking mainly at the smile on his or her face instead.

"A little about where I am living. I live in a small four-room house on the school grounds, with kerosene lights, outside john and shower and running water . . . run in from the river one mile away, that is. My school boys carry it for me every third or fourth day. I boil all my water and filter it, and sleep under a net and as yet have been feeling great."

Ulmer's letter reflects the genuine interest in the countries and people he is serving that is characteristic of Peace Corps members. He is straightforward about the underdeveloped conditions of the African countries, without complaining.

But that's the kind of fellow Ulmer is. As a varsity guard at FSU, he played vigorous, hard-hitting football despite his small size. He's never been a quitter, regardless of the obstacles. It is encouraging to know that individuals of Ulmer's calibre are representing our country abroad.

Opium Dream

19th Century Country Club Second Only To Miami U.

19th Century Country (Flambo).
By CARL ROSENBUSH JR.

It has been a long time since the Flambeau has printed a 19th century poem. This is a shame since the 19th was a vintage century for poetry. Thus it occurred to me to write one. At first, I thought of writing it in German so that I could say to those who complained that they didn't understand it, "Let them eat cake." But then, what could I say to the person who spoke ten languages but nought German? And what to those who spoke German and could spot my many mistakes? So here, in English, is my contribution to the Flambeau's contributions to the 19th century thought:

THE STUDENT UNION OF FSU,
Or
An Opium Dream of Student Senate

At FSU did the Student Senate
A stately Student Union legislate
Where Call, the blocked-off parkway ran
By library soon useless to man
Down to a neon-lit estate.
So five tall buildings of bright concrete
With pools and bowling alleys replete:
And shops bright with tawdry
frills
Were raised around restaurants and grills.

But oh!that bright romantic place was slanted
To recreation and pleasure lover
A happy place, as tepid and enchanted
As e er beneath the blinking lights, vaunted
Movies and other enjoyments
hover.
And o'er this place, with ceaseless turmoil seething
As if the earth in fast thick pants were breathing,
A deep-black cloud was passed
Above that happy room.
And from this cloud the students heard
Professorial voices prophesying doom!

The shadow on the Dome of Pleasure
Floated menacingly with poor grades.
Where was heard the mingled measures
Of studies left undone for spades.
A jill at a juke-box
In a nightmare once I saw:
It was a sorority maid,
And loudly rock-and-roll she played
Singing of Mount Parnassus

So with that music loud and long
Let us exalt the Student Union
And with that let us sell
The Music Building and Science Complex as well
To pay the mortage and in pleasure dwell.
Above all the laboratory and library snub,
Fire the faculty who in us
knowledge would imbue:
And then become, behind Miami
U.,
The nation's second best
country club.

After Hours

Marching As To Battle

By KAREN THORNTON

Thursday night and all's well as can be expected on a week night — or so one would think. Since I was tired, I decided to get to bed early around 11:30.

OFF TO DREAMLAND I went easily enough, not to be disturbed until eight the next morning, I fondly thought. Suddenly, a loud, horrid ringing sound filled the room. I had trouble convincing myself that it was eight in the morning all ready. I leaned over and turned off my alarm which did not stop the ringing sound.

"Oh migosh! It's that dagburned fire drill" was the only alternative thought I could manage. I quickly got out of bed and stumbled over the pile of laundry in the middle of the floor in trying to reach my light switch.

"NOW," I THOUGHT, "the first thing I have to find is my glasses. Where in the world are they? How do they expect me to find my glasses if I don't have them on" Finally I found them half under and half in a jar of cold cream. Next I had to put on a more stable pair of shoes.

It takes too long to lace tennis shoes up, so I grabbed my loafers even though the brown didn't go too well with my pajamas.

AFTER GRASPING MY raincoat from under a pile of clothes on a chair, I dashed from the room only to turn and dash back because one must have a towel in case the smoke should get in one's little brown eyes and make them water.

There was silence as we marched as to battle down the dorm stairs. Out into the cold night air we marched unevenly, now and then some poor weary coed staggering with sleep. The air began to wake us, and bits of colorful language began to be exchanged.

THEN A BELL RANG telling us that it was safe for us to reenter the building. Just a "false" alarm. We knew that all the time — we just stumbled out of our warm beds for the hell of it.

Back inside again, I thought "Aha, at least I can sleep now. It's only one - thirty in the morning which at least is not as bad as Dorman's fire drill at four a. m. a couple of nights ago. Ours may have been a little stupid, but theirs was downright ridiculous."

I KNEW I'D HAVE no trouble going back to sleep. I didn't — only maybe two hours later. But of course I shouldn't mind for one must give up a few selfish things like sleep. Really one must, if one is to appreciate the greater happenings of life.

The Campus Chest Expresses Its Position

TO THE EDITOR:

Concerning the article in the April 3 Flambeau entitled "Charity No longer Compulsory at FSU," we, the Campus Chest Committee, would like to express our position. We, as everyone else on this campus, were still under the assumption that the 50 per cent was still required from all fund - raising projects, due to the loss of all records concerning Senate's action on this bill.

What most students do not realize is the fact that, because of Campus Chest, there are no drives by charitable organizations conducted on campus. This job is incorporated under the Committee. Under the present set - up, the student is asked by Campus Chest to give just once a year. This is the purpose of the Campus Chest Drive which is being conducted on campus, April 11-16. When the drive was first proposed, it was for the main purpose of eliminating the 50 percent donation given by fund - raising organizations.

Realizing the student feelings toward the previously required donation, the Committee is pleased with the actions taken by the Attorney General and Dean Oglesby. We would be happy to return funds donated to the Campus Chest, through fund raising drives since December, 1960 but we request that organizations just consider them a donation. Thank you for your cooperation.

THE CAMPUS CHEST COMMITTEE

A 'Farse'

TO THE EDITOR:

I'm sure that there is no doubt in anyone's mind (and especially not in Sanchez's) that Robert Sanchez is a fairly good written expressionist. His "works" are even moving occasionally.

Nevertheless, I feel that my fellow students must be made to understand that Sanchez is actually making them look and act like jackasses. His Syllabus is not really even an expression of his feelings, but just a poorly disguised (possibly not so poorly considering the interest it has aroused) means of creating emotional concern over the Flambeau. To become sincerely excited by a gimick (sic) such as this, is an insult to one's intelligence and maturity.

I'm not against interest in the Flambeau or its articles, but am opposed to the Flambeau's depending on a farse (sic) of readers. If the Flambeau needs this form of trash to keep it going, it's in pretty bad shape.

MICHAEL C. HREBEC

Exception

TO THE EDITOR:

I wish to take exception to certain aspects and implications of Allan Dermott's column in the April 6 Flambeau.

Without intent to be picayune, let me suggest that faith does not belong on a list of qualities since it is, according to my dictionary, a state, not a quality. Also Character, as used, is "the aggregate of distinctive qualities belonging to an individual or a race" (Webster's New Collegiate) and an aggregate of qualities does not belong on a list of singular qualities without further clarification.

Granting the qualityness of the other qualities mentioned, I suggest that they do not make for greatness but for power. Since Christ, in his temptations, made such a point of refusing power, I suggest that American power is unrelated to greatness in a Christian sense. I assume from the reference to Christ in the article that the "spirit of greatness" is defined with reference to Christian principles. If not, I hope that Mr. Dermott will clarify Mr. Prochnow's remarks for us.

RICHARD JENSEN

Based On Conjecture?

TO THE EDITOR:

In regard to your recent editorial defending the continuation of football at FSU, we concur that a well-rounded athletic program is most beneficial to a university. It is our contention, however, that many of your statements are rather prejudiced and based largely on conjecture. Enumerated below are several quotations from your column with which we take issue:

1.) " . . . at some universities such as Alabama, Auburn, Ole Miss, and Mississippi Southern, this may be true (that football harms education), but not so at FSU, and not likely to be so." Why, if football can be detrimental to education at the aforementioned schools, can it not be so at FSU?

2.) "The players on our team, several having high averages, have to meet the academic requirements to stay in FSU." This implies that FSU gridders must maintain higher scholastic standings than their counterparts at SEC schools. Upon what [illegible] do you base such a contention?

3.) "Why did Paul Dietzel give LSU" Old traditional [illegible] more green stuff than [illegible] LSU." Almost any football fan is aware that LSU offered to match Army's salary [illegible] would remain. Also, LSU just happens to be larger than Army [illegible] several fold (11,928 to 2,529).

In general, Mr. Denson's implications regarding the SE football powers seem to reflect a rather childish sour grapes attitude common to many elements at FSU. That we consider FSU to be a good academic institution is evidenced by our presence here. We are, however, unappreciative of the careless comments made by Mr. Denson which malign not only our own Alma Mater (University of Alabama), but numerous other conference schools as well.

Too True To Be Good

By JIM SMITH

George Bernard Shaw's Too True To Be Good opens tomorrow evening. If dress rehearsal is any indication of the coming polished performance, the laughter will probably still be ringing through the halls in the morning when classes convene.

DR. DORLAG AND HIS troup have assembled what appears to be a fine evening in dramatic entertainment. The cast is quick and lively, portraying Shaw in the first act in the old time exaggerated theatre. The sets, too, show a unique originality in the showmans art.

The play concerns a dutiful young daughter who is overtly protected by her mother. The mother, Mrs. Motley, played by Pat McCoy, must pry her fingers into every facet of her household. She drives doctors to distraction as she has them constantly hovering over her daughter. She never takes their advice but forces them in submitting to her own diagnoses of the case. When the doctor arrives to administer aid to the daughters' German Measles, Mrs. Motley insists that she knows what is wrong with her daughter. She has become sick due to the tonic the doctor had previously given her. She now insists that she should have an innoculation but the doctor retorts with "but she's already infected."

UNDAUNTED, MRS. MOTLEY insists for a new prescription. The doctor, in order to get away from the latest diagnosis of Mrs. Motley, reluctantly gives her another useless prescription. Mrs. Motley is overjoyed.

The daughter, played by Judy Harrison, through all this constant motherly attention has become vain, spoiled and conceited. When the new night nurse, played by Sheri Arent, arrives to be a constant vigil over her German Measles, the nurse delights in giving her patient a hard time.

THE NURSE HAS BEEN plotting with one of her many boy friends to steal Miss Motley's jewels. (She has many boy friends because she says that "a love affair should always be a honeymoon. And the only way to do it is to keep changing the man").

Aubry Burgh or "Popsie", played by Gerry Walter, enters the bedroom with the screaming Miss Motley wise to their plot. (Popsie, as the son of an Atheist, has become an ordained preacher.) The Nurse or "Sweetie", and Popsie are now scattered on the floor due to the fine wrestling of the heretofore sick patient. The two thieves decide to try another method to obtain the jewels. They convince Miss Motley that she has been shackled by the overt protection of her mother for too many years and she should throw off the chains that bind her. Popsie's eloquent speech convinces her she must sell her jewels for a life of fun and frolic giving Popsie and Sweetie half the loot. Convinced, Miss Motley triumphantly declares, "a womans' future is not with her mother."

THE FIRST ACT CONCLUDES as Popsie and Sweetie supposedly kidnap the emancipated Miss Motley taking, of course, the jewels. What follows are two acts of more fun and frolic as Popsie and Sweetie drag Miss Motley about the Continent gloriously spending her money. Unfortunately, Mama has caught on, and the law is after their heels.

Come watch the fun. The cast and crew have put in many late hours and it appears that their time has not gone for loss.

Chiefs Shine In Practice

By HOWARD DENSON
Flambeau Sports Editor

Saturday's game - like scrimmage was any indication of the [illegible] approaching football season then Coach Bebll Peterson should have for a good team.

The Chiefs looked good, the quarterbacks were outstanding, and the passing was acceptable.

It was one of the best practices [illegible] A common remark from the lips of the spectators and several assistant coaches was naturedly shouted encouragement and advice to the players — their voices belying the emotions of the practice.

The Chiefs sparkled in their first outing as a pass from senior quarterback Eddie Feely to halfback Keith Kinderman netted the tribe a touchdown on its first offensive play.

The play from Feely to Kinderman to goal traversed 65 yards.

Overall the passing in the drill was promising, but the mentor did not allow the Indians to pass too much. Peterson has said passing is the team's weakest point . . . furthermore the field was still wet from Friday and Saturday's heavy rains.

At end Peterson has two experienced players, and has to rely on freshmen for any depth. One freshman, Freddy Bilethnikoff of Pennsylvania, sparkled in one play — catching about a 35 yard pass.

All three quarterbacks looked as good as predicted. Those included Feely, Charlie Calhoun, and Ed Pritchett.

Other Seminoles in the Chief's backfield are halfback Kinderman, fullback Ken Russom, and sophomore Jim Loftin, who showed tremendous speed in stepping off the yardage.

The linesmen were alternately brick walls and bulldozers, several spectators winching at their clashes.

The offensive line includes ends John McConnaughhay, tackles Tom Slicker and Jim Sims, guards gene McDowell and Chuck Robinson, center Bruce Darsey.

The Chiefs' center was the only casualty of the day.

The 5-11 center from Largo dislocated his shoulder in the scrimmage.

The Seminoles continues their spring sessions yesterday. Further drills are slated today, Thursday and Saturday.

A visit from Sonny Jergenson highlighted Monday's drill. The Philadelphia Eagles quarterback, who passed for 3,700 yards last year to capture the NFL record, will help coach the Seminoles for about three days.

Jergenson, who also tied the touch down passes record (32), injured his shoulder in the playoff game of the NFL championship, and tried his wing for the first time Monday.

Fullback Gene Roberts was absent from Saturday's scrimmage, because reportedly he left for Georgia with a 19-year-old coed to get married. Roberts, who rushed 253 yards last year for a 3.7 average on 69 carries, was intending to join the Army.

There were indications, however, Monday afternoon that the gridder might return to Florida State, but he apparently will not return to the team. When Roberts failed to show up for Wednesday's practice, the coach said he was off the team.

Ellanor Daniell, above, scored third on the uneven parallel bars in the women's division of the USA Invitational Gymnastic meet to help give FSU a second place. Ellanor scored 16 total points, while teammate Frances Gregory tallied 11 points. Ellanor took a third place, two fourths, and a sixth, while Frances had two thirds, a fourth, and a fifth.

Gymnasts Top Meet

Florida State once again dominated the USA Invitational Gymnastic meet Saturday in Statesboro, Ga., by swamping a field of 10 teams. Coach Joe Gastic and his six - man team walked away with the first place team trophy and 11 of the 27 medals given for the first three places in each event.

The Seminoles tallied 82 points, their biggest threat coming from Georgia Southern 30 1-3. Dade County Junior College gathered 21 points, Louisiana State scored 14, the St. Petersburg Police Athletic Club had 12, David Lipscomb College (Tenn.) had 13, Louisiana's Wagner Gym Club scored 7, and The Citadel, the Atlanta YMCA and the University of Florida all scored 3.

Rick Miller was the high point man for FSU and was named the Best All-Around. He placed eruise, and first on the uneven parallel bars. He finished second on the parallel bars, tumbling, place tied on the long horse.

Joe (Sammy Seminole) Greene racked up 17½ points with a first on the trampoline, third in tumbling and free ex., and a fourth place tied on the long hourse.

Mitch Weinstock gathered 11½ points by placing second in the rope climb, tieing for third on the parallel bars, and placing fourth in the All-Around.

Milton McGowen finished second on the trampoline, with Bob Christians grabbing fourth.

Racquettes Drop Florida 10 To 7

The Racquettes earned their most coveted win of the season Saturday when they defeated the University of Florida's women's tennis team 10 - 7, in Gainesville. Gail DeLozier, playing the first set 4 - 6, then stormed back to win the next two 6-1, 6-3. Carol Riley outbattled Elaine Rubin, 7-5 and 6-4, to nail down the number two win.

The number one doubles which was slated between DeLozier and Quinn for FSU and Kathy and Rubin for UF was cancelled because of rain. The remaining doubles were played in a drizzle and four had to be decided by pr sets. Match scores were:

SINGLES—Judith Quinn (FSU) fell to Bonnie Vandroff (UF), 2-6, 2-6; Judi Dunn (FSU) fell to Janet DeMayo (UF), 4-6, 7-5, 1-6; Norma Moore (FSU) fell to Dorothy Levinson (UF), 1-6, 2-6; Chris Padgett (FSU) defeated Susie Buckle (UF), 6-1, 6-4; Ann Lake (FSU) defeated Donna Wiley (UF), 6-2, 6-4; Marilyn Rush (FSU) fell to Taiko Kamagai (UF), 2-6, 4-6; Judy Lowe (FSU) fell to Becky Schwarting (UF), 4-7, 1-6; Maxine Boudy (FSU) defeated Bonnie Fairbanks (UF), 6-3, 6-4; Kit Logan (FSU) defeated Jerry Bittner (UF), 6-2, 8-6; Priscilla McKnight (FSU) defeated Barbara Dardick (UF), 6-4, 6-1. FSU Should Ask A&M To Play

In one month, FSU will be the host to the Florida Invtational track meet, in which many of the best schools in the state and the South will compete.

As usual, however, one school will be excluded from the meet . . . one of the best-known universities in the state. The school, Florida A&M, will not compete because of an unwritten school policy that Seminoles will not compete against Negroes . . . that is, in Tallahassee.

And this policy keeps Florida State from grabbing the title of the best track team in the state.

Goodness knows, A&M is a strong team. For instance, Robert Hayes has tied Frank Budd's 100 dash record at 9.2. But A&M is not so strong that a state university can't beat it.

Miami, for example, defeated the Rattlers by combining its freshman and varsity teams—thus getting more depth. And we've stomped Miami . . . but the state title is still not official.

The argument that we shouldn't compete against Negro athletes doesn't hold water when you consider the fact that Wisconsin and Ohio State had Negroes on their teams when we played them this year in basketball. No one at FSU complained.

In the world of track, we are being held back by this policy—which we suspect is carried out to please the people down town.

But when we hold the Florida Invitational next month, we could have a chance to prove ourselves best in track and field in Florida inviting the athletes from A&M. We might fail, perhaps be defeated, perhaps draw, but we would destroy the agonizing doubts in our minds.

This idea, of inviting A&M to state meets, is not new. Miami obviously has already thought of it, and Mike Gora of the University of Florida's "Alligator" reveals that UF has also toyed with the thought. Gora says:

True, Mississippi hasn't let the Mississippi State basketball team go to the NCAA; however, the UF hasn't fared much better.

The Florida Relays . . . was a well run meet with sprinkling of top athletes.

Teams from all over the eastern half of the United States participated in the event.

A school just 150 miles from Gainesville was not invited. This uninvited school has the best track team in the state and one of the best in the country. The uninvited school placed well in the NCAA finals last year in several events. Florida's didn't qualify anyone for partipication.

A few weeks ago a trackman at this school tied the world's 100 yard dash record of 9.2 seconds.

Track events are between human beings. The color doesn't rub off.

Why wasn't Florida A&M invited to the Florida Relays? Apart from making the meet a more interesting athletic event UF again passed up another opportunity to be a leader among the Southern states. It would have been too bad if Mississippi State had been forced to drop out of the event. They didn't come close to winning anything.

Why must good athletes, or good anything else, be sacrificed for the radical Jim Crow southerner? . . .

Track has been called the fairest of sports. Track has been the basis of the Olympic games, whose main purpose is to promote world fellowship . . .

It doesn't rub off.

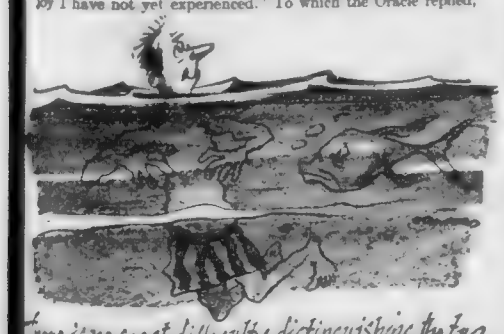
CRAM COURSE NO. 2: BIOLOGY

The grisly shadow of final exams looms over us, so today instead of more sports-and-pastimes chat, you will hear stern facts—quick crash courses to help you through the ordeal ahead.

Last week I gave you a rapid survey of Modern European History. Now let us turn to Biology.

Biology is divided into several phyla, or classes. First is the protozoa, or one-celled animal. All life stems from the one-celled animal. Over a series of millions of years, life slowly evolved until today we have animals with as many as 12 cells. Some larger mammals even have 14 to 16 cells, but you are now getting into the



The second class of animals is the periphera—a shadowy category that borders often on the vegetative. Take, for example, the sponge. The sponge is debatably an animal. The washcloth, on the other hand, is decidedly not.

Next we come to the arthropoda, or insects. Most people, of course, find insects fairly repulsive—and yet, if one will but look, there is exquisite beauty in the lowly weevil. Who does not remember the lovely insect poems of William Cullen Bryant, such enduring lines as Lovely Lady with the Trembling Trundlebug, Fly Gently, Sweet Aphid, and Gnats May Matter Taught Me. Mr. Sigafoos has been inactive since the invention of DDT.

The next category is the molusca - lobsters, shrimp, and the like. Lobsters are generally found under rocky projections on the ocean bottom. Shrimp are generally found in a circle around a small bowl containing cocktail sauce. Marlboro Cigarettes are generally found at any tobacco counter or vending machine.

What have Marlboro Cigarettes got to do with biology? Well, actually, not very much. It must be remembered, however, that the makers of Marlboro pay me for writing this column, and they are inclined to get surly if I fail to mention their product.

Mind you, I enjoy singing the praises of Marlboro—and so will you once you try that flavorful tobacco, that fine filter which lets the flavor come through undiminished. It is a great pleasure to smoke Marlboros and a great pleasure to write about them, but sometimes, I must confess, I find it a bit difficult to work the commercial into the column. Some years ago, for example, I did a piece about Alexander the Great, and, believe you me, it took a heap of stretching to drop in a plug for Marlboro. The way I finally managed it was to have Alexander go to the Oracle at Delphi and say, "Oracle, I have conquered the world and tasted all its pleasures, but somehow I am not content. I know that somewhere there must be a joy I have not yet experienced." To which the Oracle replied,

There is no great difficulty distinguishing the two

"Yes, Alexander, there is such a joy, but, alas, the time is not yet. I refer to Marlboro Cigarettes which will not be invented for another 2500 years." Whereupon Alexander fell into a sulk from which he never recovered. . . Well sir, there is no question I sold a lot of cigarettes with this ingenious commercial, but the gang down at the American Academy of Arts and Letters gave me a mighty good razzing, you may be sure.

But I digress. Back to biology, and the most advanced phylum of all—the chordata, or vertebrates. There are two kinds of vertebrates—those whose backbones run horizontally and those whose backbones run vertically. Generally, there is no great difficulty in distinguishing the two varieties. A fish, for instance, has a horizontal backbone and a man has a vertical backbone. Occasionally, however, you run into a problem like a fish who swims upright and a man who spends most of his time in the sack. How, in such a case, do you tell one from another? Science struggled with this sticky question for centuries, but finally Sigafoos of M.I.T. came up with a brilliantly simple answer. Offer the creature a Marlboro. If it is a fish, it will refuse. If it is Homo sapiens, it will accept. In fact, the more patient, the quicker the acceptance.

Counseling Aid Available At FSU Guidance Center

By GAYLE MOTES
Flambeau Staff Writer

"Any student who needs counseling should feel free to come and talk to us because we are concerned and readily available to all who need help," said Dr. G. Harold Massey, head of Florida State University's Guidance Center.

Dr. A. C. Smith one of the three full-time counselors at the center explained that the counseling center offers guidance in three major areas — academic, vocational and personal counseling.

ACADEMIC COUNSELING

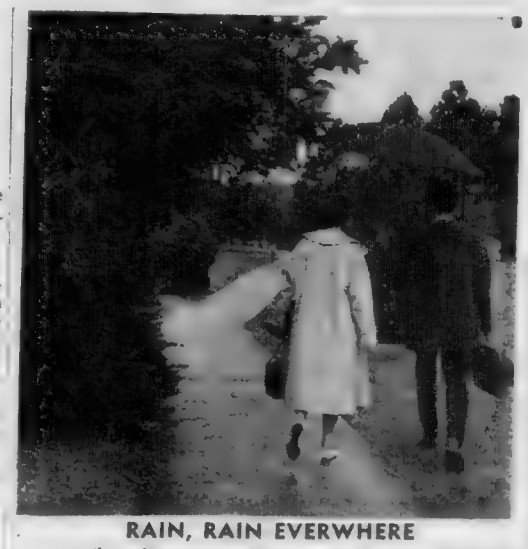
In reference to academic counseling Dr. Smith explained that through the cooperation of the FSU Testing Service mental ability, achievement and aptitude tests are given free of charge to all students. Dr. Smith added that more than 50 per cent of the Freshman Class will "change plans while in college, but he feels this is wise." "Career plans should be subject to reevaluation," he commented.

Dr. Massey then stated that since over one-third of all students enter college with no specific goals in mind this gives them the opportunity to become acquainted with new fields of challenge, such as biophysics, which they weren't exposed to in high school.

"So many students however wait until mid May of their sophomore year before they come into the Center without any idea of what they would like to major in. If these students would come to the Center by the beginning of their second year in college we would have more time to devote to them and we could give them more tests to determine where their talents lay," he explained.

VOCATIONAL COUNSELING

In the field of vocational counseling the Center also offers a good series of tests such as the California Occupational Test. Dr. Massey said that the results of vocational tests given to FSU students have shown a great deal of diversity in the range of occupational interests of students at this university.



"Although tests are a fairly good measure of interest and aptitude, we don't utilize test scores in isolation," explained Dr. Smith. "These tests to a certain degree are not conerned with creativity and therefore they are somewhat limiting," he added.

The Center has a library which has current information explaining the fine points of vocational opportunities in numerous fields which is open for all students to utilize, he said.

PERSONAL COUNSELING

The Center is also concerned with any personal problems which confront FSU students. Dr. Massey explained that social and dating problems were common concerns in this area. "Those who need more extensive help are referred to a more appropriate agency," he stated.

In addition to the counseling services the Center trains interns in guidance and counseling, orients the foreign students program and works with the Florida secondary school system. The Center also assigns academic advisors.

Street Dance Is Set Thursday For Campus Chest Fund Drive

A street dance Thursday night in front of Westcott will highlight the beginning of the Campus Chest Fund Drive which starts tomorrow and lasts through Monday.

As a special attraction of the street dance which starts at 7 p. m., a short show beginning at 8:30 will feature eight bathing suit - clad coeds, including Miss Tallahassee, diving for donated coins in the fountain. "The Gents," a newly formed band on campus, will play for the street dance from 7 to 9 p. m.

This year the Campus Chest Committee is asking students to contribute through one drive rather than several student entertainments.

The campus - wide goal is $1,600. Each residence has a separate goal determined according to the number of those living there. During the fund - raising, containers will be placed in residences to receive donations. Door-to - door solicitations will be made in some instances.

SOLICITORS

Each residence has a solicitor who will explain the purpose of Campus Chest and collect contributions. In dorms many people are helping the solicitors because of the large number of residents. Containers will also be placed at Longmire, the Student Center and campus cafeterias.

Two Party Conventions Meet To Select Candidates

Spector Keynotes Three Day Convention Of Univ. Party; Candidates Are Chosen

By JIM SMITH
Flambeau Staff Writer

Sam Spector, assistant state attorney general, delivered the keynote speech at the new University Party convention Tuesday night, upholding the two party system on University campuses.

Through a party machine," he said, "candidates can be elected and an effort made on a united basis to present candidates to voters."

He noted that campus politics is a good training ground for politics. "It is the best the country has to offer," he said. These men will present the new "get up and go" generation, he added.

TOMORROW's LEADERS

He further pointed out that the Florida Legislature is filled with people who have much experience behind them in campus politics. "Yesterday's campus leaders," he said, "are today's active leaders, and today's campus leaders are tomorrow's legislative leaders," he stressed.

A competitive spirit is needed to get the best possible candidates," he concluded.

Lyman Fletcher, chairman of the Party said last night that "The purpose I have worked for has been culminated in the two party system. Interest is high in campus affairs and from all indications seems that we have a strong two party system for all interested."

Other officers of the party include Vice Chairman Luther Krantz, Corresponding Secretary Jo Lackey, Recording Secretary Jean Sauer, Treasurer Archie Gibbs, Campaign Director Ron Hall, Platform Chairman Steve Voorhees, Publicity Director Jo Bingley and Acting Parliamentarian Jim Johnston.

Red, white, and blue bunting was mingled with huge colorful campaign posters, decorated convention hall. At the conclusion of the second evening Party Parliamentarian Johnston commented that "the University Party convention started with a bang and proceeded with greater force. The Party exceeded all my expectations."

PLATFORM

The party platform committee consisted of Chairman Van Voorhees, Bart Brown, Clarke Wylie and Nancy Paluzzi, submitted a positive ten point platform last night proposing;

A dedication to building excellence in all endeavors, academic, cultural and political.

Promotion of greater participation in all Student Government affairs by the student body.

Extension of Student Government responsibility in the areas of Judicial, Executive and Legislative powers.

4. The serious appraisal of existing and proposed women's rules and regulations in recognition of greater student maturity.

5. That later evening hours for study be established in the a. Library, b. classroom Bldgs., c. New student union lounges, d. dormitories and e. Longmire.

6. That graduate students be given eligibility for elective Student Government Offices.

7. The establishment of a committee for the continued study of trimester operations and problems of Student Government and academic schedules.

8. The closer co-operation with the administration and faculty; ideally in the form of a continuing liason committee of Student Government.

9. That the Student Government advocate inter - collegiate competition in all areas.

10. That all members of the student body be permitted to actively participate in the University's intramural program.

TWO PARTIES

As he viewed both conventions, vice president - elect of the student body Johnny Smith commented that he was "very pleased to see that both parties are functioning so efficiently. I only hope that student participation and spirit will continue and that the dual party system can be soundly established at FSU."

A party organizer and treasurer, Gibbs, had this to say of the evenings activities: "The convention was good the first night and it was better the second. I expected and wanted more candidates running. I would like to see more fights on the floor of the convention so we can have the best possible candidates."

CANDIDATES'VIEWS

Several candidates were asked why they choose the University Party. Linda Hoffman candidate for Sophomore Class Judiciary answered that "we need a two party system at FSU. I am not against the Student Party in any way, but I do want to see this party successful. I am sure we will get better and more qualified candidates by a competitive two party system."

Jennifer Newcomer, candidate for Sophomore class senator added that the "University has needed this type of electioneering for a long time and I am sure that in the long run the party is going to grow and go places."

Curry Bassett said that "I had planned coming to FSU last fall because I recognized what I believed to be one of the finest Student Governments existing. However, something was missing which I considered essential to efficient government. I strongly felt the need for a two party system with adequate representation in both parties."

Nominated for :Senior Men's Honor Court: Galt Allee and Jaime Jaimison, accepted by acclamation. Senior Women's Honor Court: Nancy Sindon and Martha Bishop, accepted by acclamation. Junior Men's Honor Court: Nominated were Craig Haskell Joe Rodgers, Kelly Reid, David Crumb and Frank Ryll. Candidates are Joe Rodgers and Kelly Reid. Junior Women's Honor Court: Van Miller, Bobbi

Student Party Candidates Are Chosen As Gibson Keynotes Three Day Meet

By COOKIE NEUBAUER
Flambeau Staff Writer

Dr. Juanita Gibson, assistant to Florida Secretary of State Tom Adams, was the keynote speaker at the first session of the 20th convention of Student Party. The topic of her speech was "The Role of Political Parties on the College Campus."

Dr. Gibson feels that too few young people in America are interested in politics. The reason for this, she believes is that the word "politics" has come to have a bad connotation and it is up to the youth to change this.

FUNCTION

Political parties on campus serve the same function as local state, and parties, but are in a different setting. Dr. Gibson stated that the duty and function of the convention is to define the issue, select candidates, persuade the people, and if successful at the polls, to control the direction of government. If defeated, it is the duty of the party to become the opposition and critical party.

Dr. Gibson said the question is raised, "Why participate in partisan politics?" Her answer to this is that a free and healthy system of representative government i sunobtainable without honest and intelligent men and women, good leadership, and organized parties. Within a party there will be a multitude of opinions. A group opinion must be formed out of the best of these. A party makes possible a representation of the general interest, she said.

NEW POLICIES

Student Party chairman, Bill Greenwood made a few announcements to the convention concerning work parties, party whips, the new amendment process and unit voting.

The system of party whips is also new to the Student Pary. There is a party whip on the floor of every dorm who will be campaigning for the party. Greenwood also stated that the constitution can be amended only by a vote of the convention and that unit voting is forbidden.

Student Party Executive Council, and party members Jim Blue, Jackie Mathis Ross McVoy and Doug Shank composed the platform committee. The seven point platform is as follows:

1. The construction of the Student Union Bldg.

2. The construction of the new swimming pool.

3. Increased recreational facilities for all students.

4. Recommendations that preference be given to students in seating at all athletic and artist series events.

5. Continued revisions of outdated women's rules.

6. Continued application of Honor Code.

7. Continued placement of judicial power in the hands of students.

Senate Asks For Changes In P. E. Grading System

By GAYLE MOTES
Flambeau Staff Writer

Student Senate Wednesday voted to send a letter to Faculty Senate requesting they take action to place the physical education requirement on a credit, non - credit basis.

After much debate, the resolution introduced by Men's Vice President Carl Kuttler, and Sen. Jeanie Ferlita was passed by a vote of 26-11.

Sen. Ginny Boyd stated that it was necessary for Student Senate to send the letter so that Faculty Senate could examine the student body's opinion.

Kuttler explained that taking away the grade in this case would not be taking away the initiative because," in this case the grade would be changed from A,B,C,D or F to satisfactory or unsatisfactory, and students would be required to come to class and satisfactorily complete the course to get credit toward graduation."

'TOO MUCH'

Sen. Patsy Burke stated that she felt the University had given Senate many concessions this year, and that by this resolution Senate was "pushing too much."

Sen. Gerry Dobson, in favor of sending the letter, then argued that Senate shouldn't fear Faculty Senate because "we are obligated to express our feelings to the administration and faculty."

He then added that, "we must be idealistic. To have incentive it isn't always neccessary to have a grade. With requiring that a student to come to class to get credit in a course, there would still be a whip to keep things in line."

Sen. Arnie Gibbs felt that it is essential to receive a grade in a course to give it any meaning. He explained that even if a student takes a course that he is experienced in, he still will benefit from taking the course.

Sen. Nancy Sidon then stated that she had discussed the topic with many faculty members last year who were not in the Physical Education Dept. and that they feel an investigation of this change would be worthwhile.

Sen. Jody Smith asserted that the physical property a person possesses is as much a part of him as his mental capacity and that this property should not be treated as an inferior one.

'TAKES AWAY FUN'

Sen. Tom Crook stated that PE is given for a specific reason, "to mold an attitude, and when one is graded this takes away the fun and the favorable opinion one has of physical education."

Sen. Pat Doomar said that students are mature enough to apply themselves and gain something from a course that they are not graded in. She cited audits as an example.

A bill introduced by Sen. Ron Jones was passed, which will amend the Constitution to place power to regulate class offices in the Statutes. Sen. Jones felt that it is essential to have class organizations provided for in the statutes, so that if a change is necessary it can be incorporated without a referendum vote.

Jack Ascher, senior class president and a guest at Senate, strongly opposed the passage of the bill. "I do not feel it is time for a change, nor do I think anyone has the experience to say there is a need for a change." He added "This bill would provide a loophole whereby it is possible for Senate to remove class presidents. Why take away the title from the recognized class leader?" he questioned.

MUST BE PLIABLE

Sen. Doomar explained that Senate had no radical plans. She felt that it "is necessary to make the Constitution pliable, so that changes can be made without the long wait for constitutional amendments at a later date."

Sen. Burke explained that an overall change would not take place for five years and that it was not essential to rush matters.

Another bill introduced by Sen. Jones to amend the statutes was defeated.

Senate also passed a resolution to send a letter to Alpha Phi Omega service fraternity to commend them for their hard work and service to FSU.
